

"THE one Idea which History exhibits as evermore developing itself into greater distinctness is the Idea Humanty—the noble endeavour to throw down all the barners erected between men by prejudice and one-si views; and by setting aside the distinctions of Religion, Country, and Color, to treat the whole Human is as one brotherhood, having one great object—the free development of our spiritual nature."—Humsoldy's Coss

Pro Ti	rs OF THE WERK—Pa writiment of the Week 4 he Industrial Congress 4 he May Meetings 4 he National School Movement 4 ontinental News 4 unneries in England 5 Constitutional Crisis in New York 4 dage Lynch in California 4 he Siave Trade and the Braxilis 4 rsonal News and Gossip 4	30	War in the West : Keusington	Retired from Business
P		435 "La Terre est aux Lords, 441		COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS— Markets, Gazettes, &c

VOL. II.-No. 59.

WI.

and R G H

more ghtier drawn le in ound, of a coht-

HE

LD

SATURDAY, MAY 10, 1851.

PRICE 6d.

Dems of the Week.

ALTHOUGH "the Opening" was an affair of last week, the Exposition is still the grand subject of talk; the public is visiting it in huge relays, last week at the guinea rate, this week at the five shilling; and we observe no abatement in the interest; quite the reverse. The universal feeling is, that the reality exceeds the anticipation; and erry class agrees in that, manifestly because, while the general effect is beautiful and grand, every one finds in his own vocation many objects for substantial and useful scrutiny.

tantial and useful scrutiny.

The rising topic is the question, whether or not Queen Victoria will dispense the prizes; and hope inclines to the affirmative. The success of the opening ceremony contributes to that hope. The royal hand would add value to the prize in the estimation of most among the competitors, and the ministration in such a service would be a very graceful indication of the surviving uses by which Royalty might vindicate its utility in the face of the growing democracy. We see that a contemporary writer, of strong popular sympathies, declares that the Exposition is "a failure." But he is mistaken; and the first view of the magnificent spectacle would be sufficient to correct his nificent spectacle would be sufficient to correct his n. It is no failure, but a most instructive, visible, tangible report upon what people are doing in the nations; and the universal concurrence to make it as full and beautiful as possible, shows the feeling with which it is regarded. Our first thought on surveying the rich expanse was one of gratitude that no miscalled "popular" violence had gratitude that no miscalled "popular" violence had laid its hand on anything so noble; our next, that as soon as the working classes had been able to survey it, every thought of destruction, of doubt, of dialike, would pass away, for they would see in that magnificent work the artisan, the artist, and the capitalist all combine in a real fellowship, and Parliament has shown a little more animation, and in a small way Lord John Russell has obtained a sort of victory over the Protectionists. The ins and outs of this little contest are not very obvious and outs of this little contest are not very obvious to the uninitiated, though they are simple enough. It will be remembered that last Friday Mr. Hume proposed to limit the duration of the income tax to one year, with a view to a Committee of Inquiry; persevering in spite of his friends, aided by the Protectionists, he obtained a victory of 14 over Ministers. It was not expected that Lord John woeld make a Ministerial crisis out of this defeat; but what then would he do? He gave in. Even but what then would he do? He gave in. Even Liberals hope something from the inquiry, and the party is comparatively reconsolidated. The concession, however, took the Protectionists entirely by surprise, and they were not prepared with any counter movement. Mr. Disraeli tried to give the cue by insisting that Lord John had so totally shifted his position that all the financial measures became virtually new measures, and all the ques-tions reopened. In short, Mr. Disraeli was clearing the ground from the mistakes of the session, the move was too refined for his party, and they could not fall in with it. After a scene of some confusion, the House seems to have submitted to Lord John's condition, that if continued only for one year the income tax should not be altered; a reserve, however, being kept open for some Protectionist suggestion in favour of the tenant farmer.

[Town Edition.]

The other incidents of the week are not remarkable. No interest strong enough to outlive the evening was created by Lord John Russell's modicum retrenchment of official salaries; by Mr. Berkeley's vain and crude attempt to equalize the Poor rate throughout the country, fixing a maximum of one and sixpence in the pound, any excess to be paid out of the consolidated fund; by Lord Naas' temporary victory towards obtaining com-Naas' temporary victory towards obtaining some relief from the Excise losses of the home spirit-dealer; or by Mr. Cayley's vain movement to repeal the malt tax. Mr. Ellice has obtained his bill for inquiry into the Aylesbury election abuses, and Mr. Locke King's, to establish an audit of railway accounts under control of the shareholder, proceeds forwards.

ceeds favourably.

Out of doors, in the political world, the chief incident has been the meeting of the Public School Association, which was very successful. It cannot fail to give a marked impulse to the movement. Mr. Cobden made an admirable speech, specially interesting to us, since it elevated him above the mere economists, whom he criticised pretty freely mere economists, whom he criticised pretty freely and sharply.

Two cases in law possess some public interest. The prosecution of Charles Dickens's Household Narrative as unstamped news, has at length been brought to an issue by Government, and it only remains for the Court of Exchequer to give judgment. Should the judgment be favourable to the Crown, of course this prosecution will prove to be only one of a series which must expose the restrictive effect of the Stamp tax. Should the judgment be adverse to the Crown, the tax is gone, unless Government asks additional powers from Parliament; an attempt as unlikely to be made as it is to succeed.

ful. The "incident" of the week is the double charge brought by Emile de Girardin against the two African generals, Changarnier and Cavaignac. Changarnier is charged with making a proposition to Ledru Rollin to land 12,000 men in England and proclaim a republic—a feasible proposition, truly! The charge against Cavaignac is more grave. He is accused of having conspired with Marrast and Berger to overthrow the Provisional Government; and the proof adduced is, that a "telegraphic despatch" was published in Algiers by Changarnier on the 18th of June, announcing the downfal of the Provisional Government. This charge has been refuted by a statement of M. Lacroix, who was in Algiers, and who declares that a rumour brought from Marseilles was printed by the editor of the Moniteur Algéries as a telegraphic despatch. The accusation against Changarnier has not yet been contradicted, garnier has not yet been contradicted,

Marshal Saldanha has contrived to revolutionize

Marshal Saldanha has contrived to revolutionize Oporto, and is now virtually Dictator of Portugal.
The sudden desertion of the troops to Saldanha affords another remarkable proof of the slight tenure which binds a Portuguese army to its royal chief. He had only to appear before the gates of Oporto, by proxy, and Count de Casal found himself without an army. With a strong instinct of self-preservation the Count de Thomar at once ran away from Lisbon. What the real upshot will be is still doubtful, as the popular party have not shown themselves. The Duke, however, has been duly installed in office. installed in office.

Lord Palmerston has lately shown proofs of his ubiquity. The Turks feel keenly the lukewarm support they receive from England, in the desire to release Kossuth and other Hungarian refugees; but M. Titoff, the Minister of Russia, has beaten Lord Palmerston in his own citadel, the East, and the Hungarians remain prisoners in Turkey.

In Brazil Lord Palmerston takes a haughtier attitude. The Ministry had resolved to suppress the Slave Trade, when in steps the envoy from the Foreign Office, Mr. Hudson, and demands that the forts on the coast, as well as the Brazilian cruizers, should give up their forts into our possession, and abdicate their own authority in favour of Lord Palmerstee's man! Palmerston's man!

The judgment in the case of the Attorney-General v. Hardy, tends, in the spirit of the day, to check the hope that the founders of religious buildings, or sects, can preclude posterity from making innovations; and it tends also to abate the central administrative power of the Wesleyan Conference; encouraging, in short, a spirit of democracy in religion.

French politics are still in uncertainty. The 4th of May was very wet in Paris, and the fête to celebrate the legal anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic went off sullenly, and was very "slow." There were few cries, the lamps would not burn, and umbrellas were astonishingly plenti-

PARLIAMENT OF THE WEEK.

The defeat of Ministers on Friday evening, and the general anxiety as to what would be done next, caused a very large attendance in the House of Commons on Monday evening. The presentation of petitions, and other routine business, having been finished, and the House having gone into committee on the Income Tax Bill, Lord John Russell said he thought it would be as well for him to state what course the it would be as well for him to state what course the Government intended to take. The House had decided that the income tax should be renewed for one year instead of three. The object of Mr. HUMB, in bringing forward his motion for that purpose, had been with a view to the appointment of a select committee of inquiry, in order to render the tax more just and equal. Lord Jonn went on to say that he still thought it undesirable to abridge the duration of the tax; but he could not suppose that the majority of the House, which agreed to the motion, had any in-tention of placing the credit of the country in jeopardy. tention of placing the credit of the country in jeopardy. They were simply desirous that an inquiry should be instituted; and, after mature deliberation, he and his colleagues had come to the conclusion that, after what had occurred, there should be a fair inquiry, conducted by men who are looked upon as leaders in financial questions, and to whom the House is disposed to show deference. But, in making this concession, he wished it to be distinctly understood that there was to be no tampering with the tax during the present year. His understanding was that the income tax, as it stands, should be voted for one year, in order that the repeal of the window tax, and the reduction of the coffee and timber duties, should be carried out. Mr. Hume expressed his concurrence in the view taken by the noble lord, that no alteration should be made in the tax during the present year; the view taken by the noble lord, that no alteration should be made in the tax during the present year; and he hoped that Colonel Sibthour, who had given notice of a motion for altering the mode of levying the tax upon tenant farmers, would postpone his motion, and allow the bill to pass through committee without alteration, Mr. Disraell also thought it desirable that, after shortening the lease of the tax, here should be no entirely an entry particular school. there should b no criticism on any particular sche Colonel Sibthorp's motion was, however, endule. Colonel Siothorp's motion was, however, en-titled to special consideration on the part of the com-mittee; and although the gallant Colonel might not deem it advisable to take exactly the course which he had intended, he (Mr. Disraeli) hoped the Government would consider the propriety of adopting the principle that the tenant-farmer should be rated to the income tax in the same manner, and upon the same principles, as all other classes. As for the Budget, he considered that it had been fairly upset by the vote of Friday evening, and therefore he should deem it quite open to the House to reconsider the financial propositions of Government with reference to the new position in which they had been placed. He did not consider that the they had been placed. He did not consider that the House was bound to carry out any of those financial propositions of the Government which were passed under the impression that the income tax would last a much longer period. Lord JOHN RUSSELL was unable to see how Government could make any alteration in the mode of assessing the farmer without previous inquiry, and that inquiry ought to take place in the proposed select committee. Colonel SIBTHORN laving expressed his willingness to postpone his motion, the House was about to pass the first clause of the bill, when the discussion as to what should be of the bill, when the discussion as to what should be done for the tenant farmer was renewed. Mr. Bankes, Mr. Chaplin, Sir T. D. Acland, and Mr. Alcock contended that the assessment on the farmer ought to be made on the same principle as on the classes in Schedule D. Sir Charles Wood asked if they were willing, in that case, to allow him to surcharge the farmer where his profits were higher than he was assessed for at present. If he was to give way on the one side, it was but fair that he should have that advantage on the other. The unal memof the bill, when the discussion as to what should be way on the one side, it was but fair that he should have that advantage on the other. The rural members seemed rather taken aback by this proposal. In so far as the farmers had any special ground for complaint, their case would come fairly before the select committee, and as it was necessary that the report should be made in the present session, they would be able to make the suggested alterations before the should be made in the present session, they would be able to make the suggested alterations before the tax was renewed next year. Sir John Trollops was not at all satisfied with this pleasant mode of evading discussion. The course taken by Ministers was, no doubt, an exceedingly convenient mode of shelving an awkward question, but it would not satisfy the members on his side of the House. Unless Government made some more satisfactory declaration, they would be forced to go to a division. Lord John denied that the notion of a committee had originated with Ministers. The vote of Friday evening was to limit the tax for one year, in order that a committee might be appointed. Sir John Trollops said he had merely voted for the limiting the tax to one year. He had nothing to do with the appointment of a committee. Those with whom he acted had never assented to such a proposition. Mr. DISHARLI said it was a mistake to suppose that there had been any parliamentary motion for a committee. That was the proposition of Government. He would now suggest that, inasmuch as the noble lord had come down to the house that night, and made a very extraordinary proposition, he should now move that the Chairman report progress, in order that Colonel Sibthorp should have an opportunity of bringing forward his proposition in a proper shape, and on a proper occasion. Lord John Russell could not assent to that proposition. He and his colleagues having, after mature deliberation, acceded to the wish of the house, he was not prepared to take any other course than the enactment of this tax for a year, to enable Government to carry on the measures necesary for the public credit. As for Mr. Disraeli's statement that he never intended to vote for a committee, it was rather inconsistent with his repeated statement that he and his friends, in supporting Mr. Hume's motion, were doing so from any different view from that taken by the honourable member for Montrose. Mr. Hume said he had distinctly stated, on bringing forward his motion, that if he carried it, he would then move for a select committee. It was not fair to misrepresent his motion. Some desultory discussion followed, but the Protectionists did not venture to divide, and the Income-Tax Bill went through committee without any alteration.

Ministers received another defeat on Tuesday evening on Lord NAAS'S motion that the House should go into committee to take into consideration the pre sent mode of levying duty on home-made spirits in bond. The object of the motion was simply this when spirits were placed in a bonded warehouse, and remained there some time, the duty was levied, not on the quantity that came out of the bond, but on the quantity originally measured in the spirit receiver, the consequence of which was that the distiller had to pay duty on a considerable quantity which was always lost by waste or evaporation. It was said that any alteration would open the way to fraud, but he had never heard any calculation made as to what the probable loss from that source would be. All that the distillers asked for was, merely that the same regulations which were granted to importers of rum and brandy, should be extended to the distillers of this country. The revenue would gain the alteration. The manufacture of whisky wo be considerably increased, and that increase would take place without any increased, and that increase would take place without any increase of intemperance; as the raw horrible stuff which the people of Scotland and Ireland now consumed would give place to a light and wholesome beverage. Mr. WILSON, opposing the motion, endeavoured to show that the amount of loss to the distiller was very small, amounting to only about 14d. per gallon. Besides, when 4d. per gallon was fixed as a fair amount of countervailing duty against colonial spirits, it was intended that 1d. of that 4d. should represent the deficiency in homemade spirits from being in bond; and as a large amount of spirits went directly into consumption, the distil-lers had the benefit on the total amount, although the loss fell only upon what went into bond. He thought the English distiller had a much more just ground of complaint than the Irish distiller. The latter was at complaint than the Irish distiller. The latter was at liberty to send his spirits into the English market, but the former was not allowed to send his into Ireland. Since 1841 the produce of English spirits had decreased 100,000 gallons, while that of Irish and Scotch had increased 4,000,000 gallons. This did not look as if the Excise favoured the English distiller Mr. REYNOLDS ridiculed the statement that the loss in bond was equal to little more than 1d. per the loss in bond was equal to little more than 1d. per gallon. In one case he had heard of, the loss was six times greater than that. He reminded the house that this was not a spirit dealer's question merely. It was a labour and agricultural question, and as such he hoped it would be supported. Mr. GROGAN complained that, while opening their markets to the whole world, they were endeavouring to shut out a portion of their own subjects. Mr. GIRSON, as a member of the committee on the sugar planting and rum question, said the of the committee on the sugar planting and rum question, said the impression on his mind was that, on the whole, 4d. per gallon was a fair differential duty to meet the disadvantages under which the Irish and Scotch dis-DUNNE both supported the motion. Sir Grouge CLERE said a few words against it. Sir CHARLES WOOD opposed the mction, because the alteration proposed would virtually give a premium to fraud. All these could be abstracted and brought in without raying duty would be a clear gain to the distiller. paying duty would be a clear gain to the distiller; whereas all they abstract now is a direct loss. Lord John Russell viewed it simply as a question for reducing the duty on Scotch and Irish spirits; and as he did not intend to reduce the duty on spirits in he did not intend to reduce the duty on spirits in general, and as he was not prepared to give an advantage to the producer of Scotch and Irish spirits, he could not agree to the motion. Mr. Dishaeli ridiculed the arguments of Lord John, and expressed a hope that the decision of the House would show that the routine and stereotyped reasons of the public officers would receive another check. The House the mightly week. then divided, when the numbers were-

The announcement of the numbers was received with loud cheers by the Opposition, which were repeated when the Speaker gave his casting vote in favour of the motion, thus placing the Government in a minority. Mr. ROEBUCK appealed to Lord John the Russell whether he ought, or was fit, to carry on the affairs of the country with the Government so completely in the hands of the House of Commons, as four recent divisions had proved it to be?

four recent divisions had proved it to be?

"I ask him if he is in a position to govern the country? (Loud sheers from the Opposition.) Is he wise, is he politie, to retain the powers of Government under such circumstances? (Cries of "hear, hear," and "ch, oh.") It is all very well to say "oh," but let us understand what is going on in this country. At the commencement of the session of parliament we were told that certain things were to be done with respect to the finances of the country. The Chancellor of the Exchequer gave an intimation of what he intended to do. There is not a great concern in the country that has not been affected by the declaration of the right honourable gentleman. Do not let the right honourable gentlema suppose that this is a mere party act. I am looking at the wint reference to the country itself; and if the House of Commons is so bound to the interests of the country as to keep us in this state, hanging (as it were), like Mahmer's coffin, between heaven and earth, let the House of Commons have the responsibility. ("Hear, hear.") But I appeal to the noble lord—I appeal to him who is responsible upon this occasion—not to lend his authority to this state of things. I say that any Minister—regarding not only the Ministry of this country, but his own personal character—would not lead himself to such a condition. (Cheers, and cries of "Oh, oh.") I twa very well to say 'oh;' but I recollect an instance where the party of the noble lord putting the Administration of the Duke of Wellington into a minority—one who ertainly is not on these benches now, but who has been exalted into the other House of Parliament, as soon as the minority was declared on that occasion, rose to ask the right honourable baronet (Sir Robert Ped) if he was about to retain his Government was founded, (Hear.) Why, the noble led whether he was about to retain his Government was founded. (Hear.) Why the noble led whether he thinks it wise, under the circumtance, to contrary to the interests of England, it contrary to the Lord John Russell (amid the profound silence of the House) rose to reply. He said he must respectfully decline the advice Mr. Roebuck had given him in regard to the preservation of his personal chaster, which he would prefer taking care of himself. He contrasted the recommendations Mr. Roebuck had given him that night with the warning he had utterst that "free trade was in his (Lord John's) hands" when the Government was last in abeyance. He had never hesitated as to the resignation of office when principle demanded it; but he conceived that not only had he a right, but he owed it to his elegues, to consider with them the fitting time fit giving up his office. He referred to the four defeat which Mr. Roebuck had said the Ministry had sustained this session; and he refused to recognise any of them as defeats of such a character as necessarily compelled a Government to resign. He therefore declined to tell Mr. Roebuck what future course he might intend to take; but he would say that a change of Government now would entail very gave consequences; and he hoped that those who were in the habit of voting with Ministers would leave it them to decide their convec under existing circustances, assured that for his own part he would not hastily abandon the interests committed to his charge.

A short discussion followed as to whether the resolution should pass without a division. Lord John thought it perfectly fair to do so, because the House was now fuller than it had been. Lord Naas thought this a bad reason, as the former division had taken pize in a house which had been attending to the debut, whereas the members who had just come in would vote without knowing what they were voting for. Ultimately the chairman reported progress and the House resumed.

The St. Alban's election proceedings gave rise to a short discussion, which was opened by Mr. E. ELILES, who moved for leave to bring in a bill by appoint commissioners to inquire into the existence of bribery in that borough. He took a rapid glance at the evidence taken by the committee for inquiring into the validity of the return of Mr. Jacob Bell, sad showed the existence in St. Alban's of a well-organized system of corruption, screened by the most dexterous contrivances for evading such discovery as might legally affect the corrupt or corrupting parties. He alluded to the disappearance of the witnesses at the moment their evidence would

Y,

on the com-

n this wise, wise, under under the tit the g at i

ith al

spect-n kim racter, . He k had ttered

d that

d sus-se any

e it to House

rise to Ir. E. bill to l, and have been available, and concluded by a motion to the above effect.—Mr. Cobden, moved as an amendment, words for adding an inquiry into whibry, treating, and corruption in the Falkirk district of burghs." He described the disgraceful proceedings which had taken place in those burghs at the recent election, contending that the electoral history of the district since 1841 fully entitled it to the same measure of justice as was to be dealt out to the corruptionists of St. Alban's. He dweit with great force upon the demoralising influence of such sense, and appealed to the House to take stringent measures for putting an end to them. Mr. Baird the member for the Falkirk burghs) disclaimed having had any share in causing the intemperance and debauchery described by Mr. Cobden. The Arrober-General urged Mr. Cobden not to mix up two matters essentially disconnected. Mr. Roebuck aw no such difference between the two questions as should prevent Mr. Cobden's amendment from being adopted. He dwelt with great intensity upon the rekedness of the proceedings in the Falkirk burghs, and declared that, in the presence of such accusations against the sitting member, the Attorney General's objections ought to vanish. After a short discussion, Mr. Cobden withdrew his amendment, and leave was given to bring in the bill.

The question of equalizing the poor-rates was against the situal memore, the rationey discussion, Mr. Coblen withdrew his amendment, and leave was given to bring in the bill.

The question of equalizing the poor-rates was brought before the House of Commons on Tuesday reming by Mr. G. Berkeley, who moved for a committee of the whole house on the subject. His object in doing so was to relieve the agricultural districts from the depression under which they labour at present. In studying this question, he had found out several things to which he wished to call the attention of the President of the Poor Law Board. Looking at the returns issued by the board, he found that there appeared to be a great diminution in the amount of pauperism, while the sum levied for the relief of the poor was no way diminished. On examining more narrowly he found that, prior to 1845, it was the custom, when a man and his wife, with six children, having one child sick, applied to the union for relief, to return them to the board as eight persons. Since then, however, an order had been issued, in consequence of which such cases were returned as consisting of three persons only. The new rule regarding vagrants, by which no one was admitted into a workhouse, even for one night, taless he consented to do a certain amount of work, had reduced the num'er of paupers in appearance, though not in reality. But, notwithstanding all their contrivances, the expense of the system in the counties was excessive, whilst the result was very unsatisfactory. What he wished was, that the burdens in town and country should be equalised; instead of levying 17s. or 18s. in the pound in one place, and 4d. in the pound in the other. The true remedy for the existing evils and abuses was, to make the relief of the poor a national object. The companitive value of the property assessed, and the rates levied in different districts, showed the injusplace, and 4d, in the pound in the other. The true remedy for the existing evils and abuses was, to make the relief of the poor a national object. The compassive value of the property assessed, and the rates levied in different districts, showed the injustice of the present system. In Cheshire the rental assessed was £1,574,273, and the rate 1½d. in the pound; in Buckinghamshire the rental assessed was £1,574,273, and the rate 1½d. in the pound; in Buckinghamshire the rental assessed was £706,000, and the rate 3s, in the pound. If his resolution were carried they would confer a great benefit on the whole of the community. He concluded by moving that the house should go into committee, to enable him to move a resolution to the effect that to alleviate a portion of the burdens from which the agricultural interest is at present suffering through the payment of parochial poor-rates, varying in many instances from 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., to 13s. 10d. in the pound, it will be necessary to substitute an equalised poor rate in England and Wales, not exceeding 1s. 6d. in the pound, and subject to local government. Captain Harris, in seconding the motion, spoke with great approbation of Lord Malmesbury's scheme. His lordship had ascertained that the average expenditure for five years previous to 1849 amounted to £5,850,000 a year, and he had calculated that a rate of 5d. in the pound on all incomes above £30 per annum would produce that sum. Mr. Baines said the order issued in 1846 could not affect in any degree the late returns laid before Parliament, seeing that the whole of the years to which those returns related were subsequent to 1846. As for the question of national rating, it had been already discussed by a committee heard evidence on the whole of the wasted by a committee appointed for that purpose. In 1847 that committee heard evidence on the whole of the many tems. on the whole of the subject; but when the committee came to consider what report they would make, there was not one of them who took up the question of a national rate, or who seemed to consider it as a remedy deserving a single moment's consideration. Since then several attempts had been made in the house in favour of national rating, but they had been usaccessful. In two instances the house had negatived them without a division. The result of such a system would be to discourage waterfulness and economy on the expenditure of the rates. The greatest possible frauds and jobbery would also take place under such a mode of levying the rates, while its adoption would lead to an indefinite increase of pauperism throughout the country. But even without any increase of pauperism the average rate would be considerably heavier than 1s. 6d. in the pound. The total value of rateable property in 1847 was £67,220 587, whicy at 1s.6d. in the pound would raise £5,649,044, whereas the amount levied last year under the head of parochial poor-rates was £7,270,492, so that with a rate of only 1s. 6d. in the pound there would be a deficit of £2,221,448. The scheme altreactor was one of the west mischierous. scheme altogether was one of the most mischievous and ill-considered ever propounded to Parliament, and he hoped the House would stamp it with a decided negative. Mr. GEANTLEY after a brief reply withdrew his motion.

A very dull debate on the Malt Tax occupied the House of Commons the main part of Thursday evening. Mr. Cayley, in moving for leave to bring in a bill to repeal the tax, rested his demand mainly on the assumption that the repeal would greatly benefit the enterprising farmer; that it would prevent the adulteration of beer; that, if we have no corn-law, we should have no corn-law taxation, and that an increase of consumption would be a direct consequence of repeal. Mr. Aloosx supported the motion; and asserted that upon the 1,000,000 acres under barley cultivation we raised a revenue of £5,500,000. He would be satisfied with a gradual repeal. Mr. Packe was afraid that if the tax were repealed the country would be glutted with foreign malt. He would support a motion for repealing one-half the duty. For fiscal reasons Mr. Aglionsy declined to vote for the repeal this year. Mr. Floyer based his support upon an argument somewhat novel on his side the House, but perfectly fair. He looked upon the repeal of the tax as a complement to the policy of free trade. He incidentally elicited some valuable remarks on the condition of the agricultural labourers, by admitting that they were partially employed, from Mr. Seymour, who declared that, even in Dorsetshire, the labourers were employed now as they never had been before:—

"Up to the very year before the free trade measures A very dull debate on the Malt Tax occupied the before:—

"Up to the very year before the free trade measures passed, farmers were accustomed to turn off labourers in October, and take them on again at Easter. For his part, he could perceive no evidence of distress in his neighbourhood, and he could not understand how it happened that the labourers should always be worse off where a Protectionist resided than where a Freetrader lived. ('Hear,' and laughter.)" lived. ('Hear,' and laughter.)"

Mr. Benner was of opinion that if we were to have free trade, it should be extended to the national beverages. Mr. Thelawner could not understand how the repeal would benefit the farmer. Besides, he thought it most unsafe to meddle with our system of taxation, for it was like a castle of cards; if you touched one part of it, you were apt to make the whole fail to the ground. Mr. Wodenouse opposed the motion for reasons similar to those of Mr. Packe. Mr. Frewen took ground upon the beer-adulteration argument; and Mr. G. Sandars thought that the agricultural interests were acting suicidally by supagricultural interests were acting suicidally by supporting this motion. Mr. HENRY DRUMMOND wanted porting this motion. Mr. HENRY DRUMMOND wanted to know why honourable gentlemen opposite made such a clamour about bread, and did not stir one step in favour of beer. The Chancellor of the Exchequer might lay on a house-tax, an income-tax, a property-tax—any tax, in short, that he pleased, only let him take this tax off the labourer. (Cheers.) The CHANCELLOR of the Exchequer thought nothing new had been advanced on the subject. He was in favour of the tax, for a Chancellor's reason. was in favour of the tax, for a Chancellor's reason, that it was easily and cheaply collected; and he thought that no material relief would accrue to any class by repeal.

"For his part, he believed that no tax was more equally distributed throughout the country than the duty on malt. It was paid by the consumer, and, thinking that the advantage of its repeal would not be so great as was anticipated by those who advocated such a course, he should certainly vote against the motion."

was anticipated by those who advocated such a course, he should certainly vote against the motion."

Mr. Disraell declined to view repeal either as a question of taxation, or with reference to the interest of the labourer, but as it bore upon the apital of the most suffering class of the community—the owners and occupiers of land. They were experiencing a dilapidation of capital which had never yet been equalled. And what was the remedy proposed? To give up growing wheat, and at the same time to keep up a heavy duty upon a crop which the farmer looked to for compensation. Protection had nothing to do with the question. It was one of doing justice to the occupiers of land, and acting consistently with the free trade policy of Ministers. Mr. Fuller and Mr. Hume supported the motion; Mr. Hume voted for repeal as a Free Trader. He could not understand gentlemen taking trouble to obtain cheap bread and cheap beef, and now turning round and refusing them cheap drink. Mr. Bass would go for repealing the tax one half; Mr. Brotherton opposed, Mr. Henley and the Marquis of Grand protection; and Lord John Russell would leave the debate. He thought that the main reason for voting against the motion was, that it would leave the finances in a ruinous condition, and they would have no source from which they could supply the loss of revenue.

Mr. CAYLEY replied, and the House divided, when

Majority against the motion. 136

The House subsequently agreed to Mr. Hume's motion for the appointment of a select committee on the Income and Property Tax; and to Lord John Russell's nomination of a select committee on the relations of the Caffit tribes with this country. The House adjourned at a quarter before two o'clock.

The House of Lords sat yesterday, advanced some bills a stage, and adjourned.

THE INDUSTRIAL CONGRESS.

Her Majesty made one of her promised visits to the Crystal Palace on Saturday, arriving, in conformity with her usual domestic habits, at an early hour. The royal party included the Queen, Prince Albert, the Prince Alfred, the Princess Alice, the Princes of Prussia, the Princess Or Prussia, and the members of their suites. Some members of the executive committee were in attendance, and swelled the limited numbers of the royal cortége, to which a superintendent and a policeman acted as escort. As the royal party was not more numerous than many family groups, the exhibitors and visitors in the side departments and galleries were surprised to find themselves suddenly within the circle of royalty. The Queen's attention was first directed to the objects of decoration, and of the fine arts in the English division, among which a considerable time was spent. The Queen was attended by the Prince of Prussia, whose consort was conducted by Prince Albert, and the royal children followed. The general disposition of the persons present was to avoid obtruding in the Queen's presence, as there was an earnest desire to secure her in the same enjoyment of privacy as others enjoyed, and to preserve the public character, which has been somewhat damaged by unseemly demonstrations of exuberant loyalty. We regret to say, however, that a considerable portion of the attendants on the stands and the building thought it incumbent on them to attend herMajesty's progress in the nature of a body-guard. A very little care on the part of the police will prevent annoyance from this on future occasions, as any interruptions from an attendant crowd must be very annoying to those exhibitors, it is to be hoped that her admirers will keep their enthusiasm within some bounds, the more particularly as her Majesty is not included in the catalogue or programme. Besides the time spent in aminute examination of some of the departments, all the great works of art in the nave passed under notice, and the satisfaction felt by the royal party gave every ears completion—and went out at one of the side doors in that nave. Her Majesty had been in the building upwards of an hour, and although, before she left, the public had been admitted, yet to the last few were aware of her presence, and those who were of course preserved a respectful distance. During her pro-gress she displayed her characteristic energy and animation, appearing to take the liveliest interest in what she saw, and occasionally conversing with those about her upon the objects she inspected. The attendance of visitors on Saturday was he no those about her upon the objects she inspected.

The attendance of visitors on Saturday was by no means so numerous as on the preceding day. This fact was partly to be accounted for by the cold and unprepitious state of the weather, but it was doubtless to be attributed also in part to the circumstance of Saturday being the day of the first show of flowers at Chiswick-gardens. The issue of day-tickets amounted to about 500. From about one o'clock the supplies here a rapidly to increase and a long string amounted to about 500. From about one o'clock the numbers began rapidly to increase, and a long string of carriages, extending from Hyde Park-corner to the building, continued to pour in a constant stream of visitors until nearly five o'clock.

The appearance of the building on Monday was strikingly indicative of the reduction that had taken place in the price of admission, the number present being fully three times as many as on either Friday or Saturday. Notwithstanding the many thousands who promenaded through the avenues, there did not appear to be any obstruction in the narrowest passapear to be any obstruction in the narrowest pas-sages. The mass of visitors were scattered over the building in those departments which suited their several tastes, and this distribution left the circulation everywhere free, the immense extent of the action everywhere free, the immense extent of the ac-commodation which the glass house affords being in this way rendered obvious in a very satisfactory manner. During the early part of the day his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with a single attendant, visited the Exhibition, and appeared to be much inte-rested in noting the progress made in completing the decorations. He passed through the naves and en-tered several of the compartments, and afterwards visited the gallering.

visited the galleries.

A return has been made up of the total number of A return has been made up of the total number of packages of goods received from foreign countries and the colonies to the 3d of May, from which it appears that the number received from foreign countries amounts to 9,968, from our colonies 1,181, and from the Channel Islands 37, making together a total of 11,186. Of these 697 only have had the duty paid, or are admitted free of duty. There is no foundation whatever for the report that her Majesty intends visiting the Exhibition on Saturday next, before the public are admitted, for the purpose of inspecting the articles exhibited, and of receiving from exhibitors themselves any information which her Majesty may wish to obtain with respect to the articles exhibited by them. The present incomplete state of some of the departments is in itself sufficient to prevent her Majesty conferring upon the exhibitors that honour which her special visit is intended to convey. Due notice will be given to exhibitors of the day upon which her Majesty will pay her intended visit.

The Council of Chairmen of the Juries of the Exhibitors of the Lavier of the Lav

The Council of Chairmen of the Juries of the Exhibition of the Industry of all Nations held its first meeting at half-past eleven o'clock on Monday morning, in the building of the Exhibition, There were present—Class 1, Sir H. de la Beche, C.B.; class 4, Professor Owen; class 5a, the Earl of Jersey; class 8, Baron Charles Dupin; class 9, Mr. Philip Pusey, M. P.; class 10, Sir David Brewster; class 10a, Sir David Brewster; class 10 M P.; class 10, Sir David Brewster; class 10a, Sir H. R. Bishop; class 11, Sir James Anderson; class 12, Dr. Schafhault for Professor Hermann; class 13, Mr George T. Kemp; class 14, Count von Harrack; class 15, M. Verregt for M. van Hoegaerden; class 16, Hon. Colonel George Anson; class 17, his Excellency M. van de Weyer; class 18, Mr. Henry Tucker; class 19, Dr. Bolley; class 20, Mr. William Felkin; class 22, the Hon. Horace Greeley; class 24, Lord de Mauley; class 26, M. Adam Chevalier de Burg; class 28, M. Ramon de la Sagra for Signor Don Joaquim Alforano; class 29, Viscount Canning; class 30, Herr von Viebahn. Viscount Canning occupied the chair at the meeting. Dr. Lyon Playfair, Colonel Lloyd, and Licutenant Ward attended.

The Journal of Design states that the British

The Journal of Design states that the British sculptors are about gracefully to show their admiration of genius by giving a dinner to M. Kiss, of Berlin, the author of the famous group of the "Amazon and Tiger," which occupies so prominent a position in the foreign nave.

Many of the masses of stone and coal forwarded to the Exhibition have proved too heavy to be taken into the building itself, and have consequently been allowed to remain in the open air. They are principally collected before the western entrance of the edidce. Among these, a Doric column of granite, pally collected before the western entrance of the edifice. Among these, a Doric column of granite, from the Cheesewring quarries, in Cornwall, is particularly worthy of notice. The shaft is one solid piece, and measures twenty feet in length. Several stupendous masses of coal from various localities will also be found in the same situation, together with some enormous flagstones and freestones from Wales and will also be found in the same situation, together with some enormous flagstones and freestones from Scotland, and extraordinary slates from Wales and the Delabole quarries, near Camelford, in Cornwall. Here also will be observed, among a vast number of other products, specimens of Portland cement, black Irish marble, grindstones, pavingstones, and cannel coals.

Among the samples of fossil fuel, some blocks of coal from the Stavely works, near Chesterfield, in Derbyshire, cannot, from their singular structure, fail to be noticed. This variety has a remarkable tendency to cleave into long prismatic masses, which readily admit of being sawn into blocks for the purpose of facilitating their stowage in the hold of a purpose of facilitating their stowage in the note of a ship.

The east end of the building, occupied by the United States and Russia, presents a very bare and meagre aspect. The Americans have taken about a meagre aspect. acious compartments, and have occumercantile matter-of-fact kind of them in a mercantile matter-of-fact kind of way, giving to them more the look of a display of goods for purchase than of articles of taste and art for exhibition. Thus there is a lamp, stall, presenting some scores of lamps all pretty much the same, and many precisely the same, in pattern and in size; so of a shoe stall and a harness stall; and a pistol stall, and so forth. And all the interior arrangements of the compartments are of the same character; business-like, with rectangular regularity, and uninteresting uniformity, with a great deal of space unoccupied—seeming as if the goods were spread out to ness-like, with rectangular regularity, and unin-teresting uniformity, with a great deal of space un-occupied—seeming as if the goods were spread out to cover as much space as possible, rather than to present the most pleasing appearances. There are in these compartments hardly any which could be called works of art; but of articles of utility there is cer-tainly a great variety; and no doubt, upon inspec-tion, a vast deal will be discovered of interest and Nature.

In the list of articles from the north to the Great Exhibition is a very simple and cheap instrument, the invention of Mr. William Ross, slater, Dunrobin, which we think is destined to prove of important utility to land-surveyors, contractors, farm-overseers, and navigators. The instrument is applied to finding heights and distances, by sea or land, as far as the eye can reach, with the aid of the telescope or otherwise, with tables calculated to give the answer in miles, chains, yards, or feet, without the laborious process of casting a figure by the operator. It will also, in five minutes, give the square contents of a park or field, however extensive, if it can all be seen from one of the corners. Likewise it gives the time of day by the sun at any part of the globe when the latitude is known, which can be ascertained by the instrument. It will be a great desideratum in measuring, as we understand it dispenses with the cumbrous chain. We are informed that the invention has undergone a severe examination in Edinburch before Mr. Grainger and other scientific gen-In the list of articles from the north to the Great tion has undergone a severe examination in Edinburgh before Mr. Grainger and other scientific gen-tlemen, who felt justified in forwarding it to the Exhibition. The invention is a somewhat peculiar ne, seeing that it is the production of a man with limited education, but who, with determined perseverance, has wrought at his problems for a series of years without ever seeing a theodolite or any of the instruments in present use. It is also the cheapest ever invented, and is carried in the pocket.—Inver-

Russia having swallowed up Poland, the English Russia having swallowed up Poland, the English public is ignorant of the articles sent to the Great Exhibition from Poland, they all being exhibited as Russian productions; we, therefore, acquaint our readers with the circumstance that amongst other readers with the circumstance that amongst other articles forwarded by that unhappy country, there are specimens of cast and forged iron, plate iron, manufactured products, iron ore, and cadmia. Manufactured copper from Warsaw, amongst which is a machine for boiling sugar. In the Optic line, a microscope, magnifying 800 times, for astronomical observations. Musical instruments. A pair of boots of extraordinary lightness, and a pair of shoes without any seam, &c. Cloth. Ladies' bonnets, gloves: specimens of the celebrated wheat from Sandomierz, rye, paperhanging, coloured paper, oil-cloth, refined sugar, varnished leather, linen, tablecloths, napkins, towels, &c.

The board of directors of the Atlas Assurance Company have resolved to give four distinct days leave of absence to each officer in their establishment leave of absence to each officer in their establishment for the purpose of enabling them to view the Great Exhibition, the company also paying the cost of admission. It is understood that a similar proceeding is contemplated by other public companies, and it is to be hoped that wherever it may be practicable the example will be generally followed.

Itles Janin has been giving a series of lively purets.

Jules Janin has been giving a series of lively papers on the Exhibition in the Journal des Debats. One thing which struck him forcibly was the inscription of each nation in its own language:—

"Not far from the trade of Greece atands the art of Turkey. Your Turk is indeed an artist. He addresses himself to the eye; that which he is curious of above all is splendour and riohness; the useful he leaves to England, the graceful to France. He believes in embroidery, in purple, in pearls and diamonds! He would give all the coal of England for the famous Koh-i-noor, the Mountain of Light! I have seen him, this honest Turk, seated in melancholywise within his little compartment, full of amber, musk, and carpets, his eyes half closed, and in the attitude of resignation. Douotless he asks himself what on earth has brought him here amid the infidels, among Christians, Protestants, Jews, idoloters, renegades—the new prophets and the old prophets of each nation. To what end has he been dragged into this strife? He would measure his strength with no man! Why show him your inventions and your machinery? He wants them not; he will have nothing to do with them. He leaves us our looms, our hammers, " Not far from the trade of Greece stands the art of our anvils, together with the necessities implied in all these various labours. What is steam to him? has be not his sup, his wine, his opium, his newspaper, his dreams, his poetry, his tobacco?

dreams, his poetry, his tobacco?

"Alas! worthy individual, he is at the present moment deprived of the everlasting festival of his thoughts and of his life. Etiquette and custom have tora from his hands his faithful companion, his graceful dispense of the grateful vapour, his councillor and hospitable friend—his pipe! 'On ne fume pas lei?"—such is the law of this caravanseral of human industry; and that each nation may be advised thereof, it is written in every language, 'On ne fume pas ici,' 'No smoking allowed,' None permesso di fumare,' and so on to the end, and the poor Turk has been constrained to obey. It is Get's will! It is the will of the Englishman! If the English will is the swill of the Englishman! If the English of Industry have its martyrs, this surely is one!"

THE MAY MEETINGS

THE MAY MEETINGS.

The annual meetings of the multitudinous societies and associations of which London is the centre, have begun. The Church of Scotland Missions met on Monday, at Exeter-hall, the Duke of Argyll in the chair. The total receipts for the year are £62,470, including £25,000 subscribed for the building of churches. From the annual report of the Church Missionary Society it appears that the annual receipts were £112,000; an increase of £7,000 over those of last year. The Royal Humane Society celebrated its 77th anniversary by dining at the Freemason's Taven, on Wednesday, when the chair was filled by Mr. Bond Cabbell, M.P., in the unavoidable absence of the Duke of Cambridge. It appears that out of 163 cases submitted to their consideration during last year, comprising 202 persons, 191 were successfully treated and recovered, and 11 were beyond recovery. year, comprising 202 persons, 191 were successfully treated and recovered, and 11 were beyond recovery. The Hyde-park cases were 35 in number, six of whom were found dead, while the remaining 27 were successfully treated.

whom were found dead, while the remaining 27 were successfully treated.

The annual meeting of the Literary Association of the Friends of Poland, was held at Sussex Chambers, Duestreet, on Saturday, Lord Dudley Stuart, M.P., in the chair. The meeting was addressed by the Reverend Dr. Worthington, Mr. Scholefield, M.P., the Barl of Rarowby, Mr. Monckton Milnes, M.P., Mr. Chiabla Anstey, M.P., Mr. Mowatt, M.P., Lord Beaumont, Mr. Urquhart, M.P., &c., who passed in review the social and political aspect of the Continental States, more especially with reference to the prospects of seeing revired the liberty and independence of Poland. From the repert read it appears that the income of the association during the past year, was £837 17s. A sum of £600, subscribed exclusively by the Poles, was spent in seading about 10 Poles to America. The balance in hand amounted a £419 5s. 9d. The number of refugees now in England was about 757, of whom 208 received permanent reliar from the Government, and nine from the association. The number of those who had left the country was 229, of whom 177 proceeded to the United States. In the course of the year there were at one time nearly 100 refugees in England—a higher number than in any preeding year. Various resolutions relating to the management of the association were passed, and a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to the noble chairman for his increasing efforts to benefit the condition of the Politin nation.

The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible.

creasing efforts to benefit the condition of the Polish nation.

The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society took place at Exeter Hall on Wednesday, Lord Ashley in the chair, supported by the Marquis of Chomondeley, the Earl of Harrowby, the Bishop of Cashel, Sir R. H. Inglis, Sir T. D. Ackland, and Mr. Plumpare, M.P. The report stated that the issues from the society during the past year amounted to 1,13,017, making a total of 24,247,667 bibles and testaments since the commencement of the society in 1804. The enire receipts for the year ending March 31, 1851, amounted to £103,330 2s. 8d. The expenditure during the past year amounted to £103,643 10s. 10d., being £6 297 8s. 10d. over that of the preceding year.

The anniversary meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society was held on Monday, at eleven o'clock, at Exerchall. Before the hour of meeting the hall was, as usual on such occasions, crowded. Amongst others present were Mr. Plumptre, M.P., Mr. Cowan, M.P., Dr. Candlish, &c. Several opeakers addressed the meeting, and resolutions in furtherance of its objects were adopted. The receipts of the society for the year were amounced at £104,661 14s. 4d., and the expenditure st £113,767 3s. 3d., leaving a deficiency of £9105 8s.

THE NATIONAL SCHOOL MOVEMENT.

THE NATIONAL SCHOOL MOVEMENT.

The friends and supporters of the National Public School Association held a general meeting at the King's Head, Poultry, on Wednesday, which was well attended. Among others present were Mr. Cobden, M.P.; Mr. W. Hilliams, M.P.; Mr. S. Crayford, M.P.; Mr. W. Williams, M.P.; Mr. Tindall Harris, Mr. E. Swaine, Mr. James Bell, Mr. J. Mellor, Mr. W. Ferguson, Mr. Edmund Stone, Mr. Gregory Foster, Mr. W. Ellis, Mr. T. R. Pritchard, Mr. W. Hargreaves, Mr. L. Lucas, Mr. J. Ashurst, Mr. Slack, Mr. H. Kennedy, Mr. Pillans, Mr. Courhauld, Mr. W. A. Wilkinson, Mr. W. E. Hicken, Mr. J. Dillon, Mr. F. Goldsmid. On the motion of Mr. W. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. W. Ashurst, Mr. Samuel Lucas, one of the founders of the Lancashire Association, was called to the chair. Mr. J. Mr. Samuel Lucas, one of the founders of the cashire Association, was called to the chair. Mr. J. S. Smith, the secretary, read letters from Mr. Hums, M.P.; Mr. Scholefield, M.P.; Mr. J. W. Fox, M.P.; Mr. Gench. M.P.; Mr. Ewart, M.P.; and Mr. B. Wall, M.P., approving the principles of the association, and regretting their inability to attend the meeting; also the following letter from Mr. Thomas Carple:

ion, and regretting their inability to attend the meeting; also the following letter from Mr. Thomas Caritis:

"Chelsea, May 7, 1851.

"Dear sir,—I unfortunately cannot attend your meeting his evening, but will take the offered opportunity of sulfying, if it should be judged of any moment, that I is altogether approve of your enterprise, consider it to sone of the most pressingly needful in our day, and sit any whole heart wish it speedy and complete success. It his if ever there was a cause worth pleading before at public from platforms, yours falls under that description, in the present state of matters among us. To my-dift sorrowfully seems, and has long seemed, one of the most singular, and I will add disgraceful, facts under the sun, that in a country so rich in all human means as Fesland—and rich, too, in heroic ancestors, and noble seembrances, and admonitions towards whatever is highest—the mass of the population should remain at its day, not only ill-educated, according to the current sufficient notions and standard, but not educated at all; the live and to lice, generation after generation, as if there had no knowledge ever come into the wild, and the 'art of thinking,' nay the very art of rading and spelling, had not yet been invented! What is the meaning of Church, what is the meaning of State, et of society at all, if this is to be the practice of it? Without education,' says Luther, 'men are as bears and sovice.' It is not the clearest duty, presribed by saure herself, under silent, but real and awful penalties, governing persons in every society, to see that the public strength of the season of the yours very faithfully, "John S. Smith, Esq., Sec., &c. &c." T. CARLYLE.

TacChairman made a sensible and hopeful speech as the present state of the education question. Their chief in calling the present meeting was to procure, if possible, the assistance of a number of gentlemen when they proposed to enrol as a provisional committee. Two or three years ago the men of the City would have shrunk from such an appellation as a highly dangerous one, but in the present case it was quite harmless. Their object was to enlist 200 or 300 gentlemen whose names they could not before quite harmless. Their object was could put before 300 gentlemen whose names they could put before the public as a sanction of their proceedings. They the public as a sanction of their proceedings. Iney had also an executive committee, and if any gentleman present wished to attend and offer them any assistance they would be very grateful for it. With regard to their prospects, he had not the shadow of a dealt as to their ultimate triumph. He had been told by some persons that the Church and the Dissenters were opposed to them, and that the difficultural triangle. were opposed to them, and that the difficul-be overcome were immense. His own opinion, r, was, that the friends of the cause did not how their strength; and that if they would only start themselves a very short time would see their class crowned with success.

The meeting was afterwards addressed by Mr. Slack, Mr. S. Crawford, M.P., Mr. Henry, M.P., Mr. Dillon, and lastly, by Mr. Cobden, M.P. The honourable member for Yorkshire, who was loudly should be added to the control of the contro assourable member for rorkshire, who was roughy to the arguments of the voluntary educationists, and concluded by warning the people of England of the danger of leaving the people in their present state of

blic

"Persons who were in the habit of disparaging foreign countries had looked with contempt at the political mistries and disasters which had been taking place during the last few years in Germany, France, and other continent. But he feared that they sould find, if by any accident in this country the machine of government should be thrown off its hinges, and we should be left for a year without a government—if, in a word, we were situated as they had been, we should have at worse scenes enacted here than anything which had then witnessed either in Germany and France. (Loud cheens.) They might not have got exactly our constitutional forms, but they had a counterpoise in the much greater sub-division of property, and in the better education of the people, which he was inclined to think had tabled those countries to pass through a season of difficulty and danger, and to come out of a state of anarchy and confusion better than we should have done had we been similarly circumstanced. (Cheers.) We were, in fact, in a very alarming condition. He was not talking of the physical condition of the people. We had eaten more bread and meat, and given more employment, it was true, but let them look at the moral aspect of the question. What had been the criminal statistics? (Cheers.) Look at the horrid frequency of systematic poisonings. (Hear.) Why, good Heavens! there had been two acts of parliament passed within the last two years, for preventing people from carrying on a systematic plan of poisoning; and they had seen members of families alaying each other by that insidious ageacy. (Cheers.) Then again, they had seen the most horrid atrocities in the shape of murder and violence. (Hear, hear.) He had often talked with Germans and Frenchmen on the subject, and, after making all allowance for national egotism, and diligently reading the foreign papers with a view to discover the fact, he did not think the same atrocities took place abroad. (Cheers.) At all areas the them work fall into the delimitation. think the same atrocities took place abroad. (Cheers.) At all events, let them not fall into the delusion that there was all events, let them not fall into the delusion that there was nothing to render the education question one of pressing importance. (Loud cheers.) There was a vast deal to do; but he doubted not they would co-operate with the men of the north in a matter which so nearly concerned the vital interests of the country. (Cherrs.) For his own part he should be happy to assist them as much as lay in his power, whether in his place in parliament or elsewhere. (Cheers.) They had put their shoulders together in many a struggle, but in none that was more for the welfare and prosperity of the country." (Loud (cherrs.)

After a few remarks from Mr. Williams, M.P., and Mr. Travers, the meeting terminated.

CONTINENTAL NEWS.

A wet, dreary, dismal day, was Sunday the 4th of May, the anniversary of the proclamation of the Republic, in Paris. Great preparations had been made for a fête; but the weather spoiled all. The made for a fête; but the weather spoiled all. The rain came down in torrents, and the mass of sight-seers presented the appearance of an enormous crowd of mushrooms wedged together; the umbrellas formed the chief feature of the fête.

Evidently, the authorities studiously avoided, in the decorations of the capital, any reference whatever to the Great Revolution, or the existing republic. The characters selected from the history of France were the poets, the feudal heroes, the great commanders under the monarchy, two mechanicians, two generals of the empire, and a colossal statue of France instead of a plaster of Paris effigy of the Republic.

Republic.
The most original feature in the decorations of the The most original feature in the decorations of the fete was a cascade, constructed on the Pont de la Concorde: a vast assemblage of artificial rocks piled about the centre arch, towards the Tulleries, and crowned by a group of marine deities in plaster. The water conveyed in gutta percha pipes from the reservoirs of the fountains of the Great Place, tumbled from the top of the centre arch down the sham crags. All this, lit up with ingenious combinations of lamps, would have been effective but for the rain. The Madelaine was hung with tapestry, with statues of Faith and Hope at the angles of the façade. The Quay d'Orsay was planted with trees, and bounded on the river side by a balustrade ornamented with sculpture and flags, and filled with musicians.

The fête was undisturbed. Few people gave utterance to any cry. The provocations of the police failed in their aim. The Republicans were forewarned, and the insurrection longed for by the Prefect of the Police and the Minister of the Interior did not take place. The same result attended the celebration at Largest with this difference that the contraction at the contraction of the contraction at Largest with this difference that the contraction at the contraction of the contraction place. The same re-ult attended the celebration at Lyons; with this difference that the authorities seem to have made sure of a disturbance there, seeing that to have made sure of a disturbance there, seeing that on Monday rumours of an insurrection reached Paris, which were false. General Castellane continues to prohibit pamphlets and "operate arrests," the latest feat in the prohibitory way being that of forbidding the sale within the iron limits of his rule of a pamphlet entitled Future Bases of the Social Church. of a par

The mysterious bulletins signed "Central Committee of Resistance" continue to occupy the police; it is said that the facts elicited compromised the Bonapartists much more than the Socialists; that there are two Committees, and that the leaders are unknown to the Mountain, and of no authority among unknown to the Mountain, and of no authority among the people. The whole affair looks rather too much like the police plots under Louis Philippe. No doubt there are plots concocted in France. We should be surprised if there were not. While public meetings are probibited, the press shackled, and spies employed; plots there always will be.

The "sensation" of the week is not, however, the fête of the 4th of May, or the bulletins of the secret societies. The hero of the hour is Emile de Girardin, who so often creates a stir in Paris. He has signed the following extraordinary statement in the La Presse:—

Presse :-

Press: —

"The flat contradiction," says M. Girardin, "given by M. de Persigny to General Changarnier" (on the subject of the conversation between these two personages, as noticed in one or two of my late letters), "and the unaccountable silence preserved by the ex-Commandant in-Chief of the Army of Occupation of Paris, render important and opportune the publication of two facts hitherto unknown. The first of these facts took place in the month of March, 1848. The seeme passed in the Ministry of the Interior, and in the cabinet of M. Ledru Rollin, then a member of the Previsional Government and Minister of the Interior. General

Changarnier entered, and proposed to M. Ledru Rollin that if 12,000 men were given him, with the liberty of making his own selections, he would land them in England, revolutionize the whole of Great Britain, and cause to be proclaimed there the same form of Government as in France—that is, the Republic.

"The second fact took place after the first. The scene passed in Algiers, on the 17th of June, 1848. General Changarnier was then Governor-General of Algeria. He placarded a proclamation to this effect:—'The Governor-General has received the following telegraphic despatch:—"The Commission of Executive Government, composed of MM. Arago, Garnier Pagès, Marie, Lamartine, and Ledru Rollin has retired. It is replaced by another commission of three members—namely, MM. Armand Marrast, Berger, and Cavaignac."—Algiers, June 18, 1848."

M. de Girardin asks, who could have sent this despatch if not General Cavaignac, who was then Minister at War? And he concludes that a plot existed to bring about the insurrection of June, 1818, for the ambitious aims of General Cavaignac. These charges are awkward for both of the Generals. Cavaignac will have to clear himself anew from a blasting imputation if allowed to go uncontradicted; and Changarnier, the Press of the Legitimists, must account for his alleged offer to the chief of the Mountain, the man of the omnipotent commissioners, to set up a republic in England. By the bye, the latter is a grotesque idea. The hottest republican would have met the 12,000 brethren with open arms, latter is a grotesque idea. The hottest republican would have met the 12,000 brethren with open arms, it is true, but they would have been sharp ones!

The military revolt in Portugal has been triumphant. After numerous and confident reports had been circulated everywhere of the utter failure of Marshal Saldanha, he suddenly turns up as in effect the dictator of Portugal! It is still said that he was driven to the last extre-It is still said that he was driven to the last extremity, out-generalled by the King, deserted by his troops, and in full retreat alone to the Spanish frontier. It is strange that so utterly reduced he should rise in a moment to be the chief of a successful revolt, if he had been really in so sad a condition. He had only to send to Oporto, and the troops pronounced in his favour. Count de Casal, the Governor there, he was obliged to retreat, and as Saldanha entered the city amidst songs of triumph, the Count de Thomar fled from Lisbon in disgrace. The Queen, unwilling to believe in defeat, instead of calling Saldanha to office, appointed Duke de Torceira, he whom gout drove from Santarem. The denouement has yet to be seen; for Saldanha only heads at present a military revolt, and no one really knows what political steps he will take, or what he will do for the liberty of Portugal.

We hear that the British Government has strongly protested against Spanish interference in this civil contest.

contest.

In Spain, polities run high. Democracy shows very strong in Madrid and Seville. The Progresistas will muster a respectable minority in the Cortes.

The news from Constantinople is important. The English policy has again been defeated by the Russian Minister, Titoff. Sir Stratford Canning and General Aupick advised the Sultan to set the Hungarian refugees at liberty, as the last term of their arrival at Kutaya. But the ambassadors of Russia and Austria entered a protest against this decision, pleading a supposed secret understanding between Kossuth, the German revolutionists, and the Italian patriots. A visit of the Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein paid to Kossuth and the presence of patriots. A visit of the Prince Frederick of Schles-wig-Holstein paid to Kosauth and the presence of M. Revis, an Its ian liberal, at Kutsya, are the facts to which the ambassadors allude, in order to give weight to their insinuations. The Sultan decided in favour of M. Titoff, and Kosauth is to be im-prisoned for two more months. English influence is, we are told, entirely baffled by Russian intrigue at Constantinople.

The Hungarians who turned Musselmen are to be employed in the Turkish army, and Guyon, who remained Christian, has been made a General of

NUNNERIES IN ENGLAND.

NUNNERIES IN ENGLAND.

The Catholic question is not destined to languish in obscurity. Many events contribute to keep alive the agitation. Besides the ominous postponement of the Ecclesiastical Titles Bill, there is Mr. Lacy's bill on religious houses, which will shortly come before the House of Commons; and two cases before Mr. Justice Coleridge, in the Bail Court, respecting the alleged libel on the Clapham Convent.

On the 12th and 20th of March last, the Morning Advertiser published an article insinuating that an illegitimate child had been born at the convent in Bedford-lane, Clapham Common. The first alleged libel was headed, "A New Order of Nuna," and intimated that a "novice," introduced by the medical man, had made her appearance, much to the surprise of the sisterhood. The second alleged libel was a speech delivered at one of the "Papal Aggression" meetings, by Mr. E Turner, in which the former libellous statement was repeated, slightly varied, but virtually the same, These statements were denied in affidavits, put into Court by Mr. Serjeant Shee, from two clergymen, the Rey, Mr. Simpson and the Rev.

MA

prevente trade qui in the sp

to captus when, i England his office equippe to resor these of under the fort when secompountion

probabi Govern Ministe and ass instruct
A con
Senhor Foreign
the the results and th

precise Sours. that o

Govern and lift effort induce tional engag Admi

bers, annot the v

publi

of J

the sagain

zilian

to pu anti-

Bix c

that July Gove Mr. Sour cons

strai

Mr. Dell, represented as being the "sole spiritual directors and advisers of the community;" by the surgeons, Mr. Taylor and Mr. Parrott, who attended the convent; and by the superior, Clarissa Noel. Affidavits had also been made by Josephine Laguesse, the sister superior of the convent of Notre Dame, at Blackburn, and of the ladies therein, all of whom had been members of the institution at Clapham; and Iphigenie de Paiva, the sister superior of the convent of Notre Dame, at Liverpool, and three ladies residents therein, who had also been residents of the same institution; all denying in the same terms the truth of any portion of the libels.

Mr. Serjeant Shee applied for and obtained a rule to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against David Scott, the printer and publisher of the Morning Advertiser, for the above-mentioned libels.

libels.

The second application, supported by the same affidavits, was made for a rule to show cause why a similar information should not be filed against the publisher of the Morning Herald for an alleged libel of a similar nature, published on the 20th of March last. The libel in the Herald is in the shape of a commentary on an article in the Dispatch, which appeared on the 15th of March. Thus the story of the alleged immorality found its way into the Morning Advertiser on the 12th; and on the 15th it was modified and apparently explained in the Dispatch, and on the 20th commented on, and the explanation rejected by the Morning Herald.

The rule was granted.

The rule was granted. As a commentary upon the above, we reprint from the Times the following letter in defence of Nunneries by Lady Arundell of Wardour:—

"Sir,—Unbecoming as it would have been on my part to have made the slightest attempt to stem the torrent of abuse which has been so unjustly showered on all that is dearest and most sacred to us Catholics, I eannot allow the day to arrive on which Mr. Lacy's bill against our religious houses will be brought before Parliament without making at least one effort for the sake of the dear inmates of those abodes of peace and charity, by calling on the more generous members of the House of Commons for protection and justice.

"To Catholic ladies, who, like myself, have sisters and relatives in convents, it is, indeed, humiliating and most painful, that in England, hitherto considered the land of liberty, we should be forced to exert our influence to save those loved ones from the grossest insuits, the most unmanly attempts now being made to deprive them of a security which even the meanest women slaves have insured to them. Can it be possible that to the members of the House of Commons heroic virtue is so hateful that no insult is too great to offer those who dedicate themselves to its con practice? Is divine charity so distasteful to English Protestants that ladies by devoting their lives to its various duties should become objects so contemptible that they are to be deprived by law of the liberty granted to the meanest of their sex, even to the most abandoned? Oh, that such a reproach on Englishmen should go forth to the world! Hatred of Catholicity is a poor plea for so cowardly, so wanton, an insult to ladies.

"Our countrymen must remember that those much abused convents are places in which nearly all the Catholic ladies have received their education, and though some few may have no relatives among the religious, yet the affection these bear their angelic the tenderness that persons will ever feel towards those whom from their earliest childhood they have respected and loved for their many virtues, their enduring kindness. Little do Protestants know the feelings of joy and happiness with which a lady returns to visit the convent where she has been educated; these are ever the brightest spots in her life, even be her lot among the happiest of this world. "To Catholics, who know by faith the day will come when these our spotless sisters will be fearfully averaged, and that those who now so cruelly insult and caluminate them will have to exclaim in the language of towards those whom from their earliest childhood and that those who now so cruelly insult and calumnate them will have to exclaim, in the language of scripture—'We fools esteemed their life madness and their end without honour. Behold how they are numbered among the children of God, and their lot is among the saints;'—that knowledge urges us the more to raise our warning voices, and call on those who know them not to beware how they insult them. "But if that consideration has no weight, oh let me implore those members who have sisters and daughters to ask themselves, ere they treat with insult our sisters and daughters, what would they feel were we to do the like to them? Would they consider any language too strong for their just indignation, and are our feelings one iota less keen because we look on those dear ones as the loved of God?

"But not to dwell at greater length on this too pain-those dear ones as the loved of God?

"But not to dwell at greater length on this too painful subject, allow me, who have been entirely educated in a convent, and through life in habits of intimacy with numerous members of religious communities, to ask those wno credit their calumniators, how is it, if any one of the many charges has the slightest foundation, that those who like me have the most experience should ever be the first to place their children in these very convents? What could any one desire more than that their daughters should be instructed by ladies of birth and the highest education, who are actuated not by worldly gain, but solely by the love of God and their neighbour? And here let me incidentally remark, that if Protestants would only reflect on these motives the prejudice regarding the apparent insignificance of the pension would at once be removed.

"The tenderness I feel for my children is, I hope, quite as strong as the warmest hearted mother can know, yet the sacrifice of parting with a daughter for a time I cheerfully make, rather than deprive her of that which I know will cause her to bless the parents who deny themselves a present pleasure to ensure her who deny themselves a present pleasure to ensure her the lasting advantage of a convent education. "Should these few remarks lead some of our more generous antagonists to hesitate ere they inflict cruel injuries on those who have never given them a moment's pain, I shall be more than rewarded for what it has cost me to address them in so public a

"With many apologies for trespassing so long on your courtesy, "I am, your obedient servant,

"Wardour Castle, May 3."

Archbishop Hughes, of New York, will leave Rome without the coveted red hat. The Bishops of America have decided that they can do without a Cardinal. The famous editor of the New York Herald is very magniloquent on the subject, and consoles the Archbishop in a strain of questionable familiarity, coupling himself and the not-appointed Cardinal in a way quite iocose to common mortals.

A CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS IN NEW YORK.

The most interesting news from America is, that a small constitutional crisis was at its height when the Africa sailed on the 23d of April.

In our last number we mentioned the scheme of Mr. Seaward for enlarging the Eric Canal, which connects the Western States with the Atlantic, by raisnects the Western States with the Atlantic, by raising a loan of 9,000,000 dols., so that the works may be carried on with vigour, instead of applying the surplus revenues of the canal as they accrue, the plan hitherto adopted. A bill to authorise this proceeding came before the Senate, and was opposed by the Locofocos, on the ground that it was "unconstitutional." They said that the loan was illegal, that the constitution guarded against involving the State in debt, and that no obligation to pay the debt contracted would remain after the work was finished. On the other hand, it is contended, that the constitution enjoins the completion of the enlargement, directs that the surplus revenues of the canal shall be applied for that purpose, but that it does not state how they for that purpose, but that it does not state how they shall be applied; whether as they accrue, yearly, or whether they shall be mortgaged for the payment of the necessary works—the proposition embodied in the bill. The partizans of the bill also contend, in opposition to its opponents, that not the State, but the revenues of the canal, will be pawned to pay the debt. The opposition are supported in its views of the illegality of the scheme by the opinion of the Attorney-General; and the advocates of the bill have fortified themselves by obtaining the sanction of Daviel Webster. debt. The opposition are su the illegality of the scheme Daniel Webster.

Each party has endeavoured to place the other in the invidious position of violators of the constitution. That instrument provides that a quorum of three-fifths is necessary to the legal enactment of any financial measure; and that a majority of two-thirds financial measure; and that a majority of two-thirds is necessary to the passage of certain other measures. When the bill came on for a third reading in the Senate, on the 17th of April, the opponents of the scheme found themselves in a minority; and they adopted a questionable expedient to get rid of the bill. Twelve senators resigned, and a thirteenth vacated his seat, thus making the senate incapable of legislation. This, it is urged, was a violation not only of the spirit of the constitution, but of the fundamental republican principle, that the will of the only of the spirit of the constitution, but of the tun-damental republican principle, that the will of the majority shall be law. But by this evasion the op-ponents of Mr. Seward frustrated his views, and that satisfied them. The consequence of this policy of the opposition was, that both Senate and Assembly at once adjourned; an extra session was called, and special elections ordered to replace the members who

The hidden meaning of all this appears to be, that the nine millions are looked upon by the opposition the nine millions are looked upon by the opposition as corruption money, to be expended in maintaining the Whigs in power; while their opponents maintain that the Locofocos have been bought off by the mothat the Locolocos have been bought off by the mo-nopolists and speculators. One thing only is clear, that the resignations, though not unconstitutional in fact, were so in effect; for they were false to the true republican principle, and, if a like policy were car-ried out often, constitutional government would be

JUDGE LYNCH IN CALIFORNIA.

The Lynching process continues in full action in and around the Sacramento. Horse stealing is a capital offence in the golden state. A teamster came up to the rancho of Messrs, Gage and Almond on the 14th of March, and informed them that "some men were below attempting to cross the river with stock, and were having a h—of a time." Mean, Gage and Almond, having keen wits, were naturally impressed with the idea that the men were hore thieves, and they started for the spot. On arriving there they discovered two men, whom they hailed—"What horses are those you have?" They replied that they were some horses of their own, and the they had brought them from Dry Creek. "Are they all yours?" said Mr. Gage. They replied. "Yes, all but one." "When did you leave Dry Creek?" said Mr. Gage. They replied that they had left then late this afternoon (Friday); and that they were taking the horses over to the American Fork. The acute Messrs. Gage and Almond. in company with two or three others, saw at once that the horses had been stolen from their own rancho, and belonged to themselves. "God — you, you have stolen thee horses," and at once arrested them. The men and horses were then taken back to the rancho, where horses," and at once arrested them. Ine men and horses were then taken back to the rancho, where strict inquiry was instituted. An examination was made of the brands on all the stock, and the brands were identical with those used by that firm, and each were identical with those used by that firm, and each and every animal fully recognised not only by Gage and Almond, but by others in attendance. The examination was made at the corral, and the evidence was perfectly satisfactory that the horses had just been stolen. They were perfectly dry and smooth, and exhibited conclusive evidence that they had not been driven any distance. Having proof of the felony to their satisfaction, short work was made of the alleged thieves. The crowd would not hear of their being tried by jury, but sentenced them by acclamation to be hung. Halfsa-hour was given them for "preparation" and confession. When this clapsed, the thieves begged hard to "live a little longer." Their captors gave the five minutes. When the allotted five minutes had elapsed they were told their time had come. Linias were brought, nooses made, and the wretches hung were brought, nooses made, and the wretches hung elapsed they were told their time had come. Larias were brought, nooses made, and the wretches hug up. The hanging ceremony took place at twelve o'clock at night; and when the reporter of the Sacramento Transcript left the rancho in the morning the bodies were still dangling to and fro; while beneath persons were engaged in digging two grave. The men had some ten or fifteen horses in their possession when they were taken, all of which were claimed by Gage and Almond.

"One of the reasons." says the Transcript "which

"One of the reasons," says the Transcript, "which induced the crowd to be so precipitous in their action was the late escape of Orville Hamilton, who had ben tried on the day before for a similar offence, and who, while the jury were out, effected his escape by changing his hat."

California progresses everywhere, if we may believe the Alta California:—

San Francisco is still constantly enlarging her bor-San Francisco is will constantly enlarging her bedeers, spreading on all sides, up the hills, filling the valleys, walking out towards and beyond North Best, towards the Presidio, to the south away towards and at the Mission, and especially into the harbour over the water lots, fast filling up the whole shallow part of the harbour in marly a straight line from Rincon Points the south to Clark's Point on the east side of the city. Beyond this streets are heliog constructed out through Beyond this streets are being constructed, cut through the rock at the base of the steep hills, and fronting the harbour and shipping. Large and well built brick stees now stand where only a few months since the water crak were dashing aside the waters of the harbour with their

Two new cities have been incorporated by the present Legislature—Marysville and Nevada. The first was no even "a place" one year ago; now it has a newspaper a mayor, eight aldermen, and prosperity.

But Nevada has been burned to the ground. Several rishmen were quarrelling in a wooden bowling-alley, and, it is said, one threatened to fire the city: for what reason does not appear. In the middle of the night of the 12th of March, however, the bowling-alley was fired, and the flames licked up the second of the city in about six hours are accounted when there was city in about six hours, ceasing only when there was nothing more to burn. The striking and singular part of the story is, that one man alone was missing and he only supposed to have been burnt.

THE SLAVE TRADE AND THE BRAZILS.

It is no small consolation to those who believe that It is no small consolation to those who believe the the trade in slaves is injurious to the grand interest of humanity to find that the Brazilian Government has resolved in earnest to suppress the abominable traffic; and it is no small annoyance to find likewise that obstacles of a singular nature are thrown in the way of that suppression by the British Government. For a long time there has been a tendency to discourage the slave trade under the Brazilian flag by the Imperial Government. It is very curious, indeed inexplicable, that while the slave trade was in fall vigour the British Government never cut out a sla from a Brazilian port; but that now, when Brazilia good faith is acting energetically in suppression of the traffic, the British Minister should be instructed so to act as to prevent, if possible, the enlighten Brazilian policy

A writer in the editorial columns of the Daily News, who is a master of the subject, has ably laid

The present Brazilian Ministry has boldly entered on the suppression of the slave trade. It came into power in September, 1848, and the first months of its existence were occupied by the revolutionary incidents which occurred in 1849 at Pernambuco, which prevented it at once turning its attention to the slave-irade question. But it lost no time in doing so; and in the spring of 1850 the Brazilian navy was directed neepture slavers. Several captures had been made, when, in July, 1850, the Sharpshooter arrived from England, bringing orders to Admiral Reynolds and list officers to capture vessels equipped, or being equipped in Brazilian waters; and, if necessary, to resort to violence in cutting them out Under these orders, the Riflemen seized a Brazilian ship under the guns of Paranagua, and battered down the four when its officers ventured to protect the property under the guns of Paranagua, and battered down the fort when its officers ventured to protect the property of their sovereign's subjects. These orders and their secompanying violence, of course, excited great indignation in Brazil; and public feeling would, in all probability, have overthrown the new policy of the Government, had not Mr. Hudson, the British Minister at Rio, and Admiral Reynolds interposed and assumed a responsibility at variance with the and assumed a responsibility at variance and assumed a response instructions from home.

tain. him. mire Se 28th

A conference took place between Mr. Hudson and Senhor Paulino de Souza, the Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, on the 13th of July, 1850, at which the state of affairs relative to the slave trade, Foreign Affairs, on the 13th of Juty, 1850, at which then state of affairs relative to the slave trade, the new policy of Brazil, and the new orders of the British eruisers, were largely discussed, and certain arrangements were concluded. Unfortunately the results of the conference were not reduced to writing, results of the conference were not reduced to writing, and there is some difference of statement as to their precise intent between Mr. Hudson and Senhor de Sours. Substantially, however, they come to this; that on the latter undertaking that the Brazilian Government should vigorously go on capturing slavers and liberating newly imported slaves, and that every effort should be made by the Brazilian Ministry to induce the Brazilian Chambers to pass laws of additional trinsparence for the publishment of all persons. tional stringency for the punishment of all persons engaged in the African slave trade, Mr. Hudson and Admiral Reynolds agreed, on their own authority, to Admira Reynoids agreed, on their own authority, to suspend the orders received by the Sharpshooter. On the 15th Senhor De Souza conciliated the Chambers, with a view to the proposed legislation, by amouncing "that he had well founded hopes that the violence committed in the territory of the empire would cease;" and before this announcement the would cease; and below this almouncement the public excitement gave way, and the Imperial Cabinet regained sufficient power to persist in its policy.

In further pure uance of its undertaking of the 13th of July, the Imperial Cabinet introduced and procured legislative sanction to the slave-trade law of cured legislative sanction to the slave-trade law or the 4th of September, 1850, which renders the laws against persons engaged in the African slave trade as severe in Brazil as in any other country either in Eu-rope or America. The execution of those laws is confided to a special judicial establishment; Bra-lian seniors at sea, and Brazilian police and milian cruisers at sea, and Brazilian police and soldiery all along the coasts of the empire are directed to put them in force; and to secure popularity for them, Government has encouraged the formation of anti-alavery societies. The consequences of this new policy were, that in the year 1850 no fewer than 2000 slaves, either taken on hoard alayers by Reguiling. poncy were, that in the year 1850 no fewer than 2000 slaves, either taken on board slavers by Brazilian cruisers or Africans newly imported which had been seized by the police, have been liberated; that some six or seven slave ships have been captured and condemned; that criminal proceedings have been instituted against some of the larger slave dealers, and there has been a panic amongst and a large emigration of that interest in Portugal. In short, the Imperial Cabinet had one gration of that interest in Portugal. In short, the Imperial Cabinet had every reason to suppose that its proceedings, under the arrangements of July 13, were eminently satisfactory to the British Government: when, on the 10th of January last, Mr. Hudson, in an interview, required of Senhor de Sousa, that Brazilian forts on the coast should be considered as men of war, and that British cruisers should have a right to claim their co-operation against Brazilian vessels lying under the guns of the forts; or, in other words, that Brazilian forts should be placed at the disposition of British men-of-war, and made to act against Brazilian property. This forts; or, in other words, the placed at the disposition of British men-of-war, and made to act against Brazilian property. This strange request Senhor de Souza declined to entertain. And next day, on the 11th of January, 1851, Mr. Hudson addressed a long and formal note to him, charging the Brazilian government with having failed to fulfil the agreement of the 13th of July receding, and announcing that the suspension of preceding, and announcing that the suspension of the orders brought out by the Sharpshooter to Ad-miral Reynolds had terminated.

Senhor de Souza replied to this document on the 28th of January last, showing that England treated Brazil with civility when she was engaged in the aver trade; but now that she was determined to suppress it, England treated her with less than justice Park suppress it, England treated her with less than jus-tice. But, in spite of this, Brazil will persevere in her enlightened policy, even though England should retain the obstacles she has placed in her way. The anti-slavery party might crack this Brazilian nut with Lord Palmerston, much to the advantage of the country and their cause.

PERSONAL NEWS AND GOSSIP.

The Exposition and its adjuncts are still town talk. The visits of the Queen, the projected reviews, the Fancy Ball to be held at Buckingham Palace in June, are among coming novelties; while of actual facts we have the deaths in the peerage, the state ball and the drawing-room, both more splendid than usual, owing to the distinguished foreigners present. But the Park and the streets are as gay and interesting as the Court in this merry month of May, 1851.

The Queen held a Drawing-room (the second this season) at St James's Palace, on Tuesday afternoon. Her Majesty and Prince Albert arrived at two c'clock from Buckingham Palace, attenued by the royal suite and escorted by the Life Guards. The drawing-room was numerously attended. Among others present were the Prince and Princess of Prussia, Prince Henry of the Netherlands, and Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar. The Queen wore a train of buff watered silk, having flowers of white and yellow brocaded on it. The train was trimmed with tulle, yellow ribbon, and bunches of lilac, ornamented with diamonds. The petiticoat was of white satin, with an upper skirt of blonde, trimed with bunches of lilac and tulle, and ornamented with diamonds, to correspond with the train. The head-dress was formed of diamonds and feathers, and a wreath of lilacs. The Princess of Prussia wore a train of blue silk, brocaded with silver, and trimmed with bonquets of blue flowers, with diamond ornaments. The stomacher was also decorated with brilliants. The petiticoat was of white watered silk, trimmed with flowers, to correspond with the train. The head-dress was composed of diamonds and feathers with flowers.

The Queen gave a state ball at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday evening to a most numerous and brilliant court, invitations having been issued to about 2100. Halfpast nine o'clock was the hour named, but before that time the nobility and gentry began to arrive at Buckingham Palace. The diplomatic corps, with their wives and daughiers, and the gentlemen of the household of the Queen, and the greatest brilliancy and splendour; and to these were added on this occasion, the cabinet ministers, and the Queen's aides-de-camp, all alighting at the garden entrance of the palace, while the general circle of visitors entered the palace by the front central portico. The whole of the gueens where the palace while the greatest brilliancy and splendour; and to these were added on this occasions, a quadrille band being partment, leading into the south end o at the Coburg Court, and insists on carrying on the suit through all stages.

The Earl of Bantry died at Glengariff-lodge, county Cork, on Friday night, in his eighty-fourth year. By his wife, Margaret Anne, daughter of William, frat Earl of Listowel, he had four sons and a daughter, the eldest of whom, Viscount Beerhaven, succeeds to the titles and estates of the deceased earl. Viscount Beerhaven married, in October, 1836, Lady Mary O'Bryen, third daughter of William Marquis of Thomond.

Viscount Newry, M P. for Newry, died at his residence, Carlton-terrace, on Tuesday. He was the eldest son of the Earl of Kilmorey, and was born in 1815. He married, in 1839, Anne Amelia, eldest daughter of the late Honourable Sir Charles Colville, G. C.B., and by her has had issue several children, including an infant born a few months since.

The death of Earl Cottenham, late Lord Chancellor, took place at the small town of Pietra Santa, in the

The death of Earl Cottenham, late Lord Chancelor, took place at the small town of Pietra Santa, in the Duchy of Lucca, on the 29th of April. Charles Christopher Pepys was born in the house of his father, in Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, in the year 1781. The family of Pepys was originally seated at Diss, in the county of Norfolk; but early in the sixteenth century it removed to Cottenham, in Cambridgeshire, from which place the noble and learned lord derived his title. Amongst his ancestors may be mentioned Samuel Pepys, the author of the Diary, and Secretary of the Admiralty in the time of Charles the Second; and Richard Pepys, who was appointed Lord Chief Justice of Ireland in the year 1664. William Weller Pepys, the father of the late Lord Chancellor, who held the office of a Master in Chancery, was created a baronet in the year 1801. This baronetey devolved upon the Earl of Cottenham, upon the death of his elder brother, without issue, in October, 1845. After graduating at Cambridge, he entered Lincoln's-inn as a student, and was called to the bar on the 23rd of November, 1804. Lord Elden, who was never slow in recognizing undoubted legal merit, conferred upon him a silk gown in Michaelmas term, 1826, and theneeforth from that period, up to his elevation to the bench, he was engaged in all those great contests in the Court of Chancery, in which his opponents were such men as Sir Edward Sugden, Sir James L. Knight Bruce, and the late Sir C. Wetherell. In 1830 he was appointed Solicitor-General to Queen Adelaide, and in 1834 was promoted to the office of Attorney-General. On the resignation of Lord Brougham, he was appointed Chief Lord Commissioner of the Great Seal, and in 1836 he was appointed Lord Chancellor. Hereigned that office in 1841, and was again appointed in 1846, and continued to hold the Great Seal, until compelled to retire from office, through ill health, in Easter Term, 1850.

According to present arrangements a series of reviews, military inspections, and sham fights, will take place in the vicinity of the metropolis as soon as the weather becomes more settled. The grand annual inspection of the household infantry, by Prince Albert and the Duke of Wellington, is fixed to take place on Thursday, the 29th instant. On the same day a review of the Royal Artillery, the Royal Engineer Corps of Sappers and Miners, the 17th Lancers, and the Woolwich Common by Fleld Marshal the Marquis of Anglescy, Master General o of Bridge Withou Stephen Hunter.

Stephen Hunter.

The Emperor of Russia has conferred the Grand Cross of the order of St. Anne on General Castelbajac, French Minister in St. Petersburg.

The King and Queen of Prussia intend to go to Warssaw to meet the Emperor and Empress of Russia, who are expected at the Polish capital soon after the middle of the present month. It is believed that the Emperor of Austria will also visit Warsaw at the same period.

The Duke of Nassau gave a grand festival on the 1st of May at his beautiful château at Biberich on the Rhine, near Francfort, to celebrate the installation of the new married duchess. The whole diplomatic Corps from the latter town attended on the occasion. The happy couple intend shortly making a series of visits to the neighbouring Courts, extending their journey as far as Stuttgardt and Cossel.

The christening of the young Prince of Meiningen and Cossel.

The christening of the young Prince of Meiningen will take place at Meiningen, upon the lst of May. Among the sponsors are their Prussian Majesties, and the Prince and Princess of Prussia, uncles and aunts to her Royal Highness the hereditary princess. The hereditary prince was a nephew to our late Queen Dowager, Adelaide.

Adelaide.

M. de Talleyrand, first secretary of the French Legation at St. Petersburg, has just married the Princess Nadège de Woronzoff, who belongs to one of the first families in the country.

The King of Greece arrived at Vienna on the 1st of May, and has taken up his residence in the palace of the Archduke Albrecht. After dining with the Emperor, he appeared at the Italian Opera.

The christening of the infant Grand Duke of Mecklenburg has drawn a large royal party to Ludwigslust, in the neighbourhood of Schwerin. The Kings of Prussia and Hanover are both among the guests. Lord Westmoreland left Berlin for the same purpose.

Mr. Dowton, the inimitable comedian, whose death took place last week, was born at Exeter in 1763, consequently he was in his 88th year. At the age of 16 he was articled to an architect, but having performed Carlos in The Resenge at a private theatre with good success, he was induced to relinquish building substantial castles to erect certain ones in the air, and joined a strolling company at Ashburton. He was subsequently engaged by Mr. Hughes, manager of the Plymouth theatre. His first apperaance at Drury-lane was on the 10th of October, 1796, in the difficult character of Sheva, in Cumberland's comedy of The Jeso. This had long been a favourite part of Bannister's—Elliston had also marked it for his own. Mr. Dowton stepped into the field, and, without taking the laurel from either, honourably shared badly we all the Wetteni material the other material the third train; a steam he was known the collision.

M

Jame

wetten down av the slipp and the Hurry, tail lam I afterwoo much may kn I afters

eame h
ron bel
I supp might and sp who w be safe.
wards i

a carrie the nex the en densely then of passen length passen finding guard then t

trance

Tile

evide

of th at C neco stati

does were the C tend amin

it with both. He was hailed as a genuine actor, and crowned with applause. In 1805 he was engaged at the Haymarket Theatre, and on the 15th of August in that year he revived for his benefit the warm weather tragedy of The Tailors, which produced that memorable fraces between the "dungs" and the "fints," and ended in the committal of three dozen and odd, and one rebellious carver and gilder, to the watchhouse. The principal roles in the burlesque were sustained by Dowton, Mathews, Liston, and Mrs. Gibbs, as Francisco, Abrahamides, Zachariades, and Tittllinda. The great success of Tom Thumb, in which Mr. Dowton played King Arthur very humorously, stimulated him to this attempt. His two principal Shakspearian characters were Sir John Faltaff and Dogberry. As Dr. Cantwell in The Hypocrite he was inimitable. His other best parts were Sir Anthony Absolute and Major Sturgeon. With the proceeds of his farewell henefit at Her Majorsh's Theatre a few years since an annuity was purchased, on which he lived to a "fine green old age," happy in the bosom of his family and a large circle of professional and private friends.

The Reverend J. Kenrick, whose name has been so proand a large circle of professional and private friends.

The Reverend J. Kenrick, whose name has been so prominently brought before the public in consequence of his refusal to bury, at Chiebester, a Dissenting minister and a poor woman who had destroyed herself in a fit of insanity, has resigned the vicarages of St. Peter the Great, Chiebester, value £160, and of North Marden, value £65; to which the Reverend T. Bayly has been promoted.

moted.

The Reverend Mr. Longmuir, of Aberdeen, made an experiment in his own church the other day, to demonstrate the rotation of the earth. To the great confusion of the assembled savans the machine indicated that the earth was turning the wrong way.

A skeleton of the ancient Scotch elk was discovered the other day in boring the rock in Mr. Dove's quarry, at Nitshill, under a bed of moss, about six feet below the surface. The skeleton appeared to be lying on its face, interlaid on the clay which immediately overlies the rock to the depth of four or five feet. The vertebræ measured from the skull seven-and-a-half feet, and in attempting to remove the bones the greater part crumbled into dust; however, the crown of the skull and the root of the antlers are quite entire and attached; their tips extend six and

however, the crown of the skull and the root of the antiers are quite entire and attached; their tips extend six and a half feet asunder, and their blades measured nine inches broad.—Glasgow Post.

The British Museum was reopened to the public on Monday, and will continue to be accessible to visitors on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, from ten till seven o'clock throughout the summer. In addition to the new Assyrian gallery, a portion of the library was thrown open for the first time to visitors.

for the first time to visitors.

The Great Peace Congress to be held in London this summer will open its sittings on Tuesday, July 22, and will continue for several days during that week. The above time has been selected after extensive correspondonce with influential gentlemen in America and on the

At an evening party recently, it was proposed to dis-pose of the belle of the room by lottery. Twenty tickets were immediately sold at a fixed price. The joke ended not here. The fortunate adventurer has since married the lady.

The first Floral Exhibition of the season took place at The first Floral Exhibition of the season took place at Chiswick, and, of course, the weather was unpropitious. During the past year considerable improvements have been made in the grounds. Many duplicate and worthless species of trees and shrubs have been removed; the shrubbery adjoining the long broad walk round the shrubbery adjoining the long broad walk round the south-east and south sides of the gardens has been completed; the walk itself has been gravelled and furnished with seats; a new flower garden formed, which ere long will be the seene of an exhibition of American plants, by Mr. Hosea Waterer; and various other portions of the grounds newly laid out with additional walks. But, alas! on Saturday all these improvements were of no avail, for nobody could enjoy them; every person that did visit the gardens, and the number was very few, being glad to avail themselves of the shelter offered by the tents of Mr. Benjamin Edgington, beneath which the flowers were principally exhibited. The bands of the Coldstream Guards, the First Life Guards, and the Horse Guards (Blue), were in attendance, and played the Coldstream Guards, the First Life Guards, and the Horse Guards (Blue), were in attendance, and played several favourite marches, waitzes, polkas, &c., during the afternoon, but all their efforts to entiren the company proved of little avail in opposition to the blighting influence of the weather. In the early part of the morning, we observed the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke and Duchess of Satherland, and other members of the nobility amongat the company, but they, like the majority of other persons, soon retired to find a more genial place in which to spend their time.

Mr. Dyce Sombre has again applied, through Mr. Rolt, to the Lord Chancellor, for an inquiry into the state of his mind. The peculiarity of the case in this instance is, that the Lord Chancellor was formerly counsel for Mr. Dyce Sombre, and, therefore, he called Vice-instance is, that the Lord Chancellor was formerly counsel for Mr. Dyce Sombre, and, therefore, he called Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce to sit with him. The case itself did not differ from preceding suits. The same opposition was manifested by Mrs. Dyce Sombre, and allegations made as to the sensual irregularities of her husband. In addition to this it was argued that Mr. Dyce Sombre had published libels against his next of kin, Madame Solaroli and Mrs. Troup. After hearing the case, Vice-Chancellor Knight Bruce thought that a new examination ought to be made, and in this opinion the Lord Chancellor concurred.

At a meeting of the council of chairmen of the Metropolitan Commission, presided over by Prince Albert, it

At a meeting of the council of chairmen of the Metro-politan Commission, precided over by Prince Albert, it was unanimously resolved to invite the Foreign Commis-sioners to an entertainment. The invitation will be ex-tended to the foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, and the pri cipal members of the Royal Commission Execu-tive. The banquet is to be on a scale of great splendour, and is intended to maintain our national character for hospitality.

hospitality.
Sion House, the suburban mansion of the Duke of Northumberland, with its state apartments, conserva-tories, and pleasure grounds, was thrown open to the Northumbertand, with a state aparthesis, conservatories, and pleasure grounds, was thrown open to the public on Tuesday.

Robert Coombes beat Mackinny after a hard race by a dozen lengths. He remains therefore champion of the Thames and the Tyne.

The Cardinal Patriach at Venice was taken ill during the celebration of mass on Easter Sunday, and compelled to quit the church. He was carried home forthwith, and received medical sid; but a violent inflammatory fever came on, and upon the fifth day (April 25) he expired.

Dr. Beke has been making long exploations on the Egyptian side of Africa. He expects that the missionary efforts for that part of Africa will have their centre in the region of Uniamesi, or "of the Moon." Among these mountains Dr. Beke saw a volcano in an active state. In the same region he found there was a vast lake named Vanmbiro. Some of the mountain peaks are above the snow line, glittering in perpetual whiteness.—Philadelphia Colonization Herald.

It may, perchance, be a matter of more than ephemeral phia Colonization Herald.

It may, perchance, be a matter of more than ephemeral interest to many cheraliers d'industrie, who have visited our shores to practically demonstrate, in their own persons, the "industry of all nations," on the hearth of John Bull, to notify the fact that Herr Felzenthal, the Daniel Forester of the Viennese capital, and the vigilant M. Stieber, the police agent of Berlin, have been among the most recent and not least important arrivals in London.

the most recent and not feast important arrivals in London.

The new postal arrangements for the city of Berlin came into force on May 1st. There are now twelve daily deliveries on week, and six on Sundays—an embarras de richesses in a city of the size of the Prussian capital, especially as regards the later deliveries, seeing that bankers, merchants, and shops shut up, generally speaking, before the last two deliveries.

The Augsburg Algemeine Zeitung announces that a few days before the departure of King Otho from Munich, the succession to the throne of Greece was settled on Prince Adalbert, on the condition that his children should become members of the Greek Church.

The grand jury of the United States' District Court at Boston has brought in new bills of indictment against Elizur Wright, one of the editors of the Commonwealth newspaper, and others, for aiding in the rescue of the University is peaked.

fugitive slave.

California is probably the greatest country in the world for precocious youths. Boys from ten to sixteen years of age, who, in the Atlantic cities, would be either at school or apprenticed to some useful trade, are found here upon our streets, wharees, and in our saloons, with a pile of gold before them, offering to "bet a hundred dollars that no gentleman can pick up the ace of spades," or betting their hundreds at faro or monte.—San Francisco Herald.

The steem while Count was a supported to the property of the same ship Country of the same ship cisco Herald.

The steam-ship Great Western, of the West India line, was at Chagres on the 8th March, taking in about half a million of specie sterling for England.

The New York and Erie Railway is finished, and in a few days passengers will pass from Donkirk on Lake Brie to New York in a single day. The distance is about 400 miles. Great preparations are making to celebrate the day of its opening. This is one of the greatest efforts of modern times. It is equivalent in value to the Erie Canal, and opens vast regions to the commerce of New York. New York

Erie Canal, and opens wast regions to the commerce of New York.

An extraordinary case was lately submitted to the civil tribunal of the Seine. The widow, elder son, and other children of Naundorff, the Prussian watchmaker, who represented himself to be the son of Louis XVI., and who assumed the title of the Duke de Normandie, brought an action against the Duchess d'Angoulème and the Count de Chambord, the object of which was to compel them to recognize him as the legitimate son of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, and, consequently, to declare that the register of his death in the Temple, said to have taken place on the 8th of June, 1795, was false. M. Jules Favre supported the pretensions of the applicants in a long speech, which he had not concluded when the court rose. The case was put off for a fortnight. Naundorff, it may be remembered, died at Delft, in Holland, in August, 1845.

On the arrival of the Aranjuez train at the Pinto station one day last week, the passengers were much supprised at not finding the Madrid train, which they expected would have already arrived at Pinto. It was soon ascertained that a slight accident had happened to some of the waspons during the pressing of which the passengers at not finding the Madrid train, which they expected would have already arrived at Pinto. It was soon ascertained that a slight accident had happened to some of the waggons, during the repairing of which the passengers all assembled in the third-lass waggons, and gaitars and wine being forthcoming, a noisy bail took place in which grandees of the first class, ladies of the highest lineage mixed in the merry groups with the manolas and chulos of Lavapies. With so much spirit was the ball kept up, that when the second train arrived, it was with general reluctance that the festivity was put an end to.

The honours and medals conferred on artists for the Paris Exhibition of 1851 were delivered by the Minister of the Interior on Saturday. M Decamps has been promoted to the rank of Officer of the Legion of Honour, and MM. Diaz, Jollivet, Leon Fleury, Maxime David, Eugène Girand, Desbourds, and Achille Lefevre have been appointed chevaliers of the same order. A great number of gold and silver medals were also distributed.

M. Menne, a Belgian, had the ticket 334,146 in the Artists' Lotters, which was the new consenses.

number of gold and silver medals were also distributed.

M. Menne, a Belgian, had the ticket 334,146 in the Artists' Lottery, which won the prize of a statue by Pradier, in gold, silver, and ivory, represented to be worth 20,000f., and a gold medal. On applying for the statue, he was requested to wait a few days, as he was told it was not terminated. En attendant, a gold medal, or rather a sum of 5,000f, the value of the medal, was offered him. Having read an announcement in the newspapers that the statue was to be sent to the Exhibition of London, M. Menne brought an action against the directors of the lottery to compel them to give it up to him. They in return demand that, as a foreigner, M. Menne should be obliged to deposit a sum of money as security for the costs. The case was argued on Saturday beford the Civil Tribunal, and the judgment was put as beford the Civil Tribunal, and the judgment was put at for a week.

The fast trains between Berlin and Cologne, and rive versa, commenced running on the last of May, as will as a night train between Cologne and Ostend. Letters from Berlin, therefore, will gain twelve hours, and those from Vienna twenty-four. The London mails, also, will arrive some hours sooner.

A curious meteorological phenomenon has just taken place at Lardabourg, in Calabria. A luminous meter was perceived to fall on a barn, which it set on fire. Professor Tosti, who has given an account of the matter, mentions that this is only the second time that such mevent has been known to take place. The other case occurred on the 13th of June, 1759, at Captiena, near Bazas, in France. The meteor there also set fire to a barn, in which a beggar had taken refuge. He was arrested under a charge of insendiarism, and taken to Bordeaux. He declared in the most solemn manner that he was innocent, but he would, notwithstanding, have been certainly condemned had not the Abbé Nollet, then celebrated as a natural philosopher, examined the premises, and having found among the rubbish the aeroling that had fallen. exerted himself in favour of the past mises, and having found among the rubbish the that had fallen, exerted himself in favour of the man, and got him acquitted. The phenomenon me by Professor Tosti was witnessed by several person

THE CHESHIRE RAILWAY SMASH

THE CHESHIRE HAILWAY SMASH.

Last week we gave a brief account of this deplosable accident. We now recapitulate the facts.

Wednesday week was the great race day at Chester, and trains were arranged to run all day as fast as they filled. The train, heavily laden, which left the sistion about seven o'clock, went at fair speed to Fresham, entered the long tunnel there, and then, parily for want of steam, and partly owing to the wetness of the rails, it stuck fast in the tunnel. Naturally the passengers became alarmed. The tunnel was of the rails, it stuck fast in the tunnel. Naturally the passengers became alarmed. The tunnel was quite dark, and rapidly filled with steam and smeke. Some people began to think of getting out, other were lighting paper with lucifers, and burning small torches, when some one assured them that it was "all right," and that the train would proceed immediately. In this state of suspense they remained about half an hour; when the noise of a train approaching from healing increased the slare and raised the from behind increased the alarm, and raised the actiement to an intolerable pitch, when the advancing ran into the stationary train. No material damage we done by this concussion. The excitement now became unbearable. Passengers were all inquiring what was the matter, and some for a long time get no answer. The wildest schemes were pro Suddenly the bellowing of another train was above the confusion in the tunnel: it came on at a above the confusion in the tunnet; it came on a samart pace; nearer and nearer; and then crash into the hindmost train, smashing the carriage, throwing the passengers in all directions, the engine itself leaping up, and turning off the rails. The scene now became intensely horrible. Shriek seene now became intensely horrible. Shrish mingled with the din of the ecaping steam, darkner rendered denser by the steam and smoke enveloped all. At length lights were brought, and what was then seen and endured will be best described in the words of those who saw and suffered.

An inquest has been held at the Red Lion, Pres Brook, upon the bodies of six passengers, killed on that night. Extracts from the evidence will convey a lively idea of what took place.

Mr. Clarke, of Cuddington-lodge, near Bolton, we travelling with his sisters-in-law, Mrs. Ridgway at Mrs. Wetenhall, both of whom were killed. The went in the second train. In the tunnel, he says:

went in the second train. In the tunnel, he says:

"I called out through the window to some persons in another carriage and proposed that we shoul get out and walk; but some one replied that there was ne danger, as persons had been sent to both ends of the tunnel with signal lights to stop other trains from entering. I did not perceive any lights in the tunnel, and it was very dark. A few minutes after I felt the shock from a collision. It was a very violent shock. I and Mr. Ridgway were on one side of the carriage, and Mr. Wettenhall was opposite her sister. I was thrown from my seat by the collision, and it appeared to me that the carriage was shattered to pieces. I was not much but, and immediately set about seeking my relatives. I could my seat by the collision, and it appeared to me that the carriage was shattered to pieces. I was not much but, and immediately set about seeking my relatives. I could find no one at first, it was so dark, but at length I felt the legs of Mrs. Ridgway, who appeared to be suspended among the fragments of the carriage top, and I stempted to pull her down. I could not see anything of Mrs. Wettenhall or find her. I remained in the earning eight or ten minutes, and then some one came with a lantern."

Thomas Newell, brother to James Newell, killed said:—

"I was knocked down, and the next carriage behind us came on to the top of ours. I did not see what became of my brother then, but on looking for him in about ten or fifteen minutes I found him lying under lecarriace, the wheels of which had been knocked from under it. I believe he was then dead. I went away and got into a hole at the side of the tunnel to be out of danger."

Mr. Taylor, Superintendent of the D division of the Manchester police, who rode in the third train, described what he did after the shock :-

"I asked what was the matter, but for nearly half an hour got no answer. A man then came with a light, and I learnt that a casualty had occurred. I walked up to the engine of our own train, and found it off the line, and that a heap of sarriages were smasshed to pieces, blocking up the tunnel. I saw Dr. Leete, of Newton, taken out, hadly wounded, and I assisted to take out the bodies of all the dead from among the broken carriages. Mrs. Wettenhall was sitting upright, fast among the broken materials, for more than half an hour. The bodies of Wettenhall was sitting upright, fast among the broken materials, for more than half an hour. The bodies of the others were lying all together among the wreck of materials. I asked William Dixon, the engine driver of the third train, how it was he had run into the other train; and he said the tunnel was so full of smoke and steam he could not see a yard before him, and that he was knocked down and himself rendered insensible by another.

James Haddock, engineer, Warrington, gives the James Handbock, tagnetes, variages, lives the following graphic account. He went by the second train:

"I was in the next carriage to the deceased, Mrs. Wettenhall. After the train stood still, I put the window down and heard the engine wheels slipping. I suppose the slipping would arise from the dropping of the tunnel and the steam acting on the rails. A companion, Mr. Hurry, said to me, 'Haddock, I'll get out and see if the till lamp is lighted, 'and he afterwards told me it was. I afterwards heard him call and say, 'Haddock, there is so much steam, and it is so dark, keep calling out that I may know where to find you.' I did as he told me, till I alterwards felt his hat under the window. A guard same by and held a light, and Hurry said. 'Guard, run behind us as fast as you can, and give a signal.' I suppose he meant to warn the next train that might come up. I got out of the carriage myself and spoke to Mrs. Ridgway and Mrs. Wettenhall, who were much alarmed, and told them all would be safe. I then heard a train advancing and stepped towards it, putting my hand to the wall. I had got about a tarriage length from our own train when the engine of the next train passed me and ran into our train. I heard the engine but could not see it, the tunnel was so densely filled with steam. I stood still a moment, and then observed that the engine was off the rails. I then turned round and tried to pass the last train, but the passengers jumping out upon me impeded me. At length I found a tail light in the last train, which some passengers had in one of the carriages, and with that, finding my way much better, I ran with it till I met a guard with a hand lamp and exchanged with him. I then took him, with the red light, to the Frodsham entrains from coming up, telling him, as he valued his life, not to move. I then returned again to the trains, but found the way blocked up with broken carriages."

Ultimately the killed and wounded were carried on to the next station, at Moore; the engine of the first

Ultimately the killed and wounded were carried on to the next station, at Moore; the engine of the first train being then compelled to unyoke and go to Warrington for water.

The evidence given by the officers of the line, who were examined in order that the causes of the accident might be ascertained, is most voluminous. Mr. Gilson, the secretary to the company, was interro-gated as to the arrangements on the line, which were t special, but general, on the day of the accide important evidence is that of Mr. Brage, locomotive superintendent and engineer of the Chester and Birkenhead portion of the line. His stidence clearly showed that the cause of the stop-page of the trains was the wetness of the rails, the want of water, and the dispressions of the rails. int of water, and the disproportion of the weight the engines to the weight of the train. He, howof the engines to the weight of the train. He, however, had thought that he had proportioned the engines to the work they had to perform. Mr. Bragge spoke very highly of the engineers. Mr. Robert Lewis Jones detailed the plans adopted at the station at Chester for the purpose of providing additional scoommodation on the race days; and Mr. Critchly, station master, declared that 20 minutes elapsed between the starting of each train. He also said:—
"I attached no light to the third train, as I expected it would arrive at Manchester long before dark—about eight o'clock I knew there was a unnel upon the line, between Chester and Walton, but did not know its length until the night of the accident. Had I known of that tunnel I should not have attached lights to the first three trains on account of the intervals between the departure of the trains, which would allow one train to get parture of the trains, which would allow one train to get through before the following train entered. It rests with me to see that tail-lights are attached to the trains, if I

From the evidence hitherto before the public it does not appear that adequate or any precautions were taken, or that any accident was anticipated by the authorities. We await the verdict of the jury.

Captain Laffan, the Government inspector, has at-nded the whole inquest, and taken part in the ex-

THE WESLEYAN CHAPEL SYSTEM.

Lord Cranworth gave judgment on Wednesday pon a case which embodies the principal features of esleyan Chapel system, in relation to the Wes the Wesleyan Chapel system, in relation to the Wesleyan Reformers.

In July, 1814, a chapel then recently built at Holt, in Norfolk, was conveyed to trustees in fee, that certain sums nece-sary to the repairs of the chapel should be raised by mortgage. It is chapel was to be used by the preachers appointed by the Methodist Conference, constituted under a deed dated in 1784, and framed under the direction of John Wesley. At the same time, 1814, provision was made that at any time the majority of the trustees might, if they thought fit, sell this chapel and build or putchase one more commodious. Mr. William Hardy, in 1821, advanced £700 for the purpose of building a new chapel, in accordance with this proviso, secured upon the old chapel by a mortgage, which was then demised to Jeremiah Cozens, a trustee for Hardy, for a term of 1900 years. William Hardy further agreed that the £700 should be considered as £350. In October 1837, it was deemed necessary to build the new chapel; and a piece of ground was conveyed to the trustees, on the same trusts as were contained in a deed dated in 1837, called the "model deed;" which provided that the chapel should be for the use of the Methodists, and for such preachers only as should be appointed by the Conference. The deed further provided that it should be lawful for the majority of the trustees to mortgage the ground and chapel, in order to carry out the deed. The trusts of the new did not vary materially from the trusts of the new did not vary materially from the trusts of the new chapel, but supplied the funds; and in May, 1838, a demise was made to J. Colman, as a trustee for Hardy, to secure £500. Jeremiah Cozens therefore became entitled to the mortgage of William Hardy and entitled to hold it as a security for £600. William Hardy died in June, 1842, having appointed William Hardy, cozens Hardy, and Jeremiah Cozens, executors, who both proved his will, and Jeremiah Cozens died, and made W. H. C. Hardy his executor, who proved his will, and became entitled to the mortgage term of 1000 years, and also, as surviving executor of William Hardy, to the mortgage of £600. Such being the state of the property and title, it is important to direct attention to the organization of the Wesleyan body under the deed of 1784. According to the provisions of that deed, the whole body was divided into classes, presided over by class leaders, and these were divided into societies, and a number of these societies formed a district, subject to the superior governing body called a Conference, formed of 100 preachers who were elicalected in number of these societies formed a district, subject to the superior governing body called a Conference, formed of 100 preachers, who were self-elected in in July and August. In 1850, the Conference appointed the Rev. W. Worker and George Badcock to the ministry of the chapel; Worker being the preacher. This gave offence to the main body of the congregation; and many of the trustees, both of the old and new chapel, took part with those who called themselves "Wesleyan Reformers." Hardy, in May, 1850, applied to Curteis, the surviving trustee of the old chapel, and claimed his mortgagemoney; this not being forthcoming, the chapel was advertised for sale on Friday, the 14th, and was put up and sold to the defendant Turner for £200, and up and sold to the defendant Turner for £200, and up and sold to the defendant Turner for £200, and Turner paid that sum to Hardy, and Hardy, as mortgagee, and Hardy, Curteis, and Johnson, as trustees of the new chapel, and who all took part with the reformers. Since the conveyance the old chapel had been used by the "Reformers," and it was alleged in a manner wholly at variance with the deed of 1814. In September last Hardy transferred his mortgage the Hills of trustee for Column and Hill and in gage to Hill, as trustee for Colman and Hill, and in the beginning of the present year, brought an action of ejectment.

The action was brought by the Conference party to restrain the trustees from acting with reference to the chapel under the trusts of the indenture of 1814 and 1837; and to restrain Hill from proceeding with his action of ejectment.

Lord Cranworth stated his own view of the case and delivered judgment accordingly. A point had been raised as to whether the sale to Turner was valid; but Lord Cranworth thought the validity of the sale had nothing to do with the question, as whether valid or not, the transaction gave Turner all the title which Hardy had as mortgagee. When the sale took place he had himself a legal title to the term of 1000 years in the old chapel as a security for the £200. Tur-ner paid that sum to him, and he concurred in the conveyance to Turner, so that whatever rights Hardy had prior to the sale were effectually transferred to Turner, and Lord Cranworth was of opinion that Hardy, as mortgagee, had a right to assert a title adverse to the trust, and that he, or any one claiming under him by virtue of that title, had the right to use the chapel for any purpose he might think fit, with-out being at all bound by the trusts of the deed of 1814. The deed which in 1814 gave power to raise money on mortgage, of necessity gave power to create a title paramount to that of the trustee, and, "as an incident to that title, the right to use the (old) chapel in any way, whether in conformity or in opposition to the trusts of the deed." Lord Cranworth came to the conclusion that Hardy had a right to insist on his title as mortgagee, and whatever rights he had were now effectually vested in Turner; and the only relief to be had against him must be in a regular suit to redeem upon an offer to pay the money due; and this disposed of the questian as to the old chapel.

disposed of the questian as to the old chapel.

With respect to the new chapel, the mortgage was transferred to Hill, and upon the grounds of the judgment as to the old chapel, Hill had a right to assert his title as mortgagee, and bring an ejectment to obtain possession. Lord Cranworth thought Hardy himself and his trustees might have done so, and therefore of course Hill might. To stop execution on the ejectment, the £600 was brought into court, on an arrangement that it should abide the judgment of the Court. In the absence of such arrangement, an injunction to restrain Hill's taking possession could only be simply refused; and, therefore, all that could now be done was to order possession to be given him, unless the plaintiffs agreed to pay the £600 out to him; he might then be dismissed, and Hardy would be chargeable with all sums come to him as trustee, and which he ought to have applied to pay off the

and which he ought to have applied to pay off the mortgage.

That really is the whole case. But a sort of supplementary relief was asked of the Court by the petitioners. They wanted Hardy and the other trustees of the new chapel, to be restrained from acting under the deed of October, 1837; and this was demanded on the ground that Hardy and Colman had been expelled from the Methodist body. As to this, it is enough to say that they disputed the validity of their expulsion, and, on looking at the rules, it seemed doubtful to Lord Cranworth whether they were not right; at all events, there was no such urgency as to warrant the Court in interposing by a summary remedy. The only breach of trust charged was the assistance given in enforcing the mortgage. Under all these circumstances, though at the hearing it might be proper to appoint new trustees in the place of those who indicated, at least, a want of sympathy with the feelings of those of whose rights they were the guardians, Lord Cranworth saw no present ground for interfering on the present motion, which he dismissed, but made no order as to costs. As to the plaintiffs' right to sue, he expressed no opinion.

A LUNATIC WITNESS.

In the Court of Exchequer, on Saturday, a case came up from the Old Bailey relating to the admissi-bility of testimony by a witness partially lunatic, One of the assistants in Peckham lunatic asylum bad been tried for cruelty to a pauper lunatic, at Peckham, and the chief witness against him was an in-mate of the asylum, named Donelly, who laboured under the delusion that he was possessed by evil spirits. His evidence had, however, been received on the trial by Mr. Justice Coleridge. An objection was now taken to the examination of the witness on was now taken to the examination of the witness on the ground that he was non compos mentis. Mr. Collier, on behalf of the prisoner, went into a long argument, citing various old writers, to prove that a lunatic's evidence is not admissible. Sir Frederick Thesiger, who appeared for the prosecution, was about to argue in support of the validity of the evi-dence, when he was interrupted by Lord Campbell, who said the court did not consider it necessary for him to say anything on the subject. It appeared who said the court did not consider it necessary for him to say anything on the subject. It appeared that Donelly had always been rational, except on the point relating to spirits. The counsel for the prisoner argued that insanity on a single point—his teatimony upon any matter whatever—was altogether inadmissible. But such a doctrine would lead to very serious consequences, because it would not only shut out evidence which would go to prove guilt, but also evidence to prove innocence. Mr. Justice Talfourd said if the doctrines urged by the learned counsel were admitted it would go far to invalidate all testimony, for many of the greatest minds were at counsel were admitted it would go far to invalidate all testimony, for many of the grestest minds were at times subject to delusions. Martin Luther believed that he had struggles with the devil, and Dr. Johnson thought he had conversations with his mother long after her death. Lord Campbell remarked that Socrates would also have been inadmissible as a witness. He had not a legion of spirits as in this case, but he certainly believed that he was possessed with one spirit.—The conviction confirmed.

THE HOUSEHOLD NARRATIVE CASE.

The case of the Attorney-General v. Bradbury and Evans, for publishing the Household Norrative, on

The case of the Attorney-General v. Bradbury and Evans, for publishing the Household Norrative, on paper not duly stamped, which has been kept back so long, came on for trial in the Court of Exchequer, on Wednesday. Mr. Crompton opened the case. He said the information varied the charge, and claimed £20 for each offence. The defendants pleaded nil debent; and, the question being one of law—whether or not the publication, the subject of the proceedings, was a newspaper chargeable with stamp duty—a special case for the opinion of the court was stated under the order of Mr. Baron Parke.

The Attorney-General said the case was one of some importance to the revenue, and it depended altogether upon whether the Household Narrative falls within the description of paper in the schedule to the 6 and 7 Will. IV., c. 76. A discussion followed as to whether the law contemplated the including monthly publications within its provisions; even the Attorney-General did not seem to be at all clear on that head. The Lord Chief Baron said if there was any way in which the court could construe the Revenue Act so as to exclude the burden upon the subject, they were bound to do so. Mr. Peacock remarked that if they applied that rule, the Crown could not succeed.

The Attorney-General said the Household Narrative.

The Attorney General said the Household Narrative The Attorney-General said the Household Nurrative was a most respectable and ex-ellent production, and the parties connected with it deserved the utmost consideration, both as individuals and as members of the literary world. But the more successful it was, the greater probability of other persons publishing works of the same description, and, consequently, a serious inroad would be made in the revenue, unless they were subject to stamp duty. He argued that the defendants were liable, and should be made re-

The Lord Chief Baron said the court would take time to consider their judgment.

FAST WOMEN IN HYDE-PARK.

An amusing episode occurred at a meeting of the vestry of St. Marylebone on Saturday. After some talk regarding an opposition to the sewer's rate, Mr. Nicholay called the attention of the vestry to the infringement on the public rights by the appropriation of an equestian drive in Kensington-gardens. They of an equestian drive in Kensington-gardens. They were told that it was only for a time; but once let the horsemen into the gardens, and they would find it very difficult to put them out. He wished Sir Benjamin Hall to say what course they ought to adopt. Sir Benjamin could give no advice. Lord Seymour had wished to make the drive on the north side of the Serpentine, but the Duke of Wellington declared that he could not give up any portion of that side of the peak. side of the park.

side of the park.

Sir Peter Laurie said he had met a gentleman on the previous day in the Crystal Palace who was in a position to know something about it, and he told him that the drive in Kensington-gardens would not be persevered with. It would be no doubt a great injury to foot passengers. He (Sir Peter Laurie) often took a ride himself in Rotton-row, and he thought the aristocracy could do there very well without a ride in Kensington-gardens. (Hear.) He had heard a great deal about improper women in the metropolis, but he thought the most improper women, and whom the Government or the authorities of the parks ought to look after, were what he called fast women.

authorities of the parks ought to look after, were what he called fast women.

Mr. Broughton (the police magistrate): Will Sir Peter tell us what a fast woman is? (Laughter.)

Sir Peter Laurie: I have already stated from the bench that the police ought to look after these fast women, who

Sir Peter Laurie: I have already stated from the bench that the police ought to look after these fast women, who ride through the parks at a furious rate, but who have always a "snob" to ride with them. (Laughter.) In Hyde-park there are plenty of these women, and "snobs" to accompany them; and what I want is to see a stop put to the riding of these women and their "snobs" in the park. (Continued laughter.)

Mr. Broughton: Sir Peter Laurie charged me with having been afraid to deal with his "fast women" and "snobs." (Great laughter.) I deny the charge, for I always have the courage to deal with—

Chairman (the Reverend Dr. Spry): It is a most improper subject, and if persevered in I will quit the chair. It's a subject not fit to be heard.

Mr. Broughton: I did not originate it.

Chairman: I don't care for that; they who continue it are as bad as those who originated it. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Whitmore said then he would move a resolution expressive of indignation at the attempt to deprive the public of the promenade recreation which Kensington-gardens afforded, and for which it was destined. He moved—"That this vestry desire to express its indignation at the attempt which is about being made to form an equestrian drive in Kensington-gardens, since, in its present condition, it is peculiarly adapted, and especially advantageous, for the comfort and convenience of children, invalids, and pedestrians generally."

The resolution, having been seconded, was carried unanimously.

RIBANDISM IN IRELAND.

Agrarian vengeance is again stalking forth over Ireland, leaving a track of death and blood over the Freiand, leaving a track of death and blood over the fertile soil.

Some weeks ago Samuel Coulter, who farms 100 acres at Shoratone, about three miles from Dundalk, caused notices of ejectment to be served on several of his tenantry. On Friday week he mounted his horse and set out at nine o'clock to go to the fair at Crossmaglen. He took with him money, to the amount of £9, to pay for his purchases at the fair. The road on which he travelled runs between high hedges of blackthorn, and beyond them are clumps of furze or whinbushes, and here and there short stone walls, sometimes half broken down, connect the scattering bushes. As Samuel Coulter rode through this ugly place on that morning, a man rushed out upon him, armed with a bayonet, and impetuously attacked and wounded him. He turned about and made towards home, when another man leaped from behind the hedge armed with a brass pistol and a musket. A fierce struggle began, the wounded man defending himself with his whip, and his assailants beating him with the firearms. They rolled on the ground together, the blood dripped from the back of Coulter's head, one of his ears was nearly torn away, he fell insensible, and was left lying in a ditch. All this terrible scene happened within a mile of Mr. Coulter's residence, within 200 yards of two houses, and a little further on a clump of cabins. When the body was found his money was untouched. He was earried back to Shorstone, and where he died.

Beside the murder of Mr. Coulter, the Neessletter

Beside the murder of Mr. Coulter, the Newsletter ives an account of other scenes of violence near Dundalk:—

"Searcely had the public mind calmed into repose from the painful excitement produced by Mr. Coulter's murder than its feelings are again roused by the perpetration of a fresh outrage on the life of a farmer and his wife. On Saturday night a party of cleven armed ruffians entered the house of a farmer living between Castleblaney, in the county Monahan, and Redy, in the county of Armagh, and beat him and his wife unmercifully, inflicting severe wounds on the old man's head, and telling him that if he did not give up the land he had lately taken they would return and kill him. A neighbouring farmer, who heard the cries, ran to the Carragh police station, a short distance off. The party promptly arrived, but found the villians had fled, leaving the old man weltering in his blood. The police heard the barking of dogs, and at once proceeded to the place where the barking came. Upon arriving at the bog, close to where the omnibus driver was lately fired at, they saw light in a house. They went to the window and looked in, when they saw eleven ruffians in the act of swearing the man of the house, who was on his knees. The police, though few in number, at once entered, just as the oath was administered, and arrested the cleven men. They were handcuffed and conveyed to the old man's house, when he and his wife at once identified seven of them as being the persons who broke into their house and nearly murdered them. I conceive this to be a most important arrest. It will, I trust, deal a death blow to the infamous Riband system, now in vigorous operation in this locality, and, as I am credibly informed, for miles round. Mr. Mauleverer's murder, the murder of the Clarkes (brothers), the attempt to assassinate the omnibus driver, the dreadful tragedy of Friday, and the present outrage—all occurring within a circle of five or six miles. Since my coming down here I have driven for some miles round, and my different conversations with the peasantry forced me to know that they imagine they ought to pay no rent at all."

The writer in the Newsletter gibbets these horrible deeds as the natural and efficacious consequences of

The writer in the Newsletter gibbets these horrible deeds as the natural and efficacious consequences of the "pitiful and abject principles of rank Communism in reference to the tenure of land." Surely the sent in reference to the tenure of land. Surely the gentleman has a short memory, or he would remem-ber that deeds akin to these have happened in Ire-land for the last hundred years. The Tenant Right ber that deeds akin to these have happened in Ire-land for the last hundred years. The Tenant Right League agitation may not be perfection; but neither it nor "rank Communism" are guilty of having pro-duced the chronic disease of Ireland—agrarian out-rages. These have existed as long as landlord op-pression has existed, and they will exist until landlord oppression be done away. They are, indeed, the natural consequences of a system of relation be-tween landlord and tenant, infamous beyond conception.

CRIMES AND ACCIDENTS.

A crime of the Sloane species, though not quite equalling that infamous instance in atrocity, has been committed in the Isle of Wight. Eliza Cox, only fourteen years old, is the daughter of a peasant residing at Kingswood, near Bristol. Two years ago, Mr. Henry Brown Bell, Wesleyan minister, and Eliza, his wife, actuated, no doubt, by charitable motives, undertook to keep and maintain little Eliza Cox, who undertook to keep and maintain little Eliza Cox, who in return was to serve and wait on them. Shortly after entering into this engagement the Bells went to Ryde, and the male Bell obtained the ministry of the Wesleyan chapel there. These people behaved very well to Eliza Cox for some time, and then they began to ill-use her. This ill-treatment ultimately drove the girl from their house into the fields, where a woman ramed Mrs. Scott spack kindly to have and in the girl from their house into the neids, where a woman named Mrs. Scott spoke kindly to her, and informed the police of the case. The consequence was that the Bells were brought before the magistrates at Petry Sessions and tried for the offence. Eliza Cox

Petty Sessions and tried for the offence. Eliza Cox said:—

"They beats me most every day—missus beats me most. Last Saturday she got up, and came down and found fault with me. She beat me with a whip handle. I had no stockings on. I never was allowed stockings in doors—only an old pair of boots of master's. A little while afterwards I was going up stairs, and left my boots at the bottom. I went up to work, and by-and-by missus came up and beat me about the head with one of the boots (produced), and I had nothing but bread and water all that day. On Monday I was washing down stairs, and my missus came down and took me by my hair and dragged me about. The same day she cut a stick in the shrubbery and beat me with it. She gave me a piece of dry bread about nine, and another piece about three, and that was all I had on that day. On Tuesday Mr. Brown threw three buckets of water over me because I drank a little beer that was left over-night. Both of them locked me up in the back kitcken at nine in the morning till nine at night, and I had nothing but a piece of bread and some cold broccoli, and I stopped in my wet clothes all that time, and the water kept dripping down to my legs. On Wednesday I was called at five, and went down and was ordered to go a washing; I had nothing but cold suds; I asked for some hot water, and missus said that master should give me some more cold on my head directly he came down; I then ran away, and was spoken to by Mrs. Scott, who told me not to cry, for the policeman would take me up; she dried my clothes and gave me some victuals, and then the policeman came down and took me before the magistrate."

Mrs. Scott then gave evidence as to the state of the girl. There appears to have been no serious

Mrs. Scott then gave evidence as to the state of the girl. There appears to have been no serious attempt at a defence. The magistrates regretted that they had not power to send the case to the assizes; attempt at a detence. The magistrates regretted that they had not power to send the case to the assizes; and that they could only fine each of the Bells five pounds. Of course this trifling sum was instantly paid. But the mob were not so easily satisfied as the law. Every pane of glass in the house of the Bells was broken, and further damage only prevented by the coming of a strong police force. It is superfluous to add, that the Brown Bells have thought fit to leave Ryde.

A party of noisy gas-labourers and coal-porters were proceeding down Vauxhall-walk about one o'clock on Sunday morning. They came up with a policeman named

Chaplin, on duty there, who told them that if they did not go on quietly he should lock them up. Some wrat off, armed themselves with large stones, returned again, and without more ado violently assaulted Chaplin. The case was brought before Mr. Elliott, at the Lambeth Police Court. The chief witness was a policeman named Newton, who tells the story:—On coming near to Chaplin the prisoner Hickey flung this stone at him and struck him on the mouth. (The witness here produced a clinker, a missile weighing nearly 40bs.), and proceeded to say that the effect of the blow caused the deceased to stagger against a window shutter, near to which. Unapin the prisoner Hickey flung this stone at him and struck him on the mouth. (The witness here produced a clinker, a missile weighing nearly 4lbs.), and proceeded to say that the effect of the blow caused the deceased to stagger against a window shutter, near to which he stood, but he soon appeared to recover, and was enabled to draw his staff and strike Hickey on the forehead, the blow producing the wound which that prisoner bore. The instant that Chaplin struck Hickey the prisoner Cane came up to him, and struck him (Chaplin) a desperate blow with a large flint stone on the left side of the head, or temple, and at almost the same moment another of the party, but who I cannot recognise, also came up and struck the deceased on the right temple, and he instantly fell on the foot pavement. I instantly rushed at the prisoner Cane, and laid hold of him for the pupose of securing nim, but at that instant I received a violent blow from a stone on the shoulder which knocked me down on the pavement. I got up again, and laid hold of Cane a second time, but he knocked me down and got away before I got up. I then ran along Salamanca-place, springing my rattle, and immediately after a sergeant and some constables came up. I returned with them to where Chaplin was, and found him lying on the pavement all in a gore of blood, and bleeding pricusely from the mouth, nose, and some wounds on his head, and assisted in removing him into the Queez's Head public-house, he all the time remaining in a state of perfect insensibility. Soon after I accompanied the constables to a house in Vauxhall-walk, and knocked at the door several times before it was opened, and on entering it I saw the prisoner Hickey standing at the kitchen door bleeding from a wound on his forchead, and his hands were also bloody. Cane was taken in a calcellar, and M'Elligott afterwards in the Vauxhall-walk, on the spot of the assassination. James M'Elligot, on the spot of the assassination.

The sheffield police learned early on Sunday morning that a carter, n

Two stockings, covered with blood, were found concealed in the flue of the oven; and a pair of fusian trousers, smeared all over with blood, was found hidden in the garret. One remarkable circumstance is, that though the house is situated in the centre of a crowded court, no noise was heard sufficient to arouse suspicion. The only noise heard by even the next door neighbour was one like that caused by dragging a chair across a floor. A coal-rake, however, stained with blood, was found in the house. On the previous evening Mrs. Wilkinson had entered a neighbouring house late, asserting that she had quarrelled with and fled from her husband; and, it is said, that in the morning she desired to go back and fetch her boots, which led to the discovery of the murder. She has been arrested, together with a man named Battersby. There is some reason for believing that the wound in the throat was inflicted after Wilkinson was dead, in order to suggest the idea of suicide. The cause of the murder is stated to be jealousy—Battersby, Mrs. Wilkinson's cousin, and lodging in the house, having usurped the place of Mr. Wilkinson.

Peter Holden, a notorious poacher, had lost his hand and replaced it by a wooden one. On Wednesday west the house of Mr. Harvey, draper, at Manningtree, was entered by thieves. A policeman discovered them at their work, and gave the alarm to Mr. Harvey's shopmen, but before they could come to his assistance a manushed from the cellar, whom he knocked down. A robber on the watch then joined his companion, and a desperate fight ensued between them and the policeman, in the course of which the thief from the cellar attempted to stab the policeman, and succeeded in cutting through the breast of his coat in two places, but without wounding him. The policeman knocked him down three times, but was unable to prevent the escape of the two thieves. On examining the premises they found the brim of a leather hat and a vooden hand, covered with a glove. It was Peter Holden's, who was at once arrested.

The coroner'

money on the day of her death.

John Henry Eaton, the master of the St. Paneras workhouse, charged with a criminal assault on Eliza Smith, was discharged by Mr. Combe on Wednesday. Mr. Ballantine applied for the discharge. Some doubt was cast upon the state of the girl's mind, and it was felt by Mr. Ballantine that a jury would not convict Mr.

The L letters P Great Ser bill, at th Attorney in writin with thes The A tary, give forward terview the effect used to a houses. the best reform in tribunal question. The H dinner le of the A was pres in a sprand art particul We l the sect taining the lega men giv in any Mrs. made se obtaine Mr. Ge agains Session The year the to engis whol

MA

return the sa

the pr

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Lord Chancellor has ordered that before any letters patent for inventions shall be passed under the Great Seal, there shall be deposited with the Privy Seal bill, at the Great Seal Patent-office, a certificate by the Attorney or Solicitor-General that an outline description is writing or drawing of the invention has been filed with them or one of them.

The Archibator of Canterbury has a been filed in writing or one of them.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has, through his secretary, given a positive contradiction to the statement put forward on the faith of an entry in a diary, after an interview with Wordsworth, the late Poet Laureate, to the effect that the Archbishop, then Bishop of Chester, used to allow his servant to preach at Dissenting meeting nuet.

Lord Wharncliffe presided over a public meeting at the London Tavern on Thursday, to take into consideration the best measures to be adopted in order to secure a reform in our commercial laws, and the establishment of mibunals of commerce, with power to decide upon all questions of trade or differences between traders.

The Royal Academicians gave their grand anniversary finer last Saturday. Sir C. L. Eastlake, the president of the Academy, occupied the chair. Prince Albert, who was present, acknowledged the toast drank in his honour, in a speech complimentary to the new president, to art and artists generally, and to the Royal Academy in spricular.

in a speech complimentary to the new pressurent, to air, and artists generally, and to the Royal Academy in particular.

We have been favoured with a communication from the secretary of the Oxford University Commission, containing the opinion of the law officers of the Crown as to the legality of the commission. These learned gentlemen give it as their opinion that the commission is not in any respect illegal or unconstitutional. ——Globe.

Mrs. Geils, whose suit against her husband for adultery, made so much noise a few years ago, and who ultimately obtained a separation a mensa et thoro, is again in court.

Mr. Geils appealed to the Lord Chancellor, on Thursday, against the decision of the interlocutors of the Court of Session, and the appeal will be heard in due course.

The total value of the exports of British and Irish produce and manufactures, during the month of March (ending the 5th of April) last, according to the official returns, has been £6,965,196, against £5 783,752 for the same period of last year, and £5,365,663 in 1849, thus showing a considerable increase in the trade of the present year of upwards of £1,000,000, or at the rate of 20 per cent. In the first quarter of the present year the returns likewise exhibit a considerable increase in the trade over that of the same period during the two past years. The total value of our exports has been £16,523,344 on the present year, against £14,655,153 last yer, and £12,822,033 in 1849, being an increase of about £2,000,000, or nearly 20 per cent. over 1849.

Fire have been prevalent this week. On Sunday the premises of Messrs. T. F. Besle and Chappell, music sublishers, 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street, naviy £4,000,000, or 14 per cent. over 1849.

First have been prevalent this week. On Sunday the premises of Messra. T. F. Beele and Chappell, mostic publishers, 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street, were partially destroyed. In less than ten minutes after the fire was discovered, the brigade engines from Kingstreet, Golden-square, attended, followed by several other ragics, and before half an hour elapsed the fire was wholly extinguished. The warehouse termed the country department was gutted, and the other warehouses on the basement damaged by heat, water, smoke, and removal. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Two fires occurred or Munday. The first happened in the premises of Mr. Moffat, a linendraper and wholesale clothier, carrying on business at No. 76, Seymour-steet, and resulted in the destruction of the whole of Mr. Moffat's stock in trade, furniture, wearing apparel, and other effects, the building being gutted. No lives were lost, though several were in great peril.

A fire occurred on the premises of Mr. Stephens. a Mofat's stock in trade, furniture, wearing apparel, and other effects, the building being gutted. No lives were lost, though several were in great peril.

A fire occurred on the premises of Mr. Stephens, a watch and clock maker, No. 14, Bartholomew-square, Ironmonger-lane, St. Luke's. The progress of this fire was inconceivably rapid, and two men—one who was in bed asleep, and another who attempted to extinguish the flames—nearly lost their lives. The engines were soon on the spot, but in spite of the labours of the firemen, the entire range of premises became a blazing mass, firing insuccession the property of Mr. Gallicque, French hatter, No. 13, in the same square, and of Mr. Sauders, the Prince of Wales beerahop. The whole of Mr. Stevens's premises were reduced to ruins, the costly stock in trade and furniture consumed, and considerable damage done to the premises on either side. The origin of the fire cannot be accounted for.

A remarkable thunder-storm occurred at Norton, near Gloucester, last week, from which the family of a farmer named Taylor had a narrow escape. Three persons who saw the flash describe its appearance as of a ball of fire, and totally unlike any lightning they ever before witnessed. The roof and two opposite sides of Mr. Taylor's farmhouse were struck simultaneously with a force which carried away a considerable part of a chimney standing nearly in the centre of the building, and tore off a large portion of the slate roofing on each side, so that the rafters were laid quite bare. No person, however, was hurt.

In consequence of a large number of Irishmen baving

In consequence of a large number of Irishmen having In consequence of a large number of frishmen baving been employed in the construction of the Bangor and Carnarvon Railway, the Weish and English navice all along the line have struck. The turn-out has been general, for the men forced, by threatened hostilities, those employed in the tunnels to discontinue their work and join them in expelling the obnoxious party. About forty special constables were sworn in, as great disturbance was anticipated. The men have refused to return to their work until the whole of the Irish shall have been finelarged. Their hostility has been manifested for work until the whole of the Irish shall have been red. Their hostility has been manifested for its, but a strike was not expected.

A Chamber of Commerce has just been established at Southampton. The leading subjects which are now enging the attention of the chamber are as follows:—lst. The establishment of Southampton as one of the ports for Government emigration; which very desirable result there is every reason to think will very soon be realized. 2nd. Assisting the London Association in their endeavours to remove many of the present unnecessary restrictions of the Custom-house, on the transit of both passengers and merchandize. 3rd. The further promotion of a Transatlantic packet trade, not only to the United States, but also to British America, and more especially to Halifax. 4th. Attracting the attention of capitalists, and men of enterprize, to the vast amount of water-power existing in this neighbourhood, now running to waste; to the extensive valleys, irrigated by never failing streams, exhibiting some of the finest bleaching grounds in the world, contiguous to Southampton, while millions of yards of goods, annually, are sent from the North of England to less eligible grounds in Ireland; and also to tracts of land, at no great distance above Southampton, peculiarly suited to the growth of flax, the cultivation of which will afford full employment to a large juvenile and adult population.

The Attorney-General filed an information, on Monday, in the Court of Exchequer, at the instance of the Board of Inland Revenue, against the Duke of Bnekingham and the Marquis of Chandos, to recover the stamp duty on a deed of assignment, the stamp amounting, it was contended for the Crown, to £1000. The case arose out of the embarrassed affairs of the duke, and the point at issue was whether the assignment of the ducal property to the marquis, in 1845, for the purpose of paying off his father's debts was a sale of the estates, or whether the marquis was in the position of a trustee for property vested in his father and himself jointly to be applied to the above purpose. The Solicitor-General contended that it was a sale, and Mr. Peacock that it was merely an exchange. The court said that as this was the first time the question of law had arisen upon the state of facts peculiar to the case, and as the Crown was more largely interested in the poin the state of facts peculiar to the case, and as the Crown was more largely interested in the point than depended upon this transaction alone, they should take time to consider.

The Government bill for the better supply of water to the metropolis has been printed. It contains 40 clauses At present the metropolis is supplied with water by nine companies. On the 30th of September next it is proposed that they shall be formed into "The Metropolitan Water Company." There are twenty acts now in force respecting the supply of water, which are to be repealed. Among the provisions are several providing for the purity of water to be supplied for domestic purposes when the proper pipes are in use, agreeably to the rezulations of the company, and the supply may, with the approval of the Secretary of State, be suspended, unless the regulations are carried out. A constant supply of water is to be kept for cleaning severs, drains, &c., and for other public purposes. The united company may demand such rates as are now demanded by the companies existing, and are not to exceed the same. The rates are to be reduced when the profits are more than sufficient to pay a dividend of 6 per cent. The united company may make bylaws to carry out the spirit of the intended act, which it is considered would be advantageous to the public.

The friends and supporters of the Canterbury Association met a large party of the colonists on Wednesday, to take a farewell of them prior to their departure next morning in the four vessels Bangalore, Dominion, Lady Nugent, and the Duke of Portland. A very elegant breakfast was served by Messrs. Bathe and Co., of the London Tavern, in a pavillion erected for the occasion, within the walls of the East India Docks, where the four vessels were lying. The Right Hon. Lord Lyttleton presided, supported by the Duke of Newcastle.

The Sheffield folks have proved good friends to the Hungarian refugees. They held a large meeting, convended by the mayor, on Monday, in their Town Hall, in behalf of the Polish Hungari highest degree. Various important resolutions were unanimously carried, which want of space alone compels us to omit.

Great activity, says the Preston Chronicle, at present prevails in the building trade, from the number of houses now being erected, and the preparations for others to be built in different parts of the town. Many additional brick-crofts have been taken, in anticipation of a large demand for bricks. A very great number of plots have been sold as building land.

A royal proclamation offering a reward of £50 each, payable by the Treasury, was issued on Monday and posted in various public places in the metropolis for the discovery, apprehension, and delivery over to the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the abducted St. Alban's witnesses, Waggett, Hayward, Birchmore, and Skeggs. The proclamation attracted large crowds of readers at the Mansion-house. The witness Edwards, who was committed on the ground of having been concerned in the abduction of Waggett, has now been in Newgate nearly a month, and has been visited by various parties.

There are now two candidates actively engaged in canvassing the electors of the Isle of Wight for the seat rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. John Simeon. These are Mr. Charles Cavendish Clifford, a barrister, on the Liberal and Free Trade interest; and Captain Hamond, R.N., a Protectionist.

The rioters at the Boston election were again brought up for examination on Friday. None of them were charged with the full offence. Seven were discharged on finding security each for £50, and themselves bound in £50 each. Three were fined £1 each, and one £5.

The Beet-root Sugar Company seems to be making some progress in Ireland. In the Queen's County the

The Beet-root Sugar Company seems to be making some progress in Ireland. In the Queen's County the gen'ry and farmers have taken up the project with zeal and earnestness, and two sites for factories have been selected, one at Donaghmore, and the other at Mountmellick. A meeting has been held in Newry with the view of having a manufactory established there.

The situation of the silk weavers in Lyons becomes every day worse and worse. With many of them embarrassment has become misery, and privation hunger. The Salut Public says:—"At Lyons such a state of things cannot be prolonged, and we have the greatest satisfaction to announce that measures have been already realized or proposed to assist these suffering work-men."

ren."

The promenaders on the port of Marseilles witnessed curious scene on the lat of May. A steamer arrived nd landed fourteen Italians, and at the same moment a ody of police agents came up and at once arrested the hole of the strangers. The motive of the arrest is not nown.

body of police agents came up and at once arrested the whole of the strangers. The motive of the arrest is not known.

The police of Marseilles seized a quantity of muskets, swords, ball-cartridges, gunpowder, pistols, poniards, and other weapons, last week. They also at the same time got possession of a number of Socialist emblems, and of documents emanating from secret societies.

A letter from Brest states that the first seembled there, under the command of Admiral Parseval-Deschenes, has received orders to hold itself in readiness to sail, on the 6th instant, should the weather permit, for the Mediterranean, and cruize for a month.

The King of Naples has issued a decree, dated the 17th ultimo, regulating the police of printing and lithographic establishments. By this decree no such establishment can be opened without the permission of the prefects of police of Naples or Palermo, or that of the intendants of the provinces. In the application is to be mentioned the number of presses intended to be kept in activity. Permission having been obtained, cautionmoney must be deposited to the amount of one due at of Neapolitan rentes for every press up to five; five ducate for every press more up to ten, and ten ducats for every press beyond that number. The said caution money to be double for every steam press. Every proprietor of a printing establishment is responsible for the violation of the laws on the press committed in his offices. No work is to be printed without a written permission of the competent authorities. The Government names one or more censors for the revision of writings. Praise in verse or prose is not admitted without the permission of the person who is the subject of praise. Pablic sales of books are not to be authorised until the police has examined the catalognes.

The opposition against the Government manepoly of person who is the subject of praise. I alone saies of books are not to be authorised until the police has examined the catalogues.

The opposition against the Government monopoly of eigars has risen to such a pitch in Italy that persons smoking Government tobacco in the streets have had the cigars torn from their mouths! One man having been taken in the act of doing this at Vicenza, he was ordered to be publicly flogged, and to be then imprisoned. The offensive placards against which such severe punishments have been declared, have been actually posted an incht upon the gravestones.

M. de Rayneval has communicated to the Holy See a document addressed by the three Roman princes, Filippo Doria Pamphili, Mario Massimo, and Lorenzo Sforsa Cesarini, to the Precident of the French Republic, is which they recommend the total exclusion of relates and cardinals from public offices, while, in their opinion, should be granted to members of the Roman nobility. The three princes offer to assume the secular government, and declare that public opinion would side with them.

A private letter from Fribourg, in Baden, states that a ment, and declare that public opinion would side with them.

A private letter from Fribourg, in Baden, states that a conspiracy, detected by a drummer, had been discovered on the 2nd of May—twenty young men, suspected of being in correspondence with certain democratic societies of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of London, Paris, &c. A court of standricht—a ceurt of the offenders. Accounts had been received in Baden, via Berlin, that at Marseilles, Lyons, and Strasbours, a revolutionary movement was to have been attempted on the same day as in Germany.

The Hamburg newspapers declare themselves authorised to contradict the statement, that a note had been sent by the German great Powers to the Senate, advising it to delay the proclamation of the new constitution.

The town of Traunstein, a few miles from Manich, has been completely burnt down, whereby upwards of 3,000 persons have become roodless. The town was built on a mountainous site, on different terraces, and in the Swiss feshion, briefly of wood, so that it offered an easy prey to the devouring element. The King and the inhabitants of Munich are very active in raising relief.

The Neus Preissische Zeitung positively asserts that the Austrian provincial assemblies (Landtage) are to be almost immediately convoked, and that the general Reichstage will be also shortly after summoned. It adds that these assemblies will put the constitution of the 4th of March to the test, but that it will bear this test all parties, it says, entertain very little hope.

The Breslau Zeitung says that the Archauke Leopold is to be appointed to the Govern

MA

John h liarly ch sir, Lor only kn sure fro

If he Income

the com

tyrdom as the so of Loro man, do ing fin

But

tax. I him by the fore be mad

produc Blue B with q

tion, w or will ransac Parlian public and-or where paid o tax co ther it spoile If the even that Social ance fellow and short rain-Ce

offer

place mark mass Ar that tione been repu statu had have was perl The also that to disp laid

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS.

sponsible to acknowledge the mass of letters we re insertion is often delayed, owing to a press of ne shen omitted it is frequently from reasons quite ent of the merits of the communication.

ommunications should always be legibly written, and on a side of the paper only. If long, it increases the difficulty finding space for them.

ill letters for the Editor should be addressed to 10, Wellington-street, Strand, London.

Postscript.

SATURDAY, May 10.

Parliament met last night and talked over a variety of matters. Mr. Unquhart asked Lord Palmerston when the Russians would evacuate the Danubian provinces, and when the Hungarians would be released? To the first question the Foreign Secretary teplied that he believed the Russians had by this time marched out of Wallachia; and to the second, that he really could not tell. Mr. T. Duncombe wished to know when the French troops would withdraw from Rome? Lord Palmerston could not say—France exercised her discretion in occupying Rome, and she must equally exercise her discretion in determining the length of that occupation. Certainly the result had not been to establish good government, but the reverse.

Mt. Hums announced that he would submit a motion to the House on Monday to prohibit the formation of a ride in Kensington-gardens.

In taking the Property Tax Bill into consideration, the Chancellon of the Excheques proposed a clause, which was agreed to and added to the bill, giving an appeal to occupying tenants whose profits might not be equal to the amount at which they had been assessed. en assessed.

been assessed.

On the question that the Speaker leave the chair, and the House go into committee on the Ecclesiastical Titles Bill, Mr. URQUHART moved an amendment to the effect that the recent act of the Pope was encouraged by the conduct and declarations of her Majesty's Government. He was opposed by Sir George Grey, seconded by Mr. Sableir, supported by Lord John Manners, who said that the policy of Lord John Russell had ever been one of favour to the Church of Rogland. Russell had ever been one of favour to the Church of Rome, and of disfavour to the Church of England. After his speech the debate almost dropped until Mr. Sadlem spoke. Mr. Stanfoun, who called himself one of the most insignificant members of the House, and declared, amidst roars of laughter, that he had been made to feel the truth of that humble estimate been made to feel the truth of that humble estimate of himself upon more than one occasion, gave his valuable support to the motion. Sir Harry Inglis contended that the House should not allow its proceedings to be nullified by the amendment; and Lord Dudley Stuar would gladly defeat the bill by a direct motion, but he objected to dispose of it by a side-wind.

side-wind.

Mr. Bankes was called upon to vote "ay" or "no" upon the amendment. Now, "ay" was the truth, and he should, therefore, give his vote for it. Mr. Plumptre thought the amendment might contain some truth, but not the whole truth; therefore he should oppose it. Mr. Reynolds said that the Home Secretary had told them, "If you pass this resolution it will be a vote of censure upon the Government, and you must abide the consequences." Now, it did not require a telescope to discover what the right hon. gentleman meant by "the consequences." (Laughter.) He meant that the nation would lose the benefit of his official services; and even for that national calamity Mr. Reynolds was prepared. He was determined to offer that atrocious bill of pains and penalties all the opposition in his power. Mr. Spooner would vote for the amendment, Lord John Russell said there was a danger that the statement of Mr. Bankes would mislead the House:—

"The honourable member said, 'Here is a proposition

Lord John Russell said there was a danger that the statement of Mr. Bankes would mislead the House:

"The honourable member said, 'Here is a proposition laid before the House, and I am obliged to say "ay" or "no" to that proposition.' Now, the real question is this.

A bill is introduced by the members of the Government, and which, upon its second reading, met with the support of a very large majority—upwards of 430, I believe—to 95. The House having thus approved of the second reading of the bill, it is now proposed to go into committee upon the bill, and the regular question is proposed, 'that the Speaker do now leave the chair;' upon which an honourable member gets up and moves a vote of censure upon the Government, which, as he says, will sweep away the bill and the Government; and honourable gentlemen who supported the bill on the second reading take advantage of this paltry and shabby proceeding—(loud cries of 'Hear Asar')—to vote against a bill which on the second reading they had supported. (Hear, Asar.) Sir, the bare technetic than the second reading they had supported. (Hear, Asar.) Sir, the bare technetic than the second reading they had supported. (Hear, Asar.) Sir, the bare technetic than the second reading they had supported. (Hear the to the least foundation for targing that the honourable member is obliged, if he applieves of that proposition, and thinks it true, to vote against the motion. (Hear, Asar.)"

He did not believe that the acts of the present Government had been at all the cause of the aggression. But he did believe that this aggression was part and parcel of a great plan aimed against civil and religious liberty in great great plan aimed against civil and reparcel of a great plan aimed against civil and re-ligious liberty in every country in Europe. (Great cheering.) He knew that the advisers of the Pope were the enemies of England; and that about the time when the rescript was promulgated it was said, and said by persons who had good reason for snying so, that a measure was being adopted which would and said by persons who had good reason for saying so, that a measure was being adopted which would set all England in a flame, and create great disturbance among the people of the United Kingdom. Well, he believed that that was the object, and it was to counteract the liberal influence of this country in Europe, and to enforce the views and plans of those who could not bear the progress of constitutional freedom. (Cheers.)

who count not freedom. (Cheers.)

Mr. DISRAMI would not take advantage of the forms of the House to avoid giving a vote on the amendment. He placed the question before them on amenument. The placed the question before them on the real ground:—

"Is it true, or is it not true, that the aggression of the Pope has been encouraged by the conduct and declarations of her Majesty's Government? (Cheers.) Is it a fact or not that the First Minister of the Crown has himself, in this House, expressed an opinion that he saw no harm in Roman Catholic bishops assuming territorial titles in England? (Cheers.) Is it a fact, or is it not, that a Secretary of State in another place expressed his hope that the Roman Catholic bishops of the United Kingdom would take their seats as peers of Parliament in the Lords? Is it a fact, or is it not, that a member of the Cabinet was sent as plenipotentiary to Italy, and held frequent and encouraging conversations with his Holiness? (Hear, hear.) Is it a fact, or is it not, that, influenced by his counsels, and animated by his presence, the Pope himself condescendingly intimated to him that he was about to interfere with the domestic affairs of this country? ('No no.') 'There is something that affects England, 'was the intimation, according to the statement of the noble lord opposite, and I at the time expressed my surprise that the plenipotentiary did not deem it necessary to inquire what it was.
"Lord J. Russell.: I wish to state what I did say. I observed that it had been stated that the Pope used these words, but that Lord Minto denied that he are heard.

"Lord J. Russell: I wish to state what I did say. I observed that it had been stated that the Pope used these words, but that Lord Minto denied that he ever heard anything of the sort. (Cheers.)

"Mr. Disnaell: Isit a fact, or is it not, that the Viceroyalty of Ireland was in indirect communication with the Pope, and expressed affection for his person and reverence for his character? (Cheers.) If these be facts, I ask whether, in the language of this resolution, the aggression of the Pope may not fairly be described to have been encouraged by the conduct and declarations of her Majesty's Government?"

He denied that time was wasted in that discussion, and felt that he was wasted in that discussion, and felt that he was performing a great public duty by voting for the amendment. Mr. Roebuck supported, and Mr. Deedes and Sir T. D. Acland opposed, the amendment, The House then divided, and the numbers were:—

For Mr. Urquhart's resolution...... 201
Against it ...... 280

Majority for Ministers ..... 79

The committee on the Ecclesiastical Assumption Titles Bill was then adjourned to Monday next, to be made the first order of the day.

The Heleapont arrived at Liverpool yesterday from the Cape of Good Hope, with mails to the 4th of April. Sir Harry Smith, with about 2200 troops of all sorts, was at King William's Town. Having heard of the Kaffirs' intention to assault Fort Hare, he anticipated their attack by moving against them. Upwards of 100 were killed, many wounded, and a large number of cattle captured. On the part of the British forces only a few rank and file were killed and wounded. Colonel Mackinnon's patrol from King William's Town had made a raid on the Kaffirs, destroyed several of their kraals, and by the aid of the Fingoes taken a quantity of stock.

Some of the frontier farmers had at length joined Sir Harry Smith, protesting, however, that, unless the

Some of the frontier farmers and at length joined Sir Harry Smith, protesting, however, that, unless the Kafflis all along the frontier districts were exterminated, no security for life or property could be expected. In consequence of forty-six armed Cape Mounted Rifes having connected themselves with the disaffected no security for life or property could be expected. In consequence of forty-six armed Cape Mounted Rifles having connected themselves with the disaffected Hottentots at Blinkmater, about one half of that body had been disarmed, and 200 of their horses are now appropriated to the use of the levies from the western district. Three or four of the deserters from the Rifle Corps had been shot.

The Fingoes continue faithful, but the band of Hermanus, now led by his son, refuse to surrender to General Somerset. They hang about Blinkwater, and assisted he Kaffirs in their abortive attempts to rescue the Hottentot prisoners. Sandill, with the prophet Umlangeni, was safe in the fastnesses of the Anatolas. Leyola, the T'Slambie chief, who took up a strong position on the Debe Neck, interrupting communications between King William's Town and Graham's Town, decamped on the appearance of a strong patrol sent to expel him.

Sir Andries Strockenstrom had left for England.

There has been no open demonstration at Cape Town either favourable or otherwise to the Governor-General, but the feeling of the inhabitants is for the adoption of some determined course to prevent the protraction of the war.

The inquest on the Cheshire Railway accident did not war.

The inquest on the Cheshire Railway accident did not close on Fhursday. Captain Laffan is going to pass through the tunnel to-day in order to watch the effects of the passage of a heavy train. An inquest has begun at Newton Willows on the body of Mr. Wilson.

Bublic Affairs.

here is nothing so revolutionary, because there is thing so unnatural and convulsive, as the strain to sep things fixed when all the world is by the very law of a creation in eternal progress.—Da. Arnold.

THE INCOME TAX CRISIS.

ENQUIRY, say the hopeful, seals the doom of the Income Tax. Frank concession, say the simple has sealed the salvation of the Russell Cabine. nas scated the salvation of the Russell Cabinet. Now these two averments cannot both be true. It is quite clear, from what has passed, that you cannot have at once the double luxury of a religifrom Income Tax and a Russell Cabinet. We wish this to be clearly understood. The ultimate issue depends upon the public, but the public cannot secure its own interests, without knowing the public cannot secure its own interests, without knowing the secure its own interests. not secure its own interests without knowing

In the first place, let every man of the Liberal party know that he would not have had this inquiry at all if it had not been for Joseph Hume: also that in obtaining it, Joseph Hume acted against the advice of his own party, call them what you will Radicals, Manchester School, or Financial Re-

They chose to bind up this separate question, the permanent continuance of the present bas Income Tax, unamended, with the continuance of Free Trade, and the continuance of the Whig Mi nistry. Joseph Hume saw clearly enough that the existence of Free Trade, which is based upon the existence of Free Trade, which is based upon the great facts of human progress, cannot depend upon the maintenance of the weakest Government that this country has seen for many a generation, still less upon the really bad Income Tax. Bear in mind, that if Free Trade has some relation with direct taxation, it has none with a form of direct taxation in important taxation, it has no no with a form of direct taxation in the properties of the positively held. You might tion imperfect and positively bad. You might well say that the march of intellect depend You might as upon the Attorney-General, or the progress of the seasons on the Archbishop of Canterbury. He saw, therefore, that no great or honest interes was imperilled by his declaring point-blank, as a representative of the people, that he would not tolerate the badness of that tax, for that, let us still insist, was the real question at issue. The fact that he received in his aid interested partyvotes from the Opposition, does not vitiate the truth of his judgment: it was not his fault if the Liberal Ministers chose to bind themselves to a bad Income Tax: it was not his fault, but theirs, if they made a blind adherence to a bad Income Tax, the sole condition of their graciously continuing to be popinjay captains of the free-trade army; it was not his treachery to free trade, but theirs, if the Manchester school chose to believe that their sacred cause depended upon the lead of the said popinjay captains—if they took Lord J for the only real and indispensable Moses. Gr however, was their indignation against the un-daunted member for Montrose: "Lauk-a-dairy me!" cried the Manchester school, to the impa-sible Joseph, "if you have not been and upset the apple cart of free trade!" The old cry of "Keep out the Tories" was modernised into "Keep out the Protectionists," and Joseph was warned that if be laid a finger on the Income Tax, he would endanger Lord John, the Anti-Corn-Laws, free trade, our valued institutions, Protestantism, and heaven knows what besides.

Now, observe the event. We have been bla for insisting upon a bolder performance of public duty by the independent members, as counselling a rash course which would endanger Lord John, &c; and we have contended that, if Lord John were endangered by the enforcement of popular interests, it was his own deliberate choice; at last, a veteran of the "Liberal" party ventures on that course, and there is no end to the ridicule and abuse with which he is attacked by the popular leaders, who predict failure and every conceivable disaster; but he succeeds, and without any such catastrophe! He gains his particular point; Lord John is still and Free Tenda in our headed was the tander. in, and Free Trade is not handed over to the tender mercies of Colonel Sibthorp.

"Ah! but," exclaims some staunch Liberal, "it

PEADLR

John had not, with that courage which so peculiarly characterises him, knocked under." My dear ir, Lord John always does knock under, if you only knock him down enough. He calls it "pressure from without." Besides, what if he had not? If he makes himself constituent part of a bad become Tax, does that sweeten the payment? Income Tax, does that sweeten the payment? Is the commercial man reconciled to the inquisition into his "profits" by the reflection that his martyrdom is endured, not for the sake of Lord John tyrdom is endured, not for the sake of Lord John as the sport of inexorable destiny, but for the sake of Lord John's whimsey? Does the professional man, doubtful of his present year's gains, and paying fine for last year's prosperity, feel that all is compensated by existing under Lord John? Does the farmer admit that solace?

But Lord John has not yielded the bad income tar. He has only given up the point forced upon him by Mr. Hume. He grants the inquiry with the foregone conclusion that the income tax cannot be made more tolerable without being made less productive; and we may expect, either that the Blue Book will echo that childish presumption, with quantum sufficit of "evidence" to "prove" quantum sufficit of "evidence" to "prove" that the committee, under fear of de-Johnizam, will put off coming to any conclusion at all; will "report the evidence"—a cartload, to be sacked by the bone-grubbers and rag-pickers in ment assembled.

All this depends upon the public. It is the multic that has ratified the time, vacillating, hen-and-one-chick policy of the Manchester-School, where Lord John is concerned; and the public is or rather pays out whenever the Income ctor calls. It is for the public to say whenever paid out-or rather tax collector caus. It is not the patient of any water ther it will support Joseph Hume, in pursuing his just course, undeterred by the whine that he may run over poor Lord John, who chooses, naughty spoiled boy! to lie down in the middle of the road. If the public prefers to uphold the mere "Liberals, ! to lie down in the middle of the road and spare Lord John, let it; but then it must continue to pay the bad income tax.

PARIS ON THE FOURTH OF MAY.

THE "Party of Order" seems to be rather annoyed that the 4th of May passed over in Paris without even a riot or an arrest. It is charitably supposed that the rain damped the ardour of the "Reds and Socialists"; that the rain prevented the appearance of the "truculent and brigand-like looking llows" in the streets, who "disgust the brave" and "affright the timid"; that the rain, in ort, came down providentially for the Republican party, as it at once saved their reputation for bravery, and left them in as good a position as before. Mighty effects, truly, to be the fruit of min-drops!

Certain it is that, while the Place de la Concorde was filled with holiday folks, the boulevards with real diners-out, the Champs Elysées with gamins, and the aristocratic quarters with those who conspire under the shield of Order, there was not the least disturbance, no seditious cry, no insult offered to the effigies of the immaculate worthies with whom Léon Faucher had peopled the public places and streets of Paris; nothing, in short, remarkable, but lamps that would not burn, and masses of umbrellas.

And yet Paris had been inundated with copies of rocious appeal to the People which we mentioned last week; yet had every republican name omitted in the festal decorations, every republican allusion suppressed, every republican statue forbidden; yet had the police, not only in Paris, but in the departments, been actively pro-vocative; and every manœuvre had been resorted to by spies and others to excite at least an émeute, and effect an insurrection.

But they did not succeed. Even the shout which had there been an émeute on that day, would have been the battle cry—"Vive la République," was rarely heard. Why was this? It has caused much astonishment to the partizans of the Reaction. Perhaps it was the rain; perhaps indifference; perhaps hatred to the Republic! perhaps The most probable explanation is the simplest also. Perhaps the People justly conceived that that cry would have been interpreted by the police to mean defiance; and that the People were not disposed to run into every snare which might be laid for them. Moreover, the stability of republican institutions does not require that the Parisians should be incessantly invoking somebody to let the Republic live!

Besides the real environment of the foundation of

Besides the real anniversary of the foundation of the Republic is the 24th of February when the People proclaimed it; not the 4th of May when the constituent proclaimed the gospel according to De Lamartine. You cannot expect much enthusiasm Lamarine. 1 ou cannot expect much entuisiasm for the Republic of the men in power who have violated the constitution, not only by the expedition to Rome, but by the Restrictive Suffrage Act of the 31st of May. That there was no émeute is an honour to the Republicans; but that snares should be laid for an impulsive people is a discrete to their reactionary rulers. grace to their reactionary rulers.

The extent to which the "Party of Order" went

The extent to which the "Party of Order" went that they might excite a row, is shown by the fact that a false report was diligently circulated that an insurrection had broken out at Lyons. The extent to which they failed is shown by the hollow congratulations of their partizans that order was not disturbed.

We believe that when the next revolution breaks forth it will be as sudden and unforescen as it will be strong and resistless. The "fusionists" will be dissipated, the Decembrists scattered. France has cried from her soul "Plus de Bourbons," will not seat in the saddle they left empty, the weak heir to a grand historic name.

ction lost a battle last Sunday. It will behove the Republicans to make the most of their

" LA TERRE EST AUX LORDS."

It is amazing what simplicity you meet with, even in practical public life. At the Canterbury Colonists' breakfast, on Wednesday, Mr. Adderley having glanced with reprobation at the Malthusian doctrine, a sontleman expressed satisfaction that "these philosophers do not carry out their own doctrines"; for "he had met a son of Mr. Maldoctrines"; for "he had met a son of Mr. Mal-thus the other day, who had fourteen children." But what of that? We do not see it militates at all against Malthus's doctrine. He did not preach that Malthus must not have progeny, but that Poor-man must not. Poor-man must be diligent, orderly, and dutiful, and do his work as fast as possible as to the affections, they are a luxury only for the well-to-do. So that if Malthus has done his duty in being well off, he has a perfect right, in the Malthusian faith, to be fruitful and multiply.

"Poor" is a human expression: the beasts and birds are not poor. The sheep has all he nibbles, and the lamb is born without thought of the morrow. "For the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," as respects the use which his morrow. For the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," as respects the use which his creatures may enjoy in it, save his human creatures. And here lies the pinch and truth of the Malthusian creed. The Frenchman was right, though we, blind fools! called it a mistake, and, though we, blind fools! called it a mistake, and, God help us! laughed when he read the inscription on the Exchange—"The earth is the Lords', and the fulness there"—belongs to the Lords hereditary, the Peers, or landlords. It is so. Man is poor, not because his Heavenly Lord withholds the means of living, but the earthly Lord. Since the earth has become the Landlord's, Man is no longer able to get at it; thus he has become Lackland, Poorman Pauper: he has lost right to be many, his n, Pauper; he has lost right to be many, his dren are "surplus population." children are

There are two faiths in the country: the one de-clares that the earth is the Lord's, and tells man to the earth is the Lords, and the high priest of this creed tells man that his duty is to be sterile and diminish. And this is the faith de facto of England; the other is only a theoretical faith, disregarded by the rulers in practice. They would as soon love their neighbour as themselves, or turn one cheek when the other was smitten, as admit in practice the principle they preach in the pulpit. That tells them to think not of the morrow; but the faith that is in Malthus tells them most espe-cially to think of the morrow, that it is "wicked"

It is to be remembered, indeed, that the preacher of that trust in God and human industry, which can do without thought of the morrow, was him-self trained in a Communistic school, and was the founder of a body still more amply Communistic. Still, those facts, and indeed the whole of that faith, have nothing to do with the Malthusian dogma; which is quite a new invention of modern dogma; which is quite a new invention of modern times, evidently suggested by the primary dogma of the faith that rules England de facto—the dogma that the Earth is the Landlord's, and the fulness thereof. No heresy is received with a more angry alarm than any doubt of that principle; and, therefore, a whole clergy of Malthus is sent about to persuade Poor-man that the earth is not the Lord's but only the Landlord's; that he, Poorman, must not have a great noisy family; that it is proper, provident, and "intelligent" to say nothing about it, but just go on working and being few; accepting what Landlord vouchsates to leave, with a lowly and a thankful heart, and leaving the affections to the Landlords, the Malthi, and other well-to-do-classes.

But, meanwhile, those thoughtless people at breakfasts and public dinners will talk!

L. S. D.

L. S. D.

WILL it pay? That is the great testing question, in our day, of public affairs; and to the fact that it is so, as we most devoutly believe, must be asscribed the impracticability of moving to any useful purpose. To hear statesmen talk, in private even more than in public, you would believe that a general helplessness had seized upon our race; that there never more were to be any leaders, never more any decisive movement of the nation, never more any mastery over circumstances or individual more any mastery over circumstances or individual will; but that, henceforth, states were to drift along, like ships without captains or compasses, awaiting what might be vouchsafed by the caprices of tides, or the less calculable and a caprices. , or the less calculable caprices of unruled crews.

Read the confession of the Premier in the debate on the official salaries—that the representative of England in France cannot support the digni y of his position under £8,000 a-year; he has no weight at a less figure; he has no authority without weight at a less figure; he has no authority without money in his purse, though he has England at his back! Probably, however, the idea is that a man with less than £8,000 a-year will not have England at his back? The rebel States of America could speak with dignity before the defeated monarchy, in the person of Adams; but poor England has no greatness to impart to her representative, and, therefore, must eke it out in pounds sterling. So say our public men! It is the confession of Lord John Russell, also of Lord Palmerston, administrators de facto of the English nation. It is for these reasons that English statesmen cannot emulate the simplicity of Agis or men cannot emulate the simplicity of Agis or Regulus, of Cromwell or Washington: abate their salaries and you destroy their influence, jeopar-dizing the institutions of the country.

Mr. Cobden denounces this obstinate lavishness, but he finds there is no help for it. He solds Lord John, but admits that all efforts at improvement are useless. He threatens to follow example of an honourable friend near him, and decline to serve on all committees when he found that so few of their recommendations were followed." Lord John is chief of a régime whose influence totters if salaries be touched; yet against that régime Mr. Cobden and the other occonomists avow that they are perfectly powerless. They proclaim that they cannot get up any more healthy action; they cannot arouse healthier, more virtuous, more manly motives. Now, Mr. Cobden and his party are especially those who have made everything turn upon the money question: it seems that they are not very successful. They have mistaken the old mercenary adage, "Tis money that makes the mare to go," for a fundamental precept of national morals, and they find out their mistake in a total impotency: they cannot make the nation go, nor the Government, nor the Parliament, nor anything that is national. There is, indeed, more than one motive in human affairs, and those who manage for us just now have not that régime Mr. Cobden and the other œcono and those who manage for us just now have not hit upon that which is most exalted or most powerful.

The same mistake, even in the conduct of still higher affairs, with the same results. Great rejoicing lately over the £80,000 saved with Miss Talbot from conversion to pious uses in the Romish Church; but does the Protestant Establishment act with fastidious delicacy in money matters? We can hardly boast as much. For example, Mr. Bennett is turned out of his incumbency, for ultra-ecclesiastical notions: but did the Church return the fortune which he had sacrificed? No; the heretic was cast forth: but the profit—there is the heretic was cast forth; but the profit—there is no provision for expelling heretical pounds sterling. no provision for expelling heretical pounds sterling. Indeed, pounds sterling cannot be heretical—they are impeccable. Protestantism does not deny that infallibility. Bennett must return whence he came; but as to the sovereigns—"nulla vestigia"! "No money to be returned: vivat Regina." Again, Bishop Lee cannot grant Mr. Finlay a curate, deterred by a financial punctilio. Dr. Lee had arranged the matter of the surplice; but he would have a nething in the matter of salary!

would hazard nothing in the matter of salary!

Yet again, we hear of such things as proprietary chapels, half seeding from the Church of England on the score of doctrine; and then setting up their own Thirty-nine Articles to bind posterity for ever

M

tion ar " make the sha

our the whole 1

In F ralist (

ringula

Charles

is a ple

Blac amusin

-nota

HARTI

bling e

the gla

The

Puffing

the na

sample

Here it

incomp will be

No, w thing incred

We di

the pu

The :

more to the infallible [private] judgment of the good Protestants who founded the chapel; because, forsooth, they cannot abide the idea that the thing for which they are now paying should belong, hereafter, to some persons diverging, more than they do, from the Church which seceded from Rome. No; their advance is final; their pounds sterling are sacred against any further interpretation. are recounting no imaginary case; as some of our readers will know; nor a singular one. More than one chapel is consecrated, for ever, to St. £. s. d.

A powerless idol, in church or chapel, in council a poweriess idoi, in church or chapel, in council or Parliament. Not powerless over individuals truly; but we appeal to the actual state of churches, to the actual state of public affairs, for universal and practical proof, that you cannot make Money the supreme ruler, except by debasing other and higher powers, to the destruction of national greatness, of safety, and of strength; to the destruction of hampiness, and for deadow for actual state. of happiness and freedom for numerous classes.

"Liberalism" has lent itself to that demon-worship, and now stands like Joan of Arc, abandoned by her familiars, fearing the future.

WAR IN THE WEST: KENSINGTON.

AFFAIRS to the West of Hyde-park have taken a very serious turn; the spirit of disaffection has spread from Notting-hill to the neighbouring state of Kensington, which has many interests in common with Bayswater. Our purpose this week however, is to relate an episode in the general contest, to which we only alluded last week.

We then mentioned the fact, that a diversion in favour of the Barbarians had been attempted on the Eastern side of Kensington-gardens, but we had then no idea of the really grave nature of the From what has since transpired, it seems that the Barbarian interest has been able to effect a very high alliance; that there is a traitor in the very councils of the Queen's Government; and we have no hesitation in pointing out, as that traitor, Lord Seymour! He has thrown off the mask; and, for the present, is treating matters with a very high hand.

It is well known that he is making preparations to introduce a body of riders into Kensington-gardens. According to Sir Peter Laurie, some of this force, and especially the camp-followers, are not of the highest character; but we do not desire to take advantage of any prejudices on that score. The case is bad enough as it stands.

A deputation of aggrieved inhabitants waited upon Lord Seymour, on Tuesday, to represent the strong feeling among the natives. It might have been expected that this deputation, including, as it did, gentlemen of the highest respectability, with the Archdeacon at its head, would have been received with some deference; but we are not told that the chief condescended in any degree from the cavalier course which he seems to have marked out for himself. He will promise nothing.

Lord Seymour may have taken his measures to keep up the war at the South-eastern side on a scale of great strength; but he will find that he has miscalculated. We say this advisedly. We are not unaware that large bodies of troops are in readiness at no great distance from the scene; and we do not shut our eyes to the fact, that a strong force of men in blue uniform is stationed a little to But Lord Seymour will find that this is not an affair of troops.

Meanwhile the wronged inhabitants have also ken their measures. The women and children taken their measures. The women and children have been placed in safety, and we have no doubt that they will be protected against any sudden incursion which the hostile chief may contemplate. cursion which the hostile chief may contemp.

The able-bodied men, between the ages of fifteen and sixty, are very generally on the move. The inhabitants may be expected to rise every morning.

A Provisional Committee is sitting to watch events, and act when necessary. Intentions have been expressed to turn Lord Seymour's position, by seeking an alliance with a yet higher functionary, the Head Commissioner of the Exposition, Prince Albert. Surely Lord Seymour will not push matters to such extremity as to draw the country into a civil war between Commissioner and Commissioner Certain it is, that the inhabitants intend to hold public meetings; and it is even said that Chartists have been seen among them. In short, Bayswater and Kensington now present an exact counterpart with the Cape of Good Hope in its recent contest against official despotism; only that in this in-stance, the provocation is far more wanton. Sir-Harry Smith was arabitious to be the founder of a new province, and the father of a new class in the older colony, the convict class: instead of being the founder of a new province or the father of a class, Lord Seymour would be the founder of a new drive, and the footman of a class. We need not, however, hold out to the united inhabitants the cessful example of the Cape: they too are

LADY ARUNDELL'S APPEAL.

LADY ARUNDELL, of Wardour, has made an eloquent and affecting appeal to the Protestant English members of Parliament, against the ribald enactments proposed by Mr. Spooner's bill for treating convents like disorderly If her letter falls upon unsympathising ears, it is not that the appeal is foolish, but that public men are degenerate in a sense more practical than commonplace cant about "the degeneracy of the times." The English legislators, represented by Mr. Henry Drummond and Mr. Spooner, cast abroad the most outrageous insult on the ladies of the Roman Catholic faith, and propose to that insult as an enactment of h Arundell appeals to the manly sympathies of husbands and brothers; and if her appeal has not an instant and peremptory force, we must confess that public men have sunk below that level of chivalry, or even gentlemanly feeling, at which an appeal to loyalty is resistless. It signifies something far worse for the country, then, than for the writer, when such an appeal can pass with a sneet or a slight. How different would it be if Lady Arundell had statistically convicted Mr. Spooner of a financial blunder!

A PASTOR AND HIS PLOCK.

GUNTHORPE rejoices in a distinguished man for its pastor—the Reverend John Henry Sparkes; he is not only Vicar of Gunthorpe, but Rector of Levington, also Prebendary of Ely, and yet further, Chancellor of the Diocese, with other ecclesiastical preferments: the whole yearly income is estimated at £6000.

Of course even so good a man cannot be in so many places at once, and the most that he can do for Gunthorpe, it seems, is to bless it with an annual visit. We are sure that that is the utmost extent of the possibility, because otherwise he would inevitably be seen oftener in the parish, which is not the case. The people of Gunthorpe, however, do not put this trust in his will, but think that he might do more if he would. Nor are they willing to take quality for quantity-one or two superexcellent sermons for fifty-two of the ordinary tissue So they resolved on a tacit declaration of their mind.

On Good Friday he ascended the pulpit, to preach the annual sermon; when, by a singular coincidence, as he mounted, the churchwardens and the principal people left the church. There was some talk of his preaching again on Easter Sunday; a very large congregation assembled; but no Sparkes!

assembled; but no Sparkes!

No Christian can forget the events which those days are intended to celebrate: why then were they disturbed by this deadly demonstration? Mr. Sparkes hasheld the living twenty years, and has received in that time, it is calculated, £18,000; for which the parishioners probably reckon an annual visit too small a return. But surely they cannot use the house of God as the scene of a quarrel merely on commercial grounds? They must have some much more serious explanation to give of their motives. their motives.

Meanwhile, let us ask, are scenes like this beneficial to the Establishment, its influence, and stability!

SEEING IS NOT BELIEVING.

JULES JANIN, the witty feuilletonist, who is now in London to chronicle the wonders of our Exposition, once began an article with this paradoxical and true remark, "I will narrate a circumstance which I believe to be true, although recounted to me by an eye witness." It is a monstrous fallacy to suppose that seeing is believing; seeing is seeing—nothing more, nothing less. Believing is not simple faith in one's own sensations, but also a faith in the explanation of the cause of those sensations Dr. Cullen was not so far wrong in asserting that people were never less to be trusted than when relating what they had seen. they had seen.

It is not so easy to see, as people blandly imagine.

they had seen.

It is not so easy to see, as people blandly imagine. Even the commonest facts are reported by eye witnesses with every variety of error. On the opening of the Exposition, for example, the state of the weather was so important as to direct universal attention to it. Yet whoever read the reports of "eye witnesses" in the papers, observed that not a drop of rain fell, that showers were brisk and frequent, that an occasional shower brought out the beauty of the day, &c. &c. Between superbweather, and only a single gleam of sunshine, there was every degree of variation, noted by eye witnesses.

Then again as to the Queen's horses, one said they were six eream coloured, another four bays, another two bays. And the Leader, with shameless inconsistency, said in one edition that they were six anya, and in another that they were two creams. Yes, even we can err! To make this general confusion more confounded, an eye witness, not a reporter, who saw the carriage pass him, declared when we put the queetion directly to him, that he did not know whether the horses were bays or creams. To the newspaper reader the doubt, in such variety of assertions, must occur who is right? Is it possible that reporters can report things they have not seen? Or does this contradiction on a thing so open to every eye as the weather, illustrate the effect of prepossession in the looking at facts?

Titerature.

Critics are not the legislators, but the judges and police of literature. They do not make laws—they interpret and try to enforce them.—Edinburgh Review.

THE World of Letters is so unusually flat just now that we have rarely a bit of gossip to grace our columns with. Among the rarities here is one which our readers will welcome-a new book from THOMAS CARLYLE! It may be remembered that some time ago Archdeacon HARE published Memoir of the late JOHN STERLING, which dissatisfied many of STERLING's friends by the tone it adopted, and many more, by the ignoring of ign norance of the fact that STERLING had completely emancipated himself from all religiousdogmas. The archdeacon treated him as if he had been no more than a " rationalist," whereas he was no "ist" at all. To set this and all other points in their true light, CARLYLE has undertaken the biography of his friend, and we hope he has availed him the occasion to say a few plain energetic words on the great subject. STERLING was one of the many who earnestly thought through dogmatism, if the phrase may stand, and passed various stages of what is regarded as orthodoxy, until he finally settled in that spiritualism which, with Catholicism, seems certain to destroy the present Church. It is commonly objected by the orthodox that modern scepticism has nothing new in it, — that it is only a reiteration of the ancient scepticism. True, but modern answers to it are also but a reiteration of ancient arguments. We were struck by the ingenuity of EDWARD MIALL'S defence of Scripture in his remarkable work on British Churches in relation to the British People (a second edition of which lies on our table), wherein he draws a parallel between the revelation of Scripture and the revelation of Nature. God's " method of manifesting himself," says Mr. MIALL, "is diffusive." He has diffused his manifestation through the wor varieties of Nature, and in like manner has he diffused his spirit through the varieties of history, biography, poetry, prophecy, symbol, allegory, and exhortation which crowd the Bible. Are these "difficulties" in seizing the true significance of each separate text? Are these "contradictions" between one part and another? Yes; but not greater than the difficulties and contradictions of Creation. Study Creation, and its secrets will be unveiled to you, its processes will become visible; study Scripture in the true spirit, and the same result will be attained.

This defence is ingenious. It is not, however by the simple reflection that a penalty is attached to the nonrecognition of the truths of Script which completely destroys the parallel. If I do not rightly seize the meaning of Nature's enigma tical utterances, I am, of course, to some extent s sufferer: but if I do not rightly seize the mean of these Scriptural enigmas I shall be consigned to everlasting hell fire!! Moreover, it is by no means clear that the universe was erected for mi especial instruction, whereas the very aim and purpose of the Scriptures is to give men certain definite rules of life, in which case obscurity is

The argument, however, is by no means novelty: it is as old as ORIGEN, and may be found in that book of extracts compiled by BASIL and GREGORY of NAZIANZEN, from ORIGEN'S treatise Contra Celsum. These are the words (Philocalis, c. I.): " The same kind of difficulties are met with in Nature as in Scripture. There is much in both which human nature cannot penetrate; nevertheless, we are not warranted in finding fault with the Creator if we know not why basilisks and serpents are made." There is more to the same effect : we notice it merely as a literary coincidence.

The British Quarterly Review is more than usually attractive this number, varied in its subjects and spirited in treatment. The article French, Germans, and English, contains some acute re-

and. in Lo 388181 HAND for the journa of its French the E A d in Fra all ho

DUFA women to sati excusa under The ti cialist the us dissipa us in t her ch marria

tems shows Le Cl public city to indi under made .

An Executed Gard & Chape books day. lutely

of trav

marks on national character, the result of observation an i reflection; and as the Exposition will "make us acquainted with strange bedfellows" in the shape of foreigners, this analysis is apropos. German Protestantism is worthy the attention of our theological readers; indeed, as we said, the whole number is attractive.

In Frazer, that entertaining Note Book of a Naturelist continues to pour fourth its stores; and the singularly graphic paper on the Cloister Life of Charles V. is concluded. The prevailing Epidemic is a pleasant and sagacious criticism on the "malady of verse," as exhibited in recent volumes.

Blackwood is political, protectionist, and not so amusing as of old. Tait is varied and well written -notably the articles on the Exposition -on HARTLEY COLERIDGE, and DE QUINCEY'S rambling exaggeration on POPE, which is relieved by the glancing lights of his incomparable style.

The mysteries of Puffing, and the audacities of Puffing, have been exposed many a time and oft; the naïvetés of Puffing are still untouched. A sample was exhibited in the Times on Monday.

"Found, on the 1st of May, a manuscript of an incomplete Poem. Unless claimed immediately it will be . . . "

No, we scarcely dare print the threat, it is something so colossal! At the risk of your utter incredulity, however, we will give the advertised consequence:

aless claimed immediately it will be published to pay the expenses .

We did not imagine any one so simple as to fancy the public would be duped by such an announcement. We judge of others, it is said, by ourselves. The advertiser having the excessive simplicity of supposing such announcement would not be seen through, judges the public as simple as himself, and, therefore, likely to be duped!

A new German Paper is this week to be started in London under the editorship of General HAUG. assisted by KINKEL, ARNOLD RUGE, and Jo-HANNES RONGE. These names are guarantees for the thoroughly democratic principles of the journal, which, aiming at something like a realization of its title—Kosmos, will also contain articles in French, Italian, and English, written by leaders of the European Democracy.

A disgraceful outrage has just been perpetrated in France, which we point out to the indignation of all honest minds; its author is ALEXANDRE DUPAI, and the outrage is a satire on Socialist romen-a subject which lends itself an easy prey to satire, and therefore renders M. DUFAI more inexcusable for having attacked a living woman under guise of attacking an intellectual aberration. The title of this satire, Lelila, on la Femme Socisliste, is enough to point out GEORGE SAND as the unmistakeable aim of his shafts; but, as if to dissipate even the faintest trace of doubt, he tells us in the preface that he has made Lelila narrate her childhood, education, and poetic dreams, her marriage with a sous prefet, who did not " understand" her; and her amours with a poet who did understand her, for he carried her off; he has also made Lélila marry by turns all the Socialist systems in the persons of their chiefs; and finally, shows her in the Revolution of 1848, presiding at Le Club de Femmes, and playing an active part in public life. After this he has the shameless audacity to say that he attacks the "species," not the individual !"

KELLY'S TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

In Execution to California over the Prairies, Rocky Mountains, and Great Sierra Nevada With a Stroll through the Diggins and Runches of that Country. By William Kelly, J. P. 2 vols. Chapman and Hall.

This is one of the most exciting and entertaining books of travel we have opened for many a long day. It takes us over country which, if not absolutely untrodden, is still quite fresh from the tranp of travellers in search of a subject store having of travellers in search of a subject after having fatigued themselves in quest of the picturesque, fatigued themselves in quest of the picturesque, and fatigued their readers by their pictures of it Nor is Mr. Kelly a mere litterateur. There is no fine writing in his volumes; there is no surplusage; no bookmaking; no constant preoccupation of "reader," forcing him to dress up for effect. With a rattling, straightforward style he tells us in simple language all he met with that may be of in-terest, and neither philosophizes nor rhapsodizes about his experiences. Page after page incidents and pictures occur, which in the hands of a wordspinning traveller would wander into separate chap-ters. The animation is incessant, the interest un-flagging. He has no style; but then he does not, like bad writers, aim at style. He has no felicities of expression; but, as a set-off, he is without affec-It is the plain talk of an adventurous not overcultivated man, all the more impressive be-cause it does not aim at impressiveness.

The narrative of his journey across the Prairie and Rocky Mountains is enlivened by a succ of perils, mishaps, and experiences: the Indians, friendly and inimical—the prowling wolves—the bear and buffalo hunts—the sport—the fording of rivers and descent of precipitous paths—the excitements of danger, and the various incidents of We found it difficult to lay the volume down; and our space shall be given to extract rather than to criticism for the benefit of the reader

A SHIP ON PIRE.

"Towards the close of the second day, as the shades of evening were beginning to settle down, we observed a halo above the horizon, in the direction where the sun had sank; but imagining it emanated from that luminary, we thought nothing of it, till it became quite apparent, as we advanced, that it was a lurid flame arising from some great burning pile; a little further, and the confused hum of voices came along the still calm air—settlers enjoying some merrymaking round their large log fires. But no; those are not the sounds of glee and mirth. Hark! there is anxiety in that shout: there, that is surely the scream of female terror. Yes; there is no mistaking it now; those are the hurried words of command it now; those are the hurried words of command a catastrophe has taken place; and as we rounded a bend of the river we saw the funeral pile of a steamer, the flames roaring and crackling, numbers of human beings clustered in the arms and branches of the trees that stood in the flood where she was driven when the fire was discovered, and many standing in the water up to their armpits, holding up females and children. It was a terrific sight to contemplate, for the sad wails impressed us with the melancholy con-viction that human life was involved in the accident. We durst not approach too closely, but sent our boats off to relieve the sufferers, taking on board the ladies and children first; and long before the last man was on our deck, there was not a fragment of the ill-fated boat to be seen; the dark waters had closed over the last vestige of her hull. Providence, ever, benignly spared all souls

"She was a superb boat, owned by the captain, a young man whose all was embarked in her, who was just married to a lovely girl, and was spending the first phase of the honeymoon on board the virgin craft, that had, too, on the same morning espoused her destined element, and sailed provide and sailed craft, that had, too, on the same morning espoused her destined element, and sailed proudly and gaily away from St. Louis with colours flying, bearing on her bosom the bridal party; sweet concurrence, arranged by the bridegroom in trustful lovingness of his youthful partner. They launched out together on the stream of life in the vessel of their hopes, and in the fair prospect that shone before them anticipated no reverse; it would have been a slighting of kind Fortune to doubt her continuous sincerity by insuring the boat; but the same sun that beamed insuring the boat; but the same sun that be insuring the boat; but the same sun that beamed upon their firstessay, sunk sadly upon their fortunes. The poor captain bore his losses bravely; and if a shade of melancholy passed his brow, it was more in consequence of his wife's dejection than at the untimely wreck of his entire property. The great accession of passengers left us in a very crowded state so much so, that we had four sets of company at each meal; but we did not suffer much inconvenience lon as we reached St. Louis the evening of the next day

THE DARKIES' BALL.

"We gave a dinner the evening before we left to our friends and acquaintances at St. Louis, at which we had a great deal of Californian spouting and singing; but I contrived to get away early with Mr. W—, to attend a nigger ball, in honour of some African festival, which I was given to understand would be a great treat to a foreigner, unused to the initiative senrare treat to a foreigner, unused to the imitative gen-tility of the sable race. It is a matter of some diffi-culty for whites to get admission to those reunions, as jokes and tricks have often resulted from their pre-sence; besides which, the niggers conceive they only desire to attend in order to ridicule them. However, desire to attend in order to ridicule them. However, Mr. W— got tickets through some of his own darkies, and we were admitted, but not without a rigid scrutiny. Although it was full nine o'clock when we entered, there was no one in the room but the stewards, strutting about in all the pride of their lofty shirt-collars and decorations, for this assembly of "Allblacks" had their correct notions about the fashionable propriety of late hours as well as the titled frequenters of Willis's great rooms. Some of the earliest setting-downs took place shortly after our arrival, the ladies, in low dresses, tightened round the weist with an indentation more like a girth than a pair of stays; all wearing little kerchiefs of bright colours round their neeks, with a sort of semi-turban on the head of a regular rainbow complexion, and drops of such dimensions and gravity as elongated on the head of a regular rainbow complexion, and drops of such dimensions and gravity as elongated the ears into the shape of jargonelle pears. Men and women wore white gloves, and their faces shone with a polish as if they washed in copal varnish for the occasion. There was also a deal of perfumery in requisition, but eau de Cologne and lavender-water soon became too strongly diluted with other essences to retain their virtues, bringing to mind Dean Swift's

Not all Arabia's spices would sufficient be; Thou smell'st not of their sweets—they stink of these

Not all Arabia's spices would sufficient be;
Thou smell'st not of their sweets—they stink of thee.

The orchestra was at the end of the room, and in front of it a refreshment counter, where mint juleps and oyster patties were served out. There were several old people amongst the company, all of whom had either a pair of bones or a tin rattle in the head of their canes, to beat time, as they could not damee. Presently the fiddles and banjos stuck up, when the floor was quickly tenanted; a movement very soon followed by a hurricane of sneezing, during which I also caught infection; but the noise of those nasal convulsions was partly drowned as the "fun became fast and furious," raising up a dust which, seizing everybody by the nose, set musicians, dancers, and spectators into such a paroxysm of sneezing as brought all simultaneously to a full stop. The ladies seemed ill at ease, too, between the shoulders, and many fair heel was spasmodically uplifted to allay the irritation on the other leg, while others kept nipping their dresses, as if to annihilate some foreign intruder in the lining; in fact, dancing and fiddling now became completely merged in sneezing and scratching. I felt there was foul play somewhere, for my shims itched most irresistibly; but very soon found that the suspicion alit upon Mr. W—— and myself, as the stewards, in a body, came up to us, sneezing, and gave us to understand, sneezing, the sooner we retired the better for our comforts and safety, as there was a great and general inclination to inflict condign punishment on us for what we had done. There was no use in attempting an explanation in the tempest of sneezing, so we accordingly withdrew, sneezing, and left this polished society to sneeze and scratch themselves to their hearts' content. We, however, ascertained next morning that some mischievous wage managed to get into the ball room during the day, and dredged the floor with hellebore and cayenne, which, sent floating in the atmosphere by the beating of the dancers, produced the anno

Having purchased their mules for the journey, they had to harness them, and how easy this was you may gather from what he says:—

"They were a most refractory lot to deal with; not an animal of the batch letting on the gear without a fierce struggle, frequently mixed up with amusement, for it was most laughable to see a regular setto betwixt a nigger and one of the mules, the mule rearing and lifting up Sambo, hanging on by the ear, into the air; who, the moment he reached the ground, ran at the delinquent with his head like a ram, butting him in the ribs semetimes with such force as to ting him in the ribs, sometimes with such force as to completely stun "de dam son ob a jackass," and in bad cases seizing the lug in his teeth, and holding on like grim death, while a collar was fitting or a brit ing being adjusted."

Here is a picturesque bit :-

THE PRAIRIE ON FIRE.

Here is a picturesque bit:—

THE PRAIRE ON FIEE.

"We observed from this eminence a dusky appearance in front, but we were unable to determine at the time whether it was smoke or a low black cloud; however, as we approximated, our doubts were soon resolved; it was smoke emanating from a prairie on fire right in our track, the flames travelling rapidly towards us, with a favourable breeze. I immediately ordered the prairie to leeward of us to be fired in several places, and the bell-mare to be caught, who with the loose animals were betraying symptoms of alarm, that I feared would cause them to stampede; meanwhile the fire came down upon us, roaring, extending north and south about three miles, presenting a grand but terrific spectacle. The next move was to get the waggons into the space cleared by our own fire, and make the mules and horses firmly fast to the wheels. The smoke came drifting before the flames in dense hot wreaths as we secured the lariats, the animals snorting and shaking with dread; and some of them rearing in affright, and breaking the tyings, bolted away wildly, until they overtook the flames behind them, when they rushed frantically back, plunging in amongst those that remained. The heat now became excessively uncomfortable, for our line was not over fifteen yards from the edge of the unburnt grass to windward, and we could not back the wagaons without loosening the animals. As the devouring element came closer, burning wisps were. the wagaons without loosening the animals. A devouring element came closer, burning wisps carried in the air, endangering our waggon cover the powder-casks; but the heat became so intense we were forced to leave them to their fate, and prostrate ourselves, the smoke now gleaming with a murky flame, at a perfectly singeing temperature, producing a difficulty of breathing, that threw Mr. M——n (n gentlemen with delicate lungs) into convulsions. But those dreadful moments quickly passed away; a few more seconds and the last blade of grass was consumed, and the monster that threatened to lick us into his flaming throat vanished with the wind, leaving a bald and blackened plain around us."

A PLEASANT NIGHT.

"The evening closed so mildly none of us took the trouble of erecting our tents, spreading our bedding on the velvet carpet, with our heads pillowed on the scented flowers; but towards morning, as it came to my turn to mount guard, it came down a regular soaker, falling in perpendicular torrents, without a breath of air to slant it; yet the men were not much disturbed by it, sleeping on heroically, merely pulling in their heads under the blankets as the great drops plashed upon their faces. When the sun shone out shortly after, I could not help gazing on the different couches, which smoked like melon-beds in its warm rays; nevertheless. they all arose healthy. warm rays; nevertheless, they all arose healthy, cheerful, and hungry."

We had snother sublime but terrific conflict of the elements in the evening, not confined to one quarter, but pervading the entire heavens. It commenced by a portentous calm, that caused us all to listen intuitively, as if aware that something awful was approaching; black clouds soon after began rolling up from the edges of the horizon, accompanied with fitful squalls that almost rocked the waggons off their balance, and intermitting torrents that fell in large globules. About eleven o'clock it again became sullenly calm, and the sky obscured with a jet-blek curtain, which enveloped us in Cimmerian darkness; but at times a blaze of sheet lightning behind would throw a lurid gleam through, producing the grandest imaginable effect; and then, as if rent in pieces by prolonged peals of thunder, showers of electric fluid poured from the clouds, rendering the most minute objects momentarily visible, and enabling us to see that the majority of our mules had pulled up their pins and stampeded. As soon as the fire-works got on the wane the waterworks commenced in real earnest, keeping up a striking analogy to Vauxhall; but as the loss of the mules would be disastrous in the last degree, we mounted all the saddle-horses which were tied up to the waggon wheels, and commenced a most novel but nervous chase, following up our frighted game by the aid of the lightning, which at times almost blinded us, making our horses shiver and snort, and bewildering the mules, who kept wheeling about, not knowing in what direction to seek escape, we were thus fortunately enabled to get amongst them, and tie their lariars in bunches attached to the horns of our saddles. The storm now settled down into heavy, constant rain, in which we made several ineffectual attempts to retrace our steps, but were finally compelled to dismount, and sit down contentedly on the 4 We had another sublime but terrific conflict of the constant rain, in which we made several ineffectual attempts to retrace our steps, but were finally compelled to dismount, and sit down contentedly on the wet ground, under this shower-bath, until daylight, when the sun soon put all the vapours to flight. It was about five miles from our camp, and by the time we reached it, breakfast being prepared, we did not wait to change our garments, as the exercise and the hot sun had dried them on our backs."

For the present we close with the account of a-

TRAINED BUFFALO HORSE.

"Not very long after starting we saw a small herd of buffalo to windward of us, and, being desirous to test the merits of the Buffalo horse we got in trade, I made known to one of the Indians that I wished him to pursue them and shoot one. Spreading out the arms before him that he might take his choice of weapons he selected two holster-pistols, which he stuck in his girdle, and, throwing aside his robe, caught the little horse, and, making a sort of noose bridle of the lariat, jumped upon him bare-backed. The game creature knew perfectly well what was in the wind, as, pricking forward his ears, he voluntarily darted off towards the herd, while we stopped on a hill-side looking on at the sport. It so happened the herd did not break ing forward his ears, he voluntarily darted off towards the herd, while we stopped on a hill-side looking on at the sport. It so happened the herd did not break until he was tolerably close to them, and, curiously snough, they then headed back in the direction from which he came. He was soon laid alongside a big bull, who, as he drew closer upon him, pistol in hand, made a quick lunge, which was as quickly evaded by the horse, without any admonition from the rider, immediately resuming his proximate position of his own accord. After galloping a few strides more, the Indian leant over, and stretching his arm to the full length, fired; a momentary shock followed the report, after which the wounded Lrute darted from the herd at his enemy; but the watchful horse, as quick as thought, wheeled right round, galloping away from his pursuer, with what jockies call a stirrup eye cast back to watch his movements, regulating his speed so accurately as not more than safely to outstrip him. The bleeding buffalo continued the chase a quarter of a mile, and then stopped, pawing the earth in an agony of pain and fury; the horse was stock still at the same moment, as if gifted with volition, and became again the pursuer, as the buffalo turned to rejoin the herd. In less than a minute he was once more side by side with the sinking bull, dodging his thrusts with the skill of a fencing-master, until another shot brought the contest to a close, the buffelo dropping to his knees and falling slowly over on his side as the life-ebbing tide issued from his chest.

"The Indian immediately dismounted to cut his throat; and, while engaged in this operation, the horse stood quietly over the prostrate carcase, like a greyhound after having run down a hare. The instinct of those animals is truly surprising. They leave your hands free for the use of your wearons requiring no of those animals is truly surprising. They leave your hands free for the use of your weapons, requiring no guidance from the reins, for they intuitively hit upon the beast you select, watch their opportunities of approximating, and anticipating his attack by the rolling of the eye, never fail in evading them."

A PROSE HOMER.

The Iliad of Homer. Literally Translated, with Explanatory Notes. By Theodore Alois Buckley, B.A.

The Odyssey of Homer; with the Hymns, Epigrams, and Battle of the Frogs and Mice. Literally Translated. By T. A. Buckley, B.A. H. G. Bohn

THESE are two volumes of Mr. Bohn's spirited undertaking, The Classical Library, for which public gratitude is due; and they fulfil their promise better than most works :

"In every work regard the writer's end"

is not a bad canon, though subject to some res Mr. Buckley, viz., that of literal translation, we must record his success. He has, indeed, succeeded but too well. He is so literal as to be inacceeded but too well. curate! It is very often mere schoolboy's construing that we have in place of the movement and colour of Homeric poetry. Open the volume where you will, and you will scarcely find a page that does not speak loudly against this system of literal transla-tion. We do not refer to the incessant rendering of "buts," "indeeds," "ands," where the original is merely expletive, words which should no more be rendered in translation than the "you knows" of an orator should be reported in his speech; we refer to the tameness and consequent inaccuracy of the rendering of poetic expressions. We are not unaware of the excessive difficulty of translation, but point to the fact that, although the more nearly the original is rendered word for word, the more poetic as well as more accurate does the translation become, nevertheless literalness is often as wide of the mark as paraphrase.

The translators of Homer have all fallen into this practical paradox: they proclaim Homer to be the greatest of poets, and incessantly labour to improve him! In our opinion he is far from being the greatest of poets, though the Homeric poems are among the most delightful and interesting of works,—and his translators are still farther from improving him. They are a provoking race. Without specimens their ineptitude would not be credited. You shall have some. Where shall we dip? For it is but dipping, ad aperturam, and examples grow to your hand like thistles.

The descent of Apollo! Critics have been unanimated in the contraction of the co mous in their praise of it; let us see how translators can destroy the simple hemistich : & File sukre **inple! Apollo the sun-god being angered was darkened: he went like night. This Voss improves into

Er wandelte düsterer Nacht gleich.

Pope into Breathing revenge, a sudden night he spread. Dryden into Dark as a stormy night he ranged around. Tickell into

In clouds he flew concealed from mortal sight.

Oh! oh! oh! Bozoli says Di buja orrenda notte avea sembiante.

Where is the simple strength of the original? What had Homer to do with "dusterer Nacht," "sudden night," "stormy night" (and "ranging around" to!) to say nothing of the Tickell sublime? And what says Mr. Buckley? "But he went along like unto night." The "but" is a literality, "along" is a surplussage, and by these two little words he damages the beauty of the original.

While regretting that Mr. Buckley should have been so very literal in most passages, we have to note a want of literalness on occasions where it would be both useful and poetic. By this we mean would be both useful and poetic. By this we mean that he adheres too closely to the common meaning of words without a sufficient watchfulness of the primitive meaning. We could select many examples, but one is as good as a hundred, and we choose it the rather that Buttmann is given, in a note, as the authority. In the Odyssey (B. II. v. 152) the eagles are poised above the heads of the assembly 'loomto d'okefor, "glaring destruction. as we propose to translate it, the verb fore although it means "foreboding," having its roo sore. Mr. Buckley follows translators in rendering it "portended"—but we cannot hesitate between the intensity of the one phrase and the wes the other.

Mr. Buckley's translation was, however, never meant for the critical microscope. It was meant a a serviceable book for students, and it is such. The a serviceable book for students, and to the purpose; and almost are brief, clear, and to the purpose; and almost are very acceptable. With together these volumes are very acceptable. With them the beginner may boldly tackle Homer in the original—they will lighten the tedium of a lexica, and supply the place of a master.

HOMEOPATHY.

The British Journal of Homosopathy (Third Notice.)

ful

0

its :

SUGAR of milk is the innocent vehicle of the homoeopathic medicines. A quantity is moistened with the tincture of a simple, say aconite or chan mile, and the spirit is suffered to evapora to leave the saccharine fecula impregnated with the extract of chamomile or aconite. One part of this tinctured powder is mixed with ninety-nine part of plain sugar of milk, they are rubbed up to into the most intimate state of mixture, called the first trituration of the medicine under preparation. One part of it is then mixed and rubbed up with other ninety-nine of sugar, and this is the second trituration. One part of his dilution is next triturated with a third ninety-nine parts of sugar; one part of this again with other careful of the ca parts of sugar; one part of this again what the ninety-nine sugars; and so forth, until the tritur-tion be carried so high as the thirtieth dilution, and even higher. Each of these powders, from the first to the highest degree of attenuation, is made into pilules no bigger than a pinhead; and a single such pinhead of milk sugar, just touched a it were with the medicine, is large enough for a dose. The third, sixth, twelfth, and thirtieth dilletions are in common use in this country. quantity of medicament contained in such globale far beyond the reach of the finest balan indeed it is inconceivably minute. At the same time the medicine is undoubtedly there, though in an infinitesimal ratio, as is easily discovered with the aid of a potent microscope.

Such is a sufficient general description of the trituration and different cilutions of the medicina commonly used by the homeopathic decion. Curiously enough, this accidental portion of their system is jested on, sneered down, and denounced as if it were the whole head and front of their of fending, whereas a man may actually practise homocopathy, it appears, and never administer a single globule. Some of them, we are told, prefet the exhibition of drops of the original tinctures, or of certain dilutions of these tinctures. But they may be all said to believe in the curative action of even the most infinitesimal of doses Nor is the conception of such shadowy quantities of matter being effective, in the working of changes in the body of man, without many analogies considerations of possibility, or even likelihood. Humphry Davy found that a nailhead of sinc is able to protect some half dozen square feet of copper from the corrosive action of sea water; that is to say, to reverse the poles of all the myriads of atoms contained in that surface, stretching its influence over many times its own diameter in all directions. Sir John Herschel was amazed to find how very, very small a portion of potassium does the same sort of thing for so large a quantity of quicksilver. It is notorious that the natural medicines in some of the best mineral waters are sent in attenuated quantities. Mülder has dis covered that white of eggs or albumen, and fibrin or muscular fibre, immensely as they differ in physiological function, are of exactly the chemical composition, bating an exceedingly minute ratio of one element. A pound or two of water can actually be made to exert the pres tons by means of its disposition in the Bramah press, a thing which no human mind can truly conceive, although any human mind can prove it, and though any human eye can witness it every at, and though any human eye can witness it every day in the world by visiting a workshop where it used. It is a paradox, like these homocopathic globules, but it is a fact. So true is it that it not the quantity of matter so much as its quality, its relation, its method of application, that determines its specific effectiveness. There are many well-known things in these days of physical surwell-known things in these days of physical sur-prise which are calculated to withdraw the thoughtful mind from matter to its forces. The steamengine, the heliotypic processes, the telegraph, are all so many examples of what can be effected by suitable arrangements. The arrangement is almost everything, the material bulk next to nothing. The direction of a natural power, the line of greatest force, is ever the real question. The finding of force, is ever the real question. The finding of the right angle is the main point of skill. He is the master that hits the nail on the head.

One is, therefore, not unprepared for the sugges tion of Döppler, a mathematician at Prague, that possibly a medicine may work its effects by means of the extent of its surface, and not by reason of its ponderosity. Distinguishing that physical superof a body which is the sum of the surfaces of its exposed particles, he shows that the triturations homœopathic pharmaeist increase that surface at an enormously quick rate. A cubic inch of brimstone broken into a million of equal pieces no larger than a grain of sand is magnified in sensible surface from six square inches to more than six square feet. It is calculable in this way that the exsed surface of an inch of sulphur, or any other drug of course, should cover two square miles at the third trituration as described above; the inch of sulphur being rubbed down with ninety-nine inches of sugar of milk for the first trituration, an inch of this mixture with ninety-nine of fresh sugar for the second, and so on. It would cover all Austria at the fifth dilution; Asia and Africa at the sixth; the surface of the sun and those of his planets and their satellites at the ninth; and it were bootless to follow the matter any further. have thought that the act of trituration may develop highly-intensified powers in medical sub-stances, and it is not unlikely. Every chemist is familiar with the strange properties brought out in bodies by porosity or fine division. But these physical analogies, illustrations, facts, and conjec-tures do not seem to be necessary in the present instance. They do not come cuits have oint in hand, for every proposition must be judged by its peers, and these are not unprepared to give

What chemist, druggist, learned writer of dog-Latin prescriptions, or other engineer ever weighed the aguish principle of malaria upon his balance? Who has detected and isolated the morbific essence of either cowpox or smallpox matter, or even shown that it is physically ponderable? Is it not an infinitesimal particle of hydrophobic poison that works its proper woe? How many grains, or what proportion of one grain, does a wasp inject under the cuticle with its sting? But there is no end to such series of queries; and there is no beginning to their answers as yet. So that many diseases, and someof these the very worst that afflict humanity, are notoriously brought on by infinitesimal quantities as minute as the doses of the homogopathist; wherefore we conclude that it is far from unreasonable to expect they will be expelled by equally small proportions of properly-chosen antidotes. In short, people should suspend their judgments when they either conceive or hear objections to the small doses of these homoeopaths, for it is ten to one but a word or two from a competent person would at once remove them. It is only want of pace that hinders us narrating a little more of our own experience in that way. Be it remembered, however, and very particularly, that the homocopathic physician asserts his globules to be curative, not morbific. It seems that you might swallow an ounce of cinchona globules, and yet no symptoms of intermittent fever ensue; for that purpose you must take sensible quantities day after day. one cinchona globule might cut short an advancing one enchora globule might cut short an advancing ague. Whence it follows that the infinitesimal doses of all sorts of things, which we daily imbile by accident, do one no sort of harm; whence it follows that a homosopathic medicine not exactly suited to the symptoms does one no good; whence it follows, once for all, that a homosopathic doctor cannot do one any harm, even if he do one no good, and that by the universal confession, or rather assertion, of the opposite faction. On the whole, then, since the profession in France have betaken themselves to the medecine expectante, or the elegant system of laissez faire, and since Dr. John Forbes, the Sir Robert Peel of the profession in England, has pronounced that nature or donothing is so much better than any known treat-ment as to render the birth of some Young Physic or other much to be desired, it really does appear to us disinterested spectators that Young Britain could not do a wiser thing than give Homecopathy a leisurely trial, while Young Physic is getting con-ceived, carried, born, put in swaddling clothes, taught to walk, sent to school, and made a man of. for Monsieur Laissez-faire, he is waiting for something to turn up!

Nothing has been said of the boasted cures and statistics of the Hahnemannians, and simply be-cause we are disposed to undervalue such things. Every system can vaunt its cures. The question at issue is to be finally settled only by long, long at issue is to be many settled only by long, long experience. Medicine resembles astronomy in the length of time over which its observations must sometimes extend. Conviction may reach an individual physician or a patient in a short space; but it cannot take legitimate possession of the scientific mind of the world for many years to come. We have only endeavoured, therefore, to convey something like a clear general conception of what this new scientific power is, which struggling into notice and preferment in the world around us, in order that neither we nor our readers should remain behind the age we live in. In con-clusion, although sometimes writing with warmth, like swordsmen passing from their lesson to a fight, we wish to be regarded not as advocates but re

BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

An Essay on the New Analysis of Logical Forms. By Thomas Spencer Baynes.

The doctrine of the quantification of the predicate recently enunciated in the lectures of Sir W. Hamilton, and explained by Mr. Baynes in this little work, is a most important improvement in the analysis of logic. By removing the cumbersome apparatus employed in the processes of conversion and reduction, it much facilities to both the study and the precision application. facilitates both the study and the practical application of the science. We can with confidence recommend of the science. We can with confidence recommend.

Mr. Baynes's essay to proficients in logic, but we fear that his labours will be little appreciated by tyros or the general reader. To those already familiar with the best treatises on logic, the mélange of criticism and historical detail which he gives in a very full appendix, will be interesting and valuable, and a convincing proof of the attainments of the author as a scholar and an acomplished logician; but, without a scholar and an accomplished logician; but, without descending to unscientific treatment, it would have descending to unscientific treatment, it would have been possible, we think, to bring the subject within the grasp of readers of ordinary reflection and intelligence, unacquainted with the technical logic of the schools. Mr. Baynes has produced a learned rather than a concise and perpicuous book; perhaps more from reverence to his teacher than from want of the tact and general knowledge needed for a more popular performance. The publication of the simple and beautiful theorem taught by Sir William Hamilton, afforded a writer of Mr. Baynes's abilities an opportunity of giving a general sketch of logic that might essentially contribute to remove the prejudices of the essentially contribute to remove the prejudices of the many vigorous minds which at present despise the science, because they are disgusted with the obscurity and prolixity of the common treatises on the art. A familiarity with the formal laws of thought would be so useful to all the multitudes who are engaged as writers or readers of the important controversies which now agitate the public mind, that a really good popular treatise on logic would be a great public

Christian Aspects of Faith and Duty. By J. J. Tayler, B.A.

This volume would at any other period have seduced us into a lengthy examination of its contents, and we may still return to it on some future occasion; mean-while it may interest many to know of the existence of a work of so much eloquence and thought, on a subject upon which it is difficult indeed not to be eloquent, but more difficult not to be commonplace. Mr. Tayler is a thinker as well as a writer. As an Unitarian, he of course holds opinions greatly at variance with our own; but he has the thinker's right to hold them

Pictorial Shakepere. Vol. I. (Histories). Companions of my Solitude. Companions of my worstune.

The Works of Plato. A new and literal version, chiefly from the text of Stallbaum. Vol. 4. By George Burges, M.A.
H. G. Bohn

H. G. Bon History of the Planting and Training of the Christian Churc by the Apostles. By Dr. Augustus Neander. Trans ated fro the third edition of the original German. By J. E. Ryland, H. G. Boh

Colburn and Co Caleb Field. A Tale of the Puritans. Caleb Field. A Tale of the Puritans.

A tittle Eurnest Book upon a great old Subject. With the Story of the poet Lover. By William Wilson. Darton and Co.

Tryphena and other Poems. By John W. Fletcher.

W. Pickering.

The Prospective Review. A Quarterly Journal of Theology and Literature. No. 36.

The Imperial Cyclopedia. Part 7.

C. Knight

The Imperial Cyclopedia, Part 7.

The Rambler, Part 61.

Burns and Lambert.

The Life of Moses, first Lawgiver of Oriental and Occidental

Monkind, A Programme of European (Continental) Democracy. By Dr. J. Lotky.

Knight's Ogelopedia of London. Part 6.

C. Knight.

Knight's Ogelopedia of Industry. Part 4.

C. Knight.

Chemistry of the Crystal Palace. A Popular Account of the Chemical Properties of the Chief Materials employed in its Construction. By Thomas Griffiths. J. W. Parker and Son. Construction. By Incinas Criminal The Secret of Beauty; or, Ladies' Companion to the Toilet.

J. King.

Bartfolia.

We should do our utmost to encourage the Beautiful, or the Useful encourages itself.—Gostner.

VIVIAN AT THE EXPOSITION.

Every age has its Poetry let but the poetic eye be there to see it; and slowly it is dawning upon men's minds—dawning I say, for the faint streaks of light struggle against a whole hemisphere of darkness—that this "our wondrous mother-age" will have its Poetry fashioned out of its own realities, bearing the peculiar impress of what is peculiar to the time, and worthy to rear its laurel-crowned front beside that of any Golden or Augustan Age that has yet brightened the annals of the world.

Our Age is emphatically the Industrial. We

Our Age is emphatically the Industrial. We have passed out of the gloomy cloisters, and the rude jovial castles of Feudalism; we have cast aside the hauberk and halberd; we have sheathed the sword, and the Militar; spirit is longer dominant; is no longer the animating impulse of society; it has given place to the Industrial spirit. That is the stem irrestible for the Industrial spirit. has given place to the Industrial spirit. That is the stern irresistible fact. To deplore it is foolish, idle. I state it merely to point to further issues, and to self-determining impulses towards new and domi-nant forms of Art. Paganism has had its Art; Feudalism has had its Art; Industrialism will have Feudalism has had its Art; Industrialism will have its Art.

And here in this Hyde-park, in this murky London of ours, in this actual May, 1851, surrounded with all the prosaisms of the Present, see a Crystal Palace rear itself, the Fairyland of Labour! If ever anything exceeded all anticipations, transcended even the capricious volatility of imagination, this Exposition is that thing! For myself, I had no great anticipations. I rather dreaded it as a hore. "Useful information" is my aversion, and the Polytechnic drives me mad. But when on Saturday last, Ilooked down from those light elegant galleries upon the world of wonder and of beauty spread before me, I felt something like the mingling of awe and delight with which I first entered fairy-land in the dream-peopled season of childhood. "This," I exclaimed, "is the Poetry of our Age." [N.B. What liars we writers are! I didn't exclaim anything of the kind; whatever I may have felt, I believe my confused feelings vented themselves in a most fragmentary and ejaculatory style.] latory style.]

The scene is simply and truly transcendant. The palace itself, with Owen Jones's felicitous adornment of colour; the sweep of the galleries; the ment of colour; the sweep of the galleries; the glories of the transept as a burst of sunshine shimmers through it; the fountains gurgling with cool delicious murmur and sparkling amidst trees and flowers; the noble aisle with its sculpture, its bronzes, its wounders, its moving masses of curious human beings gaily dressed; the marvellous variety and festal splendour given to the scene by the colour which is so prodigally diffused; the glimpses into avenues and recesses all crowded with marvels; the sense you have of man's ingenuity, courage, skill; and the lustre of Beauty which thus crowns Use and Industry—all give to the scene a magic eludes description. The impression is of something fairy like, yet solemn; it would be colousal and stupendous, were not the austerity so charmingly thing fairy like, yet solemn; it would be colossal and stupendous, were not the austerity so charmingly tempered by Beauty.

Roaming through its vast spaces and solitudes, intent only on the general effect, I did not give much heed to the detail wonders, and none to the "inventions." I was content to enjoy. In fact, as it would take some dozen visits to gather even an incomplete notion of the details, I advise all my readers to follow my example, and on their first visit merely walk over the building without pausing to investigate particulars: that will take some to investigate particulars; that will take some hours. On subsequent visits they may choose the hours. On subsequent visits they may choose the separate departments their interest or curiosity leads them to investivate. But the coup d'milthe general impression should not be frittered away by minute research. It is not a bazaar remember; it is the Congress of Nations; a Holy Alliance of the true kind!

Alliance of the true kind!

I would suggest, however, either to the Executive or to the organ builders, that with such noble organs in the building it is to be regretted music is not incessant. Why should it not be arranged that one organ should play at certain hours, another at another: thus displaying the quality of the instruments, and enlivening the arrange.

another: thus displaying the quality of the instru-ments, and enlivening the scene.

As the effect—visual and emotive—of this Expo-sition transcends all calculation, so I believe will its influence—moral and industrial—be transcendant. I am not about to fill columns with what every one has said or thought on this subject; I merely note in passing that the various influences of such a gathering will ramify into remoteness at present unsuspected. I think one good effect, one incalculable effect upon our nation will be to teach them a higher appreciation of Beauty; and only those accustomed to analyze the complexities of our nature, mingling, as it does, the sensuous with the emotive, and both with the intellect, will clearly apprehend my meaning in this matter. Collateral emotive, and both with the intellect, will clearly apprehend my meaning in this matter. Collateral with this, I will note that the Exposition must go far to disabuse the British mind of its prejudice against colour. Here colour is squandered with the produgality of Nature. All colours, all tints, subdued by no law, but in all the charming effects of hazard and caprice, wherever the are turns it is hazard and caprice, wherever the eye turns, it is pleased with some brilliant spot of beauty, and in spite of caprice, in spite of occasional bad taste, the general effect is of festal splendour.

Che Arts.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

But, having vainly endeavoured to indicate the splendour of this page out of the Arabian Nights Entertainments, shall I tell you what, next to the building, dazzled und enraptured me? The women. Ye gods, such women! Firenzuola has left us a treatise, Dellu Bellezza delle Donne, on the Beauty of Women, which as it is "extant and written in very choice Italian," I refer you to, if you can read it; but for those who would read the "Italian without a master," I refer them to their souvenirs of Saturday. It was the them to their souvenirs of Saturday. It was the last of the exclusive days: the guinea tickets brought with them guinea beauties! My heart was riddled by shots from eyes in whose lustrous gentleness I saw glimpses of Paradise. Firenzuola would have said there was more than one who diffused as it were around her the perfume of a queen—getta quasi un odor di Regina, while her mouth dimpled with smiles was as the fountain of amorous tendernesses—bacca the fountain of amorous tendernesses—bocca fontana de tutte le amorose dolcezze. But why do I go on hammering at my memory for phrases which that Italian let fall from his fluent pen, when which that quite evident that he, not having seen the galaxy of loveliness which lighted up the Crystal Palace could know nothing of the summits which Female Beauty was capable of attaining! Not one lovely woman, but crowds of them! With one lovely woman, but crowds of them: With sweet demure English looks, some of them, the fresh innocence of youth, and English girlhood; others with riper and more luscious Summer, even preferable in my eyes to Spring; others again mag-nificent in Autumnal mellowness. Then such nificent in Autumnal mellowness. Then such complexions! such brows! such lips! such eyes! Tancred, led by his straining heart through Armida's gardens, was nothing to Vivian in that garden of beauty, wishing that one of them would be his Armida and enchant him as long as she pleased!

I have always been the slave of the sex (they call me, indeed, a Turk and a Tyrant, but exactness of language, you know, is not their forte!) and always considered my own countrywomen the perfection of the species—the Rose of the Garden. But on Saturday I was fairly surprised. After any prolonged absence abroad, when first I walk the streets of London, I am bewildered and almost harassed by the beauty of the women. Almost every one I meet seems to me a Hebe. Yet there are queer Hebes, too, to be met with in our London streets. It is not the one pretty woman, but the quantity which I have always been the slave of the sex (they call not the one pretty woman, but the quantity which always amazes me. After a little while I begin to the pretty women are all gone, whereas it is only that my eyes have become accustomed to the general standard. On Saturday, at the Exposition, I felt years much as I do an accusion. felt very much as I do on coming from abroad-I was bewildered by the quantity of loveliness. However, I congratulated myself on not being a married man! with a bachelor's liberty I looked upon all those Hebes as possible Shebes (by which apon an those Hebes as possible Shebes (by which feeble joke I mean wives)—mind I say possible—potential—within the spacious limits of fact; for after all, you know, the handsomest is not always the most fascinating, and before I had made up my mind to receive the core of the property mind to propose to one, she might have shown a disposition—to reject me! It is this natural mo-desty and retiring unobtrusiveness which has kept me a bachelor.

This, however, is something of a digression. What I wanted to convey to you was the unparal-leled beauty of the Crystal Palace, and the un-paralleled beauty of the women in it on Saturday: paralleled beauty of the women in it on Saturday: a gorgeous frame to an exquisite picture! I was there on Tuesday again, but the fairies had departed: some beauties there were, and many bogies, but the Visions of Saturday had vanished. Consequently I looked more at the Exposition itself, and was deeply interested.

In general character, the Exhibition of the Royal Academy resembles the three or four last—the interest lying mainly in the figure pictures by Frith, Ward, and the younger members of the Academy; the historical pictures not many, and with few exceptions, uninteresting: of the changes, the absence of Turner and Mulready is the most remarkable; Etty, too, is gone. Among the younger men, especially Armitage, and the principal of the pre-Raphael school, there is movement; but in certain very prominent instances, the annual repetition of the same idea seems to strike with a more unpleasant force than usual: the idealized models which Mr. Frost groups every year, are as familiar to the anticipation as the five letters that form his name, or as Colonel Sibthorp at a private

On entering the great room and commencing On entering the great room and commencing the tour indicated by the catalogue, the first picture to arrest attention, is David Roberts's "Interior of the Church of St. Ann, at Bruges," a large and effective picture, but not possessing so much interest as his Syrian scene, "Surprise of the Caravan," where mounted Arabs are dashing about amid sand and pillared antiquities. Creswick next meets the new with one of his most vigorous and animated the eye with one of his most vigorous and animated landscapes—"Over the hills and far away"; both in this and in other works he is in great strength. Then, Herbert's group of his own children, two daughters, designed and painted with a simplicity not often seen out of the greatest schools. The same painter's study for the Judgment of Daniel, stands forth in striking contrast with the sleepy, dead-alive action of the compositions around it; Daniel is a living youth thoroughly intent upon the business living youth, thoroughly intent upon the business which he is about, and not, like the figures in most of the historical pictures, conscious and weary of the drudging painter. "Caxton's Printing-office" it a large crowd: it is an elaborate work in Maclise's best manner, grouped with much animation, and comprising much research. The portraits of Macready in the character of Werner, and Sir Edward Lytton, are more true to the modesty of nature, and therefore more powerful, than Maclise's portraits are apt to be. Edwin Landseer has five pictu andseer has five pictures - a stag stand-Lawin Lamseer has nwe pictures—a stag standing in heather, on a bank just above the spectator; a large group of animals' heads round a feeding trough; a seene from "Midsummer Night's Dream"; a Highlander standing, with an eagle he has shot, in a snowstorm; a Highland lassie, and "The Last Run of the Season"—a fox in a state of pasting exhaustion. The "Midsumper Night's of panting exhaustion. The "Midsummer Night's Dream" is a novelty in Landseer's style, more welcome to his admirers than his Waterloo scene It represents Bottom, caressed by the doting Titania, and attended by the Fairies; the asinine head, and some perfect white rabbits with red eyes, are designed and executed as Landseer only could, and there is much graceful fancy in the compositions.

Webster confines himself to modest sketches a man reading in a chimney corner, and children looking at a Savoyard with white mice, admirably executed studies from nature.

E. M. Ward has two pictures, both marking an increase of power: "The Royal Family in the Prison of the Temple"—Marie Antoinette mending the coat of Louis XVI. while he sleeps,—a painful spectacle of royalty in its dregs; and "John Gilpin Delayed by his Customers," excellent in the play of expression. Among other pictures of a similar class, which we shall have to examine more class, which we shall have to examine more closely hereafter, Frith shows us "Hogarth brought before the Governor of Calais as a Spy;" Leslie, "Falstaff personating the King;" Egg, "Pepys' Introduction to Nell Gwynne;" Elmore, "Hotspur and the Fop."

"Hotspur and the Fop."

Among the more notable pictures of the serious historical kind are, "Cromwell Reading a Letter at Naseby," by Charles Landseer; "Laurence Saunders, the Protestant Martyr," by C. W. Cope; "Geoffrey Chaucer reading to Edward the Third," by F. M. Brown; "Harold's Oath to William," by J. Crosse; "Florentines giving up Plate and Jewels," by the Chevalier Alessandro Capulte; "The Secret Execution" (of a wife by her isalous hus-Secret Execution" (of a wife by her jealous husband), by H. C. Selous; "The Flight into Egypt," by R. Redgrave; and "Samson Grinding for the Philistines," by E. Armitage; the last, a picture with real greatness in it.

Of the pre-Raphael gentlemen, W. Hunt, in "Valentine receiving Sylvia from Proteus," and Collins, in "Convent Thoughts," are as delibe-Collins, in "Convent Thoughts," are as deliberately fantastic and feeble as ever; but there evident signs that Millais's great powers are outgrowing the crudities and distortions of this preposterous school. His pictures are Tennyson's Mariana in the moated grange, "The Return of the Dove to the Ark," two girls caressing the bird, and "The Woodman's Daughter," from Coventry Patmore's poem, with a little Lord graciously bestowing some fruit. bestowing some fruit.

bestowing some fruit.

Among the landscapes, Sidney Cooper has several of his best, some in conjunction with Lee: Stansfield, "The Battle of Roveredo," a fine piece of cabinet scene painting; Ansdell depicts, "The Shepherd's Revenge"—a wolf shot, flagrante delicto,—in a scene by Creswick: and Redgrave, "A Poet's Study," an excellent specimen of his new manner.

Among the portraits, Williams's Moritz Retsch Gordon's Duke of Argyle, for the same reason; and several of Thorburn's dignified miniatures for the transcendent beauty of the treatment.

The sculpture is not abundant; a diversion having been effected by the Crystal Palace; neith is it interesting.

RETIRED FROM BUSINESS.

Douglas Jerrold, I am about to remonstrate with Don't talk to me about Friendship; if one can't speak the truth to one's friends, to w it be spoken? It is wasting a precious thing to give one's enemies the exclusive privilege! You know how heartily I admire you, and how often I have expressed my admiration, so that I can say point blank, and with an easy conscience, that "Retired from Business" is not a comedy greatly to my taste, is not a comedy worthy of your powers. Wit, there is, sparkling and joyous—satire the -satire that all this any one foresees in a comedy signed by you!

And the jewels thrown with a careless prodigality over that patched and tattered garment of a plot are jewels, and of fine water; but jewels on a beggar do not hide the beggary, they bring it into strong relief! Against this I protest. You

With gold and silver cover every part, And hide with ornament the want of art.

Let me ask of you calmly, hand on your conscience, whether you have either told a good story, or set character in action in this "Retired from Busi-ness?" Have you not contented yourself with indicating character, indicating satire, and leaving the story to shift for itself?

The comedy opens capitally. The idea, though not a new one, belongs to true comedy, taken out of the very heart of our conventional life. The Pennyweights have retired from business in the greengrocery line, and have taken a cottage in Pumpkinfield, where there is "excellent society," if the newcomers can but wriggle themselves into it. As a first step, Mrs. P. adopts the elegant addition of Fitz, and becomes Mrs. Fitzpennyweight, completely renouncing her past. Visitors call. From one of them, a Russia merchant, the Pennyweights learn that "society" is divided into two classes—the retired wholesale and the retired retail: the "bill ocracy" and the "till ocracy." Between these there is internecine war. The slit in the counter is an impassable abyss. "Raw wool the counter is an impassable abyss. doesn't speak to halfpenny ball of worsted, tallow in casks looks down upon sixes in the pound, and pig iron turns up its nose at tenpenny nails."

This is a good broad canvas for the satiric painter, and I recognize your touch in the design and in the figures. The figures, reader, are these: Mr. the figures. The figures, reader, are these: Mr. Pennyweight, a plain man with a greengrocery turn of mind, who is not ashamed of his past, his wife, struggling parvenue; their daughter, a romantic school girl; Mr. Puffins, a pompous Russia mer-chant; Mr. Jubilee, a lively pawnbroker, with uxorious remembrances, varied by an occasional forgetfulness of his having retired which leads him to ask people "how much they want on" certain articles; Mr. Creepmouse, an army clothier with military aspirations; and Mr. Paul Puffins, a young gentleman of "genius," in love with Miss Virginia Pennyweight.

These all start advirables the intermediate and people and people with the intermediate of the control of the

These all start admirably: the jokes are rapid and telling; the satire broad and true; the subject promising. But once having set the idea visibly before us, having placed your characters clearly on the stage, why do you shirk the difficult part of the dramatist, and not attempt to make these characters more? You have contented accurately with including the property of the contented was a sure of the contented yourself with indicating what you were bound to develope. You have given us a Charade, bound to develope. To the date given not a Comedy: an epigram in one scene. For these characters do nothing; they do not assist the story. which begins in the second act; they do not illustrate any war of wholesale and retail; they do not illuminate the subject, "Retired from Business." Some languor was felt even in the first act—a languor which made the farcical conclusion to it quite boon. But when the second act opened with A boon. But when the second act opened with Captain Gunn giving long explanations, and preparing the way for the "serious interest" of the piece, charmed though I was with the natural life-like painting of Lieutenant Tackle and Captain Mr. painting of Lieutenant Tackie and Captain Gunn—real glimpses of provincial life!—I saw at once that all hope was over, and that no comic picture of "Retired from Business" was to be given there and then. The second and third acts have but the slenderest possible connection with the first; indeed the first might be omitted, and a new piece would subsist which might be called "The piece would subsist which might be cancular the Captain's Daughter"—a piece not without interest, but assuredly without any reference to "Retired from Business." A work so ill-constructed needs something very attractive in the details; as a work with the control of the control of the captain the captain the denousof art one must give it up altogether—the denoue-ment which is brought about in so sudden and inartistic a manner by the conversion of Creenmouse to disinterestedness, may be taken as a specimen brick: laughter topples judgment over as Buck-stone explains his conversion, "You found me—iron, you have left me-butter"; but the moment laughter subsides judgment resumes its seat, and pronounces a stern verdict. The flashes of wit may dazzle the audience for a moment—but only for a moment.

There, Douglas, I have said my say. "Call you

There, Douglas, I have said my say. "Call you that backing of your friends?" I do. Your worst enemy couldn't, with truth, say anything worse of -but amicus Jerroldus, magis amicus You can take your revenge any day; indeed if Gossip Report may be trusted, you have taken it in that comedy now in the hands of the Keans. No one will rejoice in its success more than I shall; and—if you let me—no one will write a more en-thusiastic notice of it.

Buckstone was droll as he always must be, and made the most of his jokes; Wallack was de-lightfully natural in that delightful old sailor; Webster grave, gentlemanly, and touching sail Webster grave, gentlemanly, and touching as the old soldier; but Mrs. Fitzwilliam, as the youth of genius, was absolutely distressing-in look and maner. It is seldom an agreeable sight that of a woman dressed up as a man, but when a woman does an ungraceful thing we insist upon her doing it gracefully; the only excuse for donning our attire is that she become more piquante in it. (I make an exception in favour of Mrs. Keeley's Bob Nettles—that triumph of personation!)

The comedy went off with much laughter and enthusiastic applause—proving that the audience did not share my opinion. But does that prove my opinion to be wrong?

LA FIGLIA.

Saturday having been taken up with Jerrold's comedy, I could only see La Figlia at her Majesty's day, and a very pleasant performance it was Sontag is no great favourite of mine, but her Figlia is charming, the part requires no more acting than she can give it, and she is as saucy and piquante as one could desire. Her singing too—though still partaking too much of the human flageolette -is gay, sparkling, and adroit, with more force and less trick than last year. Practice certainly seems to have done her good; though I cannot detect that rejuvenescence of which the critics speak. Sontag is not a young woman; her voice is not young; and disguise the ravages of edacious Time as dexterously as we may, we only disguise, we do not obliterate them.

Apropos of Grisi and Sontag, it seems the fashion to discover every year that they grow younger. The Fountain of Jouvence, it appears, is in the columns of Musical Criticism: a thing worth knowing! Imagine old Lady Crowsfoot—that rouged and wicked woman—suddenly betaking herself to Mr. Lumley, or to Mr. Gye, and offering herself—coronet and wrinkles—as a Prima Donna assoluta!

LE TRE NOZZE.

On Thursday Alary's new opera buffa, Le Tre Nozze, after several postponements, was produced with great care. The denouement of every comedy, farce, and opera comique, is marriage: this time the denouement is three mar-riages. The Marchioness de Forli has betrothed her daughter Luise—a sprightly miss in her teens, very like Sontag in appearence—to the Baron d'Acetosa, a gentleman with all the corpulence of Lablache, but whose brains are as fat and unwieldy as his person. It requires no great familiarity with the beau monde in operas and farces to perceive the beau monde in operas and larges to percent at once that this marriage will not be one of the three; especially when the uniform of that young naval officer, Villafranca, appears, and sets off the handsome face of Gardoni, whom, of course, Sontag loves. These lovers are aided by (Mdlle. Giuliani), and her lover, Cricca, a in the shape of Ferranti, the new baritone. story you foresee. After an amount (rather excessive by the way) of obstacles and stratagems to fill three acts, Lablache marries the marchioness instead of her daughter, who marries Villafranca, and Cricca is rewarded by the hand of Vespina. As you perceive, the libretto is not brilliant; and when I add that the great "effect" of the piece is Sontag making Lablache dance the polka (with a magnificent audacity in anachronism worthy of a pas cent audacity in anachronism worthy of a passing tribute!) you will see that the music must be of first-rate quality to make up for such a libretto.

Of the music it is not fair to decide on a first performance; very frequently one needs several performances, before passing, as it were, the mere vestibule of an artist's style. With full liberty of retractation, therefore, it may be said that Ala-y's music shows considerable orchestral skill, with an over-prodigality of ophicleide and trombone—and some grace and facility of expression, but is deficient in melodic invention, and has the immense fault in a comic opera of not being gay. Noise is not mirth. Crescendo is not gaiety. A fracas in the orchestra has very little that is comic. Unfortunately M. Alary has different opinions respecting comedy, and this perhaps has led him to write an opera buffa, when, unless we mistake his talent, an opera seria would better suit him.

In no case, however, does Le Tre Nozze seem to promise a brilliant composer. It is a cento of modern writing: a motive from Bellini is followed by a phrase from Verdi, to be succeeded by lowed by a parase from Verdi, to be succeeded by a passage from Donizetti, and a crescendo from Rossini or Auber. The shifting familiarity of the music is quite tantalizing. It is like coming into a new town, where almost every one you meet has a face known to you, but you cannot precisely tell a face known to you, but you cannot precisely tell his name. I am on bowing acquaintance with every turn in this opera! But the just severity of criticism must not carry me too far: the opera is pleasant and amusing, if not original, and as a variety it will be welcomed, if not as a work.

Sontag has half a dozen arias and half a dozen costumes, on the whole I prefer the costumes: Lablache is corpulent, and humorous as the amatory baron, and sings with amazing brio. Gardoni was equal to the part of the tender lover, and sang the cantabile of his scena in the third act with sweet expression. Mdlle. Ida Bertrand was a most effective marchioness; and Ferranti, the new barytone, was lively and respectable-no more

On the whole, I consider the opera to have been successful; and those who are not critical will dis-regard the want of originality, to be content with the animation and grace of the music, and the charm of its execution.

OMNIANA.

OMNIANA.

In a paragraph I must dispose of the other performances. The Royal Italian Opera has been improving in its audiences (it scarcely admits of other improvement), though relying on the old pieces—Roberto, Masaniello, and the Huguenots. The very attractive cast of La Donna del Lago with Grisi, Angri, Mario, and Tamberlik, made me wish hugely to be there on Thyroday, but Le Tee wish hugely to be there on Thursday; but Le Tre Nozze had the precedence of novelty. I shall make an early visit to the Donna, and report thereon next week. At Drury Lane we have had Mr. Ranger as Sir Peter Teazle, Miss P. Horton in the Ranger as Sir Peter Teazle, Miss F. Horron in the part of Azael (a most judicious change), and a revival of last year's pantomime. Of all managers Mr. Anderson strikes me as the most incomprehensible, and most hopeless! At the Olympic there has been a literal version of La Bataille des Dames—absurdly literal, translating "huit jours" by "eight days," instead of a "week," and by "eight days," instead of a "week," and full of such expressions as "paint to yourself." Nor is this haste in translation compensated by any care in the getting up. The costumes are of no period. The acting is indifferent. Mrs. Ster-ling is certainly better than Mademoiselle Judith, and Louisa Howard a million times more charm-ing than Mademoiselle St. Marc. But William Farren, Jun., is sadly out of place in the young nobleman disguised as a footman; Henry Farren cannot touch the part of Montrichard, which his father only could play (in Paris it is played by Provost), and Leigh Murray, has made a mistake in attempting Grignon: he is an excellent actor, whom I have often had occasion to praise, but he has no ois comica, and Grignon requires a very finished comedian. While speaking of Leigh Murray I may mention his benefit which took place on Monday—it was a real benefit, and showed him how great a favourite he is.

PROFESSOR ANDERSON.

You may account for it if you can see through a millstone, but what then? Even if you can account for it, that scarcely diminishes the wonder, and, after all, your explanation may be as great a delusion as any of it. The main facts are plain enough: here is a gentleman before you with his little son and a servant. The ordinary delusions of enough: here is a gentleman before you with his little son and a servant. The ordinary delusions of the theatre are scarcely retained, for the perform-ance is all in front of the stage, or actually in the very midst of the audience. The audience is made ance is all in front of the stage, or actually in the very midst of the audience. The audience is made to feel that it sees the greater part of any apparatus used—that the boxes are natural boxes, and empty; that the cauldron is a void space, tinned inside; that the bottle is an innocent champagne bottle; that the parasol is nothing but a parasol; and, although the pistol is not handled, you are sure that it is nothing less deadly than that weapon. The hats, the handkerchiefs, the bonnet, the watches, are borrowed from the audience; the doves speak for themselves. Yet with these plain and speak for themselves. Yet with these plain and human tools, the wizard boils away a cauldron of water, and then discharges from it a flight of pigeons; borrows a lady's bonnet, cuts it, crumples it, and then firing his pistol, shoots it down like an eagle soaring in its pride of place, from the sky over the head of the audience. He borrows some two dozen handkerchiefs from all parts of the audience, cuts some, burns others, misunites the pieces, and at last makes the whole square again; washes them before the audience, places them in a box, and then, in an instant, produces the whole number, washed, ironed, and per-fumed. Out of the same bottle filled with water, tasted and tested by one of the audience, he pours port, sherry, curaçoa, gin, brandy, rum, whisky, soda water, milk, and salts; all but the two last at soda water, milk, and saits; all but the two last at the dictation of the audience, of which numbers drink the more favoured drinks with an avidity impelled both by liking and curiosity; the bitter medicament being a trap for two of the eager epicureans, and a moral lesson highly relished by the rest of the audience. Indeed the tricks, which consist in destruction of property, or the discomfiture of individuals, such as the cutting of the bonnet, the smashing of hats, the use of bank notes as wadding, are especially enjoyed, and most of all, perhaps, by the owners themselves. The gentleman, from whose hat has been mercilessly torn an endless succession of bonbons, bouquets, and enough feathers for a bed, receives his uninjured covering as though it had receives his uninjured covering as though it had been made infinitely more valuable. The confidence with which all sorts of property are handed in to the Wizard is not the least interest. in to the Wizard is not the least interesting trait of the exhibition. The best trick, probably, is that imported from India; in which a child is placed under a basket,—the basket is raised, the child is gone,—and, in an instant, he is seen among the audience, at the opposite side of the theatre. The altercation and the killing of the child, under the basket, are omitted; but the final effect is scarcely

Progress of the Beople.

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION.

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION.

The following are the Rules and Objects of the National Charter Association:—

Executive Committee.—John Arnott, James Grassby, G. Julian Harney, George Jacob Holyoake, Thornton Hunt, Ernest Jones, John Milne, Feargus O'Connor, and G. W. M. Reynolds. Offices, 14, Southampton-street, Strand, London.

Objects.—The object of those persons who signify their adhesion to the principles and plans set forth in this document is to institute a constitutional agitation for the enactment of the People's Charter. The persons thus uniting their opinions and energies denominate themselves collectively "The National Charter Association."

Painciples.—The principles to be promulgated by Association."

PRINCIPLES.—The principles to be promulgated by the Association are those contained in the document known as the People's Charter, and which may be thus summed up:—1. Universal Suffrage; 2. Vote by Ballot; 3. Annual Parliaments; 4. Equal Electoral Districts; 5. No Property Qualification; 6. Payment of Members.

Membership.—This association consists of all individuals who take out cards of membership and subscribe to the funds of the society. A card of membership is given for one year upon the payment of twopence. Each member to contribute one penny per week to the general fund of the association, the half of which shall be sent to the executive the first Monday in every month. All members of the association are entitled to vote.

Government — Executive. — The government of the association is vested in an executive committee, consisting of nine members; the secretary receiving a salary for his services. The executive committee appoints the secretary.

Election of the secretary.

Election of the association for at least six months. All nominations to take place one month previously to the election, and must be forwarded to the general secretary as soon as possible, a complete list of which shall be published in the democratic journals. The elections shall be decided by ballot, and the agents shall make a return to the general secretary of the names of the candidates elected with the number of votes polled for each.

Doties or the Executive.—That the duty of the executive committee shall be to watch over the DUTIES OF THE EXECUTIVE.—That the duty of the executive committee shall be to watch over the general interests of the body, and to aid the promulgation of its principles by appointing lecturers, issuing tracts and addresses, and by giving instructions relative to the formation of parliamentary and municipal election committees, and also to take advantage of every circumstance and event which shall appear to them calculated to achieve the objects of appear to them the association. calculated to achieve the objects of spear to them calculated to achieve the objects of the association.

AGENTS.—That the members resident in every locality shall have the power of nominating not less than seven of their body, including a treasurer and secretary, to act in the capacity of agents to the Association. That the agents of the Association shall hold office for three months, from the time of their nominations. A list of the nominations to be sent as soon as possible, for the approval and sanction of the Executive Committee.

Duries or Agents.—That the duty of the agents shall be to attend to the circulation of tracts containing sound political and social information—promote public meetings, lectures, discussions, reading-rooms, libraries, and otherwise act as the Executive shall direct in disseminating the principles of the Association. That the agents of each locality shall assemble at least once per week, to deliberate upon, and take the necessary measures for promoting the spread of democratic principles; and wherever it is practicable it is recommended that delegate meetings representing districts shall be periodically held; thus bringing several localities into united and harmonious operation. That the agents shall be empowered to divide the localities into districts, appoint lecturers and district visitors, the visitors to distribute tracts and collect funds, and all localities shall be also empowered to enact laws for their own guidance, provided such laws are in accordance with the fundamental rules of the Association.

John Arnott, General Secretary. the Association

JOHN ARNOTT, General Secretary.

Mr. Walter Cooper has been lecturing at the Townhall of Middlesborough, on Association and American Independence. The gist of Mr. Cooper's lectures was, that a republic without association is a sham. Above 60 working men met to form a Co-operative Store upon the model proposed by Mr. Cooper, and it seems probable that the project will be carried out.

REDEMPTION SOCIETY.—One of the projects likely to engage the attention of the Whitsuntiale Congress in Leeds, is a plan of simultaneous propagandism. The plan to be discussed by Congress is to realize the idea of concerted action. It is proposed to post a very large bill in every town and city in the kingdom, announcing the mational effort and propagating the idea At the same time another bill of a good size will be posted close adjoining the large one and referred to by it, containing a short history and programme of the principles of the society, and also informing the public of the effort. A third, but small hand-bill, will be distributed to every member and friend in the country, containing instruction what to do and how to do it. Besides these three, some propose that a well digested four-paged tract shill be delivered to every house in the towns. The intention is to have all these bills distributed and posted on one day, and that in a few days after this has been done, the effort of collecting names shall commence and continue for fourteen days. To aid the bills, it is proposed that every town and village shall have its lecturer afoot. Mr. James Hole, the author of Lectures on Social Science, is preparing a plan for the Congress, which from his acknowledged ability, must attract much attention. We may state that the central board will print all the bills for all parts of the kingdom. Monies received for Monday, April 28, 1851:—Leeds, £1 18.8 d.; Ditto, per Mr. Woodruff, 3a.; Birstal, per Mr. H. Sands, 16s.; Edinburgh, per Mr. Hinton, 1s.; Huddersfield, per Mr. France, 10s.; Bingley, per Mr. Hanson, 2s. 6d. Communal Buildings Fund:—Newastic-on-Tyne, and low f

[In this department, as all opinions, however extreme. Are allowed an expression, the editor necessarily holds himself responsible for none.]

There is no learned man but will confess he hath much profited by reading controversies, his senses awakened, and his judgment sharpened. If, then, it be profitable for him to read, why should it not, at least, be tolerable for his adversary to write.—Millow

CHRISTIAN ILLIBERALITY JUSTIFIABLE.

April 28, 1801.

Srn,—Evangelical Christians are continually accused of harsh, uncourteous, and illiberal conduct towards "infidels"—those who are unable to receive as truth the "orthodox" interpretations of scripture. But is it not inconsistent to blame Christians when they treat Atheists, Unitarians, Deists, Jews, and all other hereties with inhospitality, or refuse them even the common politeness of civilized society? Is not this tantamount to blaming them for their belief in the inspiration of the Bible, and for acting up to their creed? I make these remarks because I find in the 11th and 12th verses of the 2nd Epistle of John what 11th and 12th verses of the 2nd Epistle of John what appears to be an apostolic authority for Christian illiberality. The words I allude to are these:—" If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, Receive him not into your house, neither bid him godspeed: for he that biddeth him godspeed is partaker of his evil deeds." Now, if this is not a command to Christians to outrage humanity in the persons of all who differ from them in religion, how ought we to understand the passage? The epistle is certainly addressed to an individual—to an "elect lady"—and not to the whole Christian Church; but I do not see that this affects its general application. Some of your that this affects its general application. Some of your clerical correspondents will perhaps be able to explain away my unpleasant construction of the texts in QUERIST. Yours, &c.,

THE LAND NATIONAL PROPERTY.

-As the nationalization of the land is a ques-Sin,—As the nationalization of the land is a question which will probably occupy public attention to a considerable extent in future, it seems to me very desirable that the manner in which it is proposed the land shall be made national property, should be clearly defined and set forth, as being the unanimous decision of those who advocate that doctrine.

They should be prepared to advocate their views before the public, both in reference to the justice of their claims and the manner in which they propose their claims and the manner in which they propose to compensate the landlords, and likewise to point out the source from whence the capital so applied shall be derived. If this be not clearly explained, and a united advocacy practised by the advocates of national property in land, it will be impossible for the movement to become one of a truly national character, as each individual would be left to advocate his own particular crotchets without any systematic mode of action, which would be sure to engender antagon-ism among those where harmony should be imperative.

The diversity of opinion already existing among those who agree that the land should be made national property, as to how that can be best accomplished, proves the necessity of a better understanding

There are some, though fortunately but few, who object to any compensation whatever to the land-lords. Without wishing to give offence to any one holding these views, I beg of them to consider well what would be the end of an attempted agitation of that description. There are others who think the landlords ought not to be disturbed in their possessions until after their decease, and then their lands should revert to the state. Others contend that those entitled to the heirship of each proprietor should be compensated before the state took possession of such lands.

These and divers other opinions which are floating about in some men's minds must be divested of their crudities, and the question placed before the public in a practical, sensible manner.

In like manner, the same diversity of opinion prevails respecting the source from whence the purchase-money shall be derived. Some propose to levy a tax of four shillings per acre on the land, as a fund to purchase it on behalf of the state. Others think a purchase it on behalf of the state. Others think a graduated income and property tax would supply the necessary funds. A third party content themselves by simply declaring for the principle of national property in land, without ever saying anything at all about where the funds are to come from, although they are in favour of compensation to the landlord. The late Convention, which has done many good things, seems to me to have fallen short of its mission in this respect. Because, after declaring the right of the people to the soil, it has not pointed out the manner in which the funds are to be raised to carry out that declaration. They may rely upon it the public will call upon them to point out by what means they propose to raise the purchase-money; and it would be most fatal to their cause, if the appointed leaders of the people give contrary views to pointed leaders of the people give contrary views to each other when questioned upon this subject.

each other when questioned upon this subject.

My object, therefore, in this letter is to create a better understanding where a difference of opinion exists upon this important question. I have given this subject much consideration; nevertheless, it would afford me the greatest satisfaction if any of my friends can suggest any improvement to the propositions I beg to submit to the consideration of the rubble.

In this letter, I shall confine myself to a few brief In this letter, I shall confine myself to a few brief remarks upon the several points where a difference of opinion exists among those who are favourable to the doctrine of national property in land, and shall submit propositions in relation thereto, in another letter, for the issue of treasury notes, to be applied to purchase the land on behalf of the state. I shall then be able to show, that to levy taxes in any shape to purchase the land will neither be practical nor necessary. And as to the propriety of the people waiting the decease of the landlords before they are allowed to purchase their estates, I certainly cannot see the necessity of waiting the death of any given number of landlords before the starving portions of the population are allowed to live; because the monopoly or freedom of the soil is really a question of the population are allowed to live; because the monopoly or freedom of the soil is really a question of life or death with a considerable portion of the community. By purchasing the land at a fair market price, the question of compensation to the heirs of the proprietary class will be also settled, insamuch as none of the landholders ever think of applying to a railway, or other public company, for compensation to any of their children after they have sold their estates at a fair market value. Bear in mind, alse, that by purchasing the land in this manner we cannot be fairly charged with dishonesty or inconsistency. Parliament has repeatedly passed acts on the Parliament has repeatedly passed acts on the ground of public utility, empowering railway and other companies to purchase the necessary quantity other companies to purchase the necessary quantity of land they may require to carry out their projects. There will be very little difficulty in proving that, both in point of justice and public utility, the land ought to become the property of the nation. It, therefore, only remains for parliament to pass an act to that effect. But what parliament? Not the present, nor any future parliament, similarly constituted; and that is the reason why the people ought to have the power to choose a better set of representatives to do their work.

And in order that there may be no mistake when

And in order that there may be no mistake when And in order that there may be no mistake whan the hour of their enfranchisement arrives, regarding either the men or the measures required, the people should be everywhere instructed in their social rights, and inspired with a determination to enforce them. For this purpose the leaders of the people should go forth with one accord, and proclaim the universal right of the people to the soii. That principle being once established, the social problem would tend, with once established, the social problem would tend, with as great certainty, towards an easy solution, as the needle tends towards the Pole. Full scope would then be given for all men to organise their labour as might seem to them best calculated to ensure their happiness. By being placed on political and social equality with their brethren, each individual would then have perfect freedom to use his faculties in those industrial pursuits to which he might be best adapted; while, at the same time, similar rights being extended to his fellow men, would always maintain the true social equilibrium, and constitute the safeguard of

In cultivating the land, it is no business of the In cultivating the land, it is no business of an Government to determine whether it shall be done under associational arrangements or by individual exertion. To determine upon that, ought to belong exclusively to the people themselves. Government interference ought to extend no further in the organization of labour than to afford free access to the misation of labour than to afford free access to the soil, and, where necessary, supply credit, and see that it is properly applied; and afford every facility for the full development of every branch of indu-trial operation. For the rest, it belongs to the people trial operation. For the rest, it belongs to the people themselves to carry out their own industrial arrangements. The two principles, that of co-operation and competition, would then be brought practically to the test, and the advantages of association would be made clear and indisputable to the meanest capacity. All opposition would thus be disarmed, and equal freedom would be afforded to all.

ALTERNA. WALTON.

ALFRED A. WALTON.

MONEY Consoli Tuesday, Wednesd braking d discour is 97 to saterday The flu is 52s. pr Foreign in the Brasilian

MA

ad i; P ad i; B i; Spani

Bank Stock

per Gt.

p. C. Col

p. C. An.

p. Ct. Col

p. Cent

New 5 per

Long Ann.

Ind. St. 10

Ditto, 5

Ditto, 5 (Last

Wheat, Fine Old ... White Fine Super Eye ... Barley Malti, O. Fine Peas, H

Bankan Ba

Barra he, meat he, meat he, meat he, meat her pupil herry, and herry, and herry, allerter, aller

Commercial Affairs.

WONEY MARKET AND CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Cossols, which were dull and heavy on Monday and Cossols, at 96‡ and 96‡ to 26‡ respectively, rose on reduceday to 26‡ to 97, and on Thursday, owing to the raking up of the Bank Court without altering the rate discount, they advanced to 97‡, followed by a reaction 37 to 97‡, at which they left off. The closing price natively was 97‡.

The fluctuations of the week have been:—Consols, 972 971; Bank Stock, 210 to 211; Exchequer Bills, 49s.

foreign securities were better. Portuguese news had avourable effect.

abrourable effect.

Is the official list the general quotations comprised—Issilian, at 99 and 90; Buence Ayres, 554 and 664;

Builth Three per Cents., 764 and 76; the Five per Cats. 1024; Ecuador, 37; Granada Deferred, 43 and 4;

Resican Five per Cents., 354; for the account, 354, 4, ud; Portuguese Four per Cents., for account, 34, 334, ud; Spanish Passive, 54; a d Venezuela, 334 and 4.

BRITISH FUNDS FOR THE PAST WEEK.

	Satur.	Mond.	Tues.		Thurs.	Frid.
Bank Stock	2101	2103	210	210	210	210
per Ct. Red	951	96	96 961	961	97	968
p. C. Con. Ans. p. C. An. 1726.	96;	308	208	208	91	0.18
a.C. Con., Ac.	961	961	962	97	971	974
p. Cent. An.	974	976	978	973	97	98
New 5 per Cts.	-		-			713
long Ans., 1860.	2604	7 5-16	78	7 9-16	7 9-16	78
hitto Bonds	53 p	50 p	54 p	53 p	50 p	61 p
L1. Bille, 1000/.	50 p	50 p	50 p	49 p	52 p	52 p
Ditto, S.H	54 p	50 p	50 p		62 p	52 p
Ditto, Small	53 p	50 p	50 p	-	58 p	52 p

FOREIGN FUNDS.

Ever	ing the Week ending Friday
Austrian 5 per Cents	Mexican 5 per Ct. Acc. 354
Beirian Bds., 43 p. Ct. 92	Small
Brazilian 5 per Cents. 90	Neapolitan 5 per Cents
Busnes Ayres 6 p. Cts. 102 ?	Peruvian 44 per Cents
Chilian 3 per Cents 65	Portuguese 5 per Cent
Danish 5 per Cents 1023	4 per Cts. 33;
Dutch ti per Cents 59	Annuities -
4 per Cents	Russian, 1822, 45 p. Cts. 993
Ecuador Souds 31	Span. Actives, 5 p. Cts. 194
French 5 p.C.AnatParis 90.95	Passive 54
3 p.Cts., May 9, 56.45	- Deferred

CORN EXCHANGE.

We are well supplied with Wheat and Oats. There is moderate demand for the former at Monday's rates, us sell freely at full prices. Barley is in short supply, ha moderate demand for the former as of the local believes. Barley is and Mondays prices are maintained.

Wheat ... 2630
Barley ... 670

Dariey		0/0	-	1970
Oats		1070	800	25120
Flour		940	Office Control	-
	GH	AIN, M	ark-lane, May 9.
Wheat, R. New				31s. to 33s
Fine	38	- 40	White
004	. 39	- 39	Boilers
White	37	- 39	Beans, Ticks	25 - 26
Fine	39	- 40	Old
Superior New	40	- 45	Indian Corn
De			Oats, Feed	17 - 18
Barley	22	- 23	Fine	19 - 20
Walting	25	- 26	Poland
Malt, Ord	48	- 50	Fine	21 - 23
Fine	50	-54	Potato
Pass, Hog	28	- 30	Fine

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, May 6.

Intravers.—Samuel Cockerll, Northampton, draper, to unneer May 20 at 1, and June 17 at 11, at Basinghull-street; sinisms, Reed and Co., Friday-street, Cheepside; official assigne, Idwards, Sambrook-court—Richard Edwards, Sambrook-Hardwick and Co., Weaver's-hall, histphall-street; solictors, Hardwick and Co., Weaver's-hall, histphall-street; solictors, Hardwick and Co., Weaver's-hall, histphall-street; solictors, Hardwick and Co., Weaver's-hall, histphall-street; official assignee, Johnson, Basinghall-street, June 5 at 10, at Birmingham Court; solicitors, Motteram ad Co., Birmingham; official assignee, Valpy, Birmingham—Jaxen Farrano, Amondbury, Yorkshire, fancy cloth manufactur, May 30 and June 19, at 11, at Leed's Court; solicitors, Minns-sylves, Milns-bridge, near Huddersfield, and Bond and June 19, at 11, at Leed's Court; solicitors, Minns-sylves, Milns-bridge, near Huddersfield, and Bond and June 12, at 12, at 12, and June 12, at 14, at Basinehall-street; solicitors, Wilkinson and Co., Indub-sine, Lombard-street, and Sharland, Gravesend; dial saignee, Wilmore, Basinghall-street—Thomas Prancus, Psympton St, Mary, Devonshire, merchand, May 39 and in 4, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 11, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 11, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 11, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 11, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 11, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 11, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 12, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Tay Idea 11, and June 12, at 11, at Exeter Chem. Return Gomes Wilselas, Richmond, Surrey, grocer, Frickey, May 9.

LITEUTTO ANNULED.—Thomas Bonsor, Newgate-maria nat salasman, and Merton, farmer.

ASTAUTTO ANNULED.—Thomas Bonsor, Newgate-maria nat salasman, and Merton, farmer.

ASTAUTTO,—R. CUDDIN, Cople, Bedfordshire, licensed salarupt's Court; solicitors, Mr. Wright, Furniva's-inn, Holmanupt's Court; solicitors, official assignee, Mr. Writmore, and Mr. Green, Weburn; official assignee, Mr. Writmore, angelladited—J. W. Craren, Tibbury Fort, Essex, inneper, May June 19, at 10 elsow, at the Bankrupt's Court; designee, Mr. Matthews, Arthur-street West, London-bridge; and Matthews, at the Bankrupt's Court; colicitors, Messraulinion, Gurney, and Stevens, Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, State of the Matthews, May Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, State of the Matthews, May Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, Gurney, and Stevens, Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, May Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, Gurney, and Stevens, Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, May Nicholss-kane; official assaulinion, Ma

Court; solicitors, Messrs. Linklater, Charlotte-row, Manslow-house; and Messrs. Linklasy and Maion, Gresham-street; official assignes, Mr. Groom, Abchurch-lane, Lombard-street-P. A. Dietalen, Beenett-street, Stamford-street, Blackfrianda, A. Dietalen, Beenett-street, Stamford-street, Blackfrianda, A. Dietalen, Beenett-street, Stamford-street, Blackfrianda, A. Dietalen, Beenett-street, Stamford-street, Blackfrianday, Moorgate-street-P. W. Prooforstr and J. Van Putten, Mark-lane, corn-merchants, May 20, June 19; solicitors, Messrs. May and Sweetland, Queen-quare, Bloomsbury; official assignee, Mr. Bell, Coleman-street-buildings — D. Kraet, Brackley, Northampton-bire, ilnedraper, May 29, June 29; solicitors, Messrs. Bower and Son, Chancery-lane; and Mr. Shattock, Coleman-street cofficial assignee, Mr. Cannan, Birchingham, Growth and Messrs. Moorgan, Coleman, Lower I-sington; official assignee, Mr. Croom, Abchurch-lane, Lombard-street—T. Bagg, Birmingham, victualler, May 29, June 17, solicitors, Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, victualler, May 24, June 9; solicitors, Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, victualler, May 24, June 17; solicitors, Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, victualler, May 29, June 17; solicitors, Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, Chical assignee, Mr. Valpy, Birmingham, Mannet, Irioy Cross, Worcestershire, cattle dealer, May 29, June 17; solicitors, Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, Mannet, Birmingham, M. Gray, Sunderland, draper, May 39, June 29; solicitors, Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, Manchester; Messrs. Wright, Birmingham, Manchester; Official assignee, Mr. Paker, Sunderland, draper, May 39, June 29; solicitors, Messrs. Griffith and Crighton, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and Messrs. Sale, Worthington, and Shipman, Manchester; official assignee, Mr. Baker, Newastle-upon-Tyne, and Messrs. Sale, Worthington, and Shipman, Manchester; official assignee, Mr. Paker, Newastle-upon-Tyne, and Messrs. Sale, Worthington, and Shipman, Manchester; official assignee, Mr. Paker, Newastle-upon-Tyne, and Messrs. Sale, Worthington, and Shipman, Manch

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

BIRTHS.
On the 23rd of March, at Mangaiore, the wife of Lieutenant E. O. Leggatt. Thirty-fifth Regiment M.N.I., of a son. On the 23rd of April, in New-street, Spring-gardens, Lady Harriet B. Hamilton. of a son.
On the 28th of April, at Southsea, the wife of Commander Brenton von Donop, R.N. of a son.
On the 1st of May, in Dublin, the wife of Lieutemant-Colonel Burdett, Sev-nteenth Lancers, of a daughter.
On Saturday, the 3rd, at 23, Wilton-place, the wife of B. B. Sikeridan, Eagl, M.P., of a son.
On the 4th, in Eaton-square, the Viscountess Enfield, of a son.

On Saturday, the 3rd, at 23, Wilton-place, the wife of R. B. Sheridan, Eaq., M. F., of a son.
On the 6th, in Eaton-square, the Viscountess Enfield, of a sun.
On the 6th, at Lord Wenlock's, Berkeley-square, Lady Elizabeth Lawley, of a daughter.
At 31, Hill-street, Berkeley-square, the Viscountess Lewisham, of a son and helr.
On the 79th of March, at Christoburch, Bombay, Captain H. W. Erans, Ninth Regimer Boubay Arny, to Caroline Leonora, daughter of the late John Fenrice, Eaq. of Ditton-house, Biofield, Norfolk, a dformerly captain of the Fifteenth Hussars.
On the 29th of April, at All Saints', Southampton, James Combs Giffard, Eaq., Captain of the Twefith Madras, N. I., youngest son of Admiral Giffard, of Cartion-crescent, Southampton, to Emma Emilia, eldest daughter of the late Charles Day, Esq., of Bevis-hill, near Southampton.
On the 3rd inst, at Gosforth Church, Wm. P. Carter, Esq., Captain Silty-third Regiment, son of the late Charles Day, Esq., of Bevis-hill, near Southampton.
On the 6th, at St. Michael-le-Belfey's Church, York, the Rev. Albert Sydney Wilde, rector of Graatford-with-Wilsthorpe, Lincolnshire, son of Sir Michael-le-Belfey's Church, York, the Rev. Albert Sydney Wilde, rector of Graatford-with-Wilsthorpe, Lincolnshire, son of Sir John Wilde, and nephew to the Lord Chancellor, to Laurs Isabella, eldest daughter of W. J. Caltman, Eaq., late of Aldborough-hall.
On the 6th, at St. Paul's Church, Knightsbridge, the Reverend Charles Spencer, repredual curate of the Church of the Holy Trioity, Barratable, Devon, and eldest son of the late Reverend Charles Spencer, repredual curate of the Church of the Holy Trioity, Barratable, Devon, and eldest son of the Late Reversa of Andres Spencer, repredual curate of the Church of the Holy Trioity, Barratable, Devon, and eldest son of the Holy Trioity, Barratable, Devon, and eldest son of the Late Reversa of Charles Spencer, repredual curate of the Church of the Holy Trioity, Barratable, Devon, and eldest son of the Holy Trioity, Barratable, Devon, and eldest

NO MORE CHAPPED HANDS and FACES
BURY'S ROYAL POMPADOUR POWDER.—Recommended for daily use to remove that redness and irritation remaining on the skin after washine, or from any other cause, as well as possessing the most cooling, softening, and balsamic qualities, and imparting an equisit: whiteness and clearness to the complexion. It is strongly recommended to the notice of mothers and nurses for the use of infants of the most tender age, being far superior to any other powder; also, after sea-bathing, and for gentlemen after shaving, its agreeable effects will be fully tested.

Alfred Bury recommends the Royal Pompadour Powder as an article of comfort and utility (not as a cosmetic), but as a plain vegetable powder for the use of both ladies and gentlemes, retaining its virtues and purity in any climate, consequently is well worthy the attention of merchants, captains, and speculators, being a preparation that commands a sale throughout the civilized world.

Sold in packets, 1s. and 2s. 6d. each ;—those at 2s. 6d. are equal being a preparation that commands a sale throughout the civilized world.

Sold in packets, is, and 2s. 6d. each;—those at 2s. 6d. are equal to three is, packets; by post for sixteen or thirty-eight uncut stamps.—Low, Son, and Benbow, 330, Strand; Winter, 205, Onford-street; Potter, 6, Frederick-place, Old Kest-road, Stasey and Co., 45, Cranbourn-street; West, King's-road, Cheisea; Thompson, 95, Park-street, Regent's-park; Belliaphan, 41, Tachbrook-street, Pimileo; Bopekirk, 88, Westminster Bridger, and Harter, Claphan; Blanckley, Clarence-place, Glaphan; Pugb, 7, Colville-terrace, Cheisea; Charley, North Briston; Labern, 49, Judd-street, Brunsvick-quare; Phillipp, 3, Spencer-terrace, Lower-road from the congress, Cumercial-road, Peckham; Burn, M. Libroon, Compression, Perins, Burn, M. Libroon, Compression, Cheisea; Charley, Perins, Pe

ER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"BON GIOVANNI,"
Grand Extra Night.

It is repectfully announced that a GRAND EXTRA NIGHT will take place on Thursday next, his yellow the presented (for the first time this reason), Mozart's Chef d'Euvre, DON GIOVANNI. Den Giovami, Signor Cabalari; Don Ouarle, Signor Cabalari; Masesto, Signor F. Lablache; Il Commendatore, Signor Sacquin; and Leporetho, Signor Dabbashes. Doman Anna, Mine. Fiorential; Danna Elvira, Mone. Giultoni; and Zerlani, Mine. Sontag. In the Bail Sersey. Mile. Carlotta Grist and Mile. Annalia Ferrari will chase Mozart's celebrated Minuet and Zarabunda, with warrous centerisments to the Ballet Department, in which Mile Carlotta Grist, and Mile. Annalia Ferraris, Miles. Esper, Eosa, Julien, Lausouren, Annal Paul Taglioni will appear.

Application for Boxes, Stalls, and Tickets to be made at the Box-office of the Thesty.

Marioffice of the Theatre.

M. GOMPERTZ'S NEW and GIGANTIC

PANORAMA. Illustrating a Voyage through the ARCTIC RECIONS, will be EXHIBITED on and after wonday, May 12, at the Parthenessa Assembly Room, St. Martin's-lone.
The increase and almost universal interest felt for the fate of the brave and devoted Franklin and his gallant crew has induced M. Gomperts (the successful exhibitor of various pameramis for the last fiften years), to submit to the public and visitors of London the above Panorams, which has been produced on a most stupendous scale, and with the utmost attention to geographical and historical truth, embracing the recursy and medidents comprised in a voyage from England to Nelville Island, the most westerly point yet reached in these inhospitable but highly-picturesque regions. To complete the illusion, the Panorama will be continuous from its commencement to the clove.

CUILD of LITERATURE and ART: to encourage life assurance and other provident habits among authors and artists; to render such assistance to both as shall never comprostice their independence; and to found a new lastitution where honourable rest from arduous labour shall still be associated with the discharge of congenial duties. To bring this project, into general notice, and to farm the commencement of the necessary funds, Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, one of its originators, has written and presented to his follow-labourers in the cause, a New Consedy in Five Acts. It will be produced under the management of Mr. Charles Dickens, in a theatre constructed for the purpose; and will be profunded by Mr. Robert Bell, Mr. Whitias Collins, Mr. Dudley Costello, Mr. PeterCusningham, Mr. Charles Dickens, Mr. Ducley Spready, Mr. Charles Field, Mr. Whitias Collins, Mr. Dudley Costello, Mr. PeterCusningham, Mr. Charles Dickens, Mr. Ducley Spready, Mr. Charles Knight, Mr. Mark Lemon, Mr. J. Westland Marston, Mr. Frank Stane, Mr. J. Tennick, Mr. P. W. Topham, and others. Pertions of the occurry have been presented by Mr. Absolon, Mr. Thomas Grieve, Mr. Lewis Hagle, and Mr. Tebbin. The first representation of the Consedy, which is castilied NOT 80 BAD AS WE EEM; or, Many Sides to a Character, will take place at Devesshire-House, price £5 each—this sum being regarded as a contribution in support of the design—will, on a written application to his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, at Devonshire-house, receive a voucher for the same, exchangeable at Mr. Mitchell's Library, 30, 101 Bond-street; Prospectuses of the scheme can be had on application at the office of the Guid, Wellington-chambers, 19, Lancaster-place, Waterion-bridge; of Mr. Mitchell's 13, Old Bond-street; and Mr. Sane, 1, 8, 2 stanes-streets and for the Mitchell's Contribution of the Consection of the Consection of the Consection of the Consection of t GUILD of LITERATURE and ART: to

BOOSE'S QUADRILLE BAND (of her Majorty's State Balls) may be engaged in large or small numbers for the Nobility's Scirces, Damantes, Sec., at Messrs. Boosey and Co.'s Music Warehouse. St. Holles-structure. To ensure the best Sole Performers, early application should be

DORTRAIT of JOSEPH PAXTON, Esq.
Dedicated, by permission, to his Grace the Duke of DEVONSHIER, K.G. Engraved by SAMUEL HEYNOLDS, Eag., from a Drawing by O. OARLEY, Eq. Size of Piste 30 by 15 inches.

Second Proots
Prints
Second Prints
Published by R. Mosely, Derby; and sold by all Pr

M U DIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.—

SEVENTY COPIES of each of the leading Reviews, and from TWENTY to TWO HUNDRED and FIFTY COPIES of all the best New Works, are in circulation at MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, 28, Upper King-street, Bloomsbury-square. SINGLE SUBSCRIPTION ONE GUINEA PER ANNUM. First-class Country Subscription Two Guineas and upwards, according to the number of volumes required. A Prospectua will be torwarded on application.

E and W. STURGE, COAL MERCHAN'S, BRIDGE-WHARF, CITY-BOAD.

E. and W. S. announce that their price for Best Coals is still younger to give the strictest attention to all orders entrausted to their care. (Inland Coals, for keeping in all night without stirring may be always had.)

ring, may be always had.)
E. and W. STURGE, BEIDGE-WHARF, CITY-BOAD.

BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS,—
The acknowledged efficacy of BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS, by the continued series of Testimonials which have been sent to, and published by, the proprietor for nearly twenty years, has rendered this mediane the most popular of the present age; and, in corruboration of which, the following extract of a letter, written by John Nolard Whee er, become the property of Coutoms, Jamaies, having been handed by his brother, at Swindon, to Mr. Prout for publication, will fully confirm:—

brother, at Swindon, to Mr. Prout for possessions, win runy confirm:—

"I know you have never had occasion to take Blair's Pills, but let me emphatically tell you, in mercy to any friend who may suffer from gout, rheumatic gout, lumbage, sciatics, rhermation, or any branch of that widely-allied family, to recommend their using them. In this country they are of wonderful sections: not only an I personally aware of their powers, but I see my friends and sequaistances receiving unfalling benefit from their use. I would not be without them on my account; I takes in the early stage of disasse they dissipate in a together; if in a later, they alies late pain, and effect a miner specifier cure than by any other seams within my know edge."

Sold, by ilmoman Front, 23°, Strand, Lundon; and, by this appointment, be all respectable Whitcher Vernders throughout the United Kingdom. Price 38. Sci. per box.

Ask for Blail's SQUT and Blist MarTic Pifles, and observe the name and address of "Thomas Prout, 22°, Strand, London," impressed upon the Government stamp affixed to each box of the Genuine Medicine, boad of branch (include for a P The tion, in

M

M

The | 18.8.

ED al house of a qui

VI the Ele Establication Mess General

" U enable

'The
our of admir commo parase
becom
To
the LONI

R

OLD DR. JACOB TOWNSEND'S

CENUINE ORIGINAL UNITED STATES' SARSAPARILLA.—In submitting this Sarsaparilla to the People of England, we have been influenced by the same motives which deteated its promulgation in America. This Compound Sarsaparilla of Old Dr. Townsend has nothing in ean mon with preparations bearing the name in England or America. Prepared by one of the noblest American Chemists, having the apprehation of a great and respectable body of American Physicians and Druggists, universally adopted by the American people, and forming a compound of all the rarest medicinal roots, seeds, plants, and flowers that grow on American soil, it it may truly be called the Great and Good American Remedy.
Living, asit were, amid sickness and disease, and studyins its may titudinous phases and manifestations in Hospitals, Asylums, and at the bedside of the sick, for more than 40 years, Dr. Townsend was qualified, above all other men, to prepare a medicine which should perform a greater amount of good than any other man mow living. When received into the stomach it is digested like the food, and enters into the circulation as the nutriment part of our allment does.

seeds, plants, and flowers that grow on American soil, it is may truly be called the Great and Glood American Remedy. Living, asit were, amid sickness and disease, and studyins its multitudinous phases and manifestations in Hospitals, Asylums, and at the bedeide of the sick, for more than 40 years, Dr. Townsend was qualified, above all other men, to prepare a medicine which should perform a greater amount of good than any other man now living. When received into the stomach it is digested like the f-od, and enters into the circulation as the nutriment part of our aliment does.

Its first remedial action is upon the blood, and through that upon every part where it is aceded. It is in this way that this medicine aupplies the blood with constituents which it needs, and removes that which it does not need. In this way it purifies the blood of excess of bite, acids, and albalies, of puly condition. In this way it quickens or moderates the circulation, producing coolness, warmth, or perspiration. In this way it is that this medicine is conveyed to the liver, where it allays inflammation, or relieves congestion, removes obstructions, cleanses and heals absected, should be successed, should be added to the liver, where it allays inflammation, always irritation, relieves cough, promotes expectoration, dissolves tubercles, and heals ulcerations. In like manner it acts on the stomach to neutralise acidity, remove flatulence, debility, heartburn, nausea, restors tone, appetite, &c. in the same way it acts upon the kidneys, on the bowels, on the utrus, the ovaria, and all internal organs, and not less effectually on the plandules and tymphalic system, on the joints, bones, and the hat old Dr. Townsend's Saraparilla effects so many wooderful cures. Physiological science has demonstrated the truth of what is asserted in Holly Writ, that "the Blood is the Life." Upon this finid all the tissues of the body depend for their maintenance and repetion. It carries to and maintain vitaility in every part by its circulation and ommipr desch dog their health upon action, circulation, change, giving and receiving—and the moment these cease disease, decay, and death begin.

In thus tracing the causes and manifestations of disease, we see how wonderful and mysterious are the ways of Providence in adapting the relations of cause and effect, of action and reaction, of tife and death. All nature abounds with the truth that every active substance has its opposite or corrective. All poisson have their antidotes, and all diseases have their remedies, did we but know them. Upon this principle was Dr. Townsend guided in the discovery of his medicine. Prepared expressly by the old Doctor to act upon the blood, it is calculated to cure a great variety of diseases. Nothing could be better for all diseases only the could be better for all diseases only my worms, carriet feers, coids, continenses, and fevers of all kinds—and, being pleaseast to the taste, there can be no difficulty in getting them to take it. It is the very best spring medicing to cleanse the blood, liver, stomach, kidneys, and akin, relieving pains, cramps, apassay, fainting, and carrying off all those disturbing and debilitating influences which cause the falling of the womb, issecorhos or the whites, scalding, obstruction, or frequent inclinations to pass urine. This superior remedy is a great tonic, gives strength to weak organs, weak nerves, weak stomachs, and debilitated muscles and joints, and enriches the blood, and all the fluids of the body. In coughs, colds—rounding, weak or tight cheet, palpitation of the heart, and lung consumption, the Old Doctor's Sarasporilla is without a rivarial for a my descent consumption, the Old Doctor's Sarasporilla is without a rivarial for a my descent consumption, the Old Doctor's Sarasporilla is without a rivarial for a my descent consumption, the Old Doctor's Sarasporilla is without a rivarial for a my descent consumption, the Old Doctor's Sarasporilla is without a rivarial for a my descent consumption, the Old Doctor's Sarasporilla is without a r all the circulating, digestive, nutritive, and secreting organs— from the head to the feet, from the centre to the skin or the circumfersoce—so it arouses a pure and healthy action through-out the whole economy—cleaness it of morbid matter—strength-ens weak organs, throws off burdens and obstructions with load and oppress it, and imparts vitality to every minute part of the whole structure. Its virtue is unsurpassed—its success une-qualled—and its praises are echoed from all parts of the land. POMEBOYS, ANDBEWS, and CO., Sole Proprietors. Grand Imperial Warehouse, 373, Strand, London (adjoining Exeter-hall).

POMEBUYS, ANALYSIS, Strand, London (adjoining Exception).

"AUTION.—Old Dr. Jacob Townsend is now over seventy years of age, and has long been known as the Author and Discoverer of the "Genuine Original Townsend Sarsaparilla." To quard ag timst deception in the purchase of this article, the Portrait, Family Coat of Arms (the cublem of the Lion and the Eagle), and the signature of the Proprietors, will be found on every Label; without these none is genuine, Price—Pints, 4s.; Quarts, 7s. 6d.

MARINA a CONCEN-

CULES'S ALGA MARINA, a CONCENTRATED ESSENCE OF THE SEA-WEED, exercises a Wonderful Power as an External Remedy over Rheumatism and Rheumatic Gout, even in their most aggravated forms, often curing these distressing maladies after a few applications, and invariably conquering the most obstinate cases by a reasonable perseverance in its use. The following testimonial is submitted in confirmation of the above statement:—
(Testimonial from Mr. William Piper, Publisher and Bookseller, 23, Paternoster-row, London:)—
"Dec. 5, 1850.—Having been for six months suffering severely from Rheumatism, for which various kinds of Medicines and Liniments had been employed without benefit, I was induced through reading a pamphlet upon the medical virtues of COLES'S ALGA MARINA," to try it in my own case, and in justice to that excellent remedy I have much pleasure in testifying that after using it for onlya few times, all pain left me, and a continued application of it entirely restored me to health.

Sold be Mr. THOMAS KEATING, Pharmaceutical Chemist,

Sold by Mr. THOMAS KEATING, Pharmaceutical Chemist, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London. Sole Agent. In Bottles, 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. And by all Druggists. Pamphlet, PAINS in the BACK, GRAVEL, LUMBAGO, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, INDIGESTION, DEBILITY, TRICTURE, &c.—DR. DE ROO'S COMPOUND RENAL PILLS, as their name, Renal (or the kidneys), indicates, have in many instances effected a cure when all other means had failed, and are now established by universal consents, as the most safe and efficacious remedy ever discovered for discharges of any kind, retention of urine, and diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs generally, whether resulting from imprudence or otherwise, which, if neglected, frequently end in stone in the bladder, and a lingeringdeath. For gou, sciatics, rheumatism, tic doloreux, erysipelas, dropsy, scrofala, loss of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and teeth, depression of spirits, blashing, incapacity of hair and the spirits, blashing, incapacity of his order the remaining from or combined with urinary diseases, they are unreally and the spirits, blashing for life the healthy functions of all these organs. ONE TRIAL will convince the most prejudiced of their surprising properties.

"INTOXANT YACTS."

"T. Webster, Esq., Seafford, near Melton Mowbray, Jan. 6, 1850.

"Having read your advertisements, I felt assured your Renal Pills would be of service to some of my neighbours. I have had twelve boxes, and they have derived great benefit from taking them. One man had a $6d, botte of your Life Drops, and had twelve boxes, and they have derived great benefit from taking them. One man had a $6d, botte of your Life Drops, and he very earnestly

"I. Heats, Esq., Potter's-bar, Herts, Dec. 7, 1850.

"Your Renal Pills have given me so much relief that I have recommended them to a friend here. Will you send me a 2s. 9d. box of the same!"

John Andrews, Abersychan, Pontypool.—"After taking a box of your Pills I am so much better that I am induced to send for another."

Mr. Miton Welch, Furness.—"Your Renal Pills are the only medicine I have met with that have been of service."

Mr. T. Bloens, Limekiln-street, Dover,—"Please to send a few more of your wonderful Pills. My wife feels great relief already."

Mr. T. Bloem, Limekiln-street, Dover,—"Please to send a few more of your wonderful Pills. My wife feels great relief already."

Mr. Westmacott, 4, Market-street, Manchester,—"Your medicines are very highly spoken of by all who have purchased them of me."

Mr. Smith, Times Office, Leeds,—"One person informs me that your Renal Pills are worth a guinea a box."

2 Buckingham - place, Brighton, Feb. 24, 1851.—"Major Micklethwait thinks it but justice to Dr. De Boos and his invaluable Medicine to inform him, that he had suffered very much from pains in the back and loins, which induced him to try the Renal Pills, after which he finds himself quite free from pain, &c."

Wm. Cobb. Ewelma. Organ. "It should shimself quite free

muen from pains in the finds himself quite free from pain, &c."

Wm. Cobb, Ewelme, Oxon.—" I should think myself ungrateful if I did not bear testimany to the efficacy of your Pills. I have, though but a young man, been a great sufferer from pains and debility resulting from gravel. I have had recourse to several medical men of good standing, but nothing has relieved or done me so much good as your Pills. I have not been so free from gravel, nor has my health been so good for many years, and all this I owe to your invaluable Pills. Before I begon to take them, my system was always out of order."

CAUTION.—A self-styled Doctor (unblushing impudence being his only qualification) is now advertising under a different name, a highly injurious imitation of these Pills, which to allure purchasers, he encloses in a useless abbreviated copy of Dr. De Roos's cesobrated Medical Adviser, slightly changing its title; sufferers will, therefore, do well not to place reliance on the statements of this individual, which are only published for the basest purposes of deception on invalids, and fraud on the Proprietor.

basest purposes of deception on invalids, and fraud on the Proprietor.

TO PREVENT FRAUD on the Public by imitations of this excellent Medicine, her Majesty's Honourable Commissioners of Stamps have directed the name of the Proprietor, in white letters on a red ground, to be engraved on the Government Stamp round each box, without which none is genuine, and to imitate which is felony.

"THE MEDICAL ADVISER," on all the above diseases, by Dr. De Roos, 168 pages, with coloured descriptive engravings; to be had through all booksellers, price 2s. 6d., or, on receipt of Gry postage stamps, will be sent direct from the Author.

N.B. Persons wishing to consult the doctor by letter must send a detail of the symptoms, &c., with the usual fee of £I, by Post-office order, psyable at the Holborn Office, for which the necessary medicines and advice will be sent to any part of the world.

Address, WALTER DE ROOS. M.D. 35. Fix. place University of the sent advice will be sent to any part of the world.

world.

Address, WALTER DE ROOS, M.D., 35, Ely-place, Holborn-hill, London, where he may be consulted from Io till I, and 4 till S, Sunday excepted, unless by previous arrangement.

Sold in boxes. a. ls. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 33s. each, by most Medicine Venders.

N.B.—Should difficulty occur in obtaining the above, enclose the price in postage-stamps to the Establishment.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION.—

Among the tens of thousands who will grace the Industrial Fair, every nation will contribute bright samples of its yout, beauty, and fashion. The frequenters of the ball, the public seambly, and the promenade, will find both personal comfort astrraction promoted by the use of Rowland and Sons' calculate aids; and what better mark of esteem can be offered to finish on their return home, as a memento of the Oreat Exhibition, than a packet of "Rowlands' Unique Discoveries. RowLAND'S MACASSAR OIL.

For the growth, and for preserving, improving, and beautifying the skin and comp'exion, ens. cating all gutaneous eruptions, sumburn, freekles, and discountions, and for rendering the skin soft, clear, and fair.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO.

Or Pearl Dentifrice, for preserving and beautifying the test, strengthening the gums, and for rendering the breath sveet and pure.

Roware of spurious imitations! The only remite of the preserving of the preser pure.

Beware of spurious imitations! The only genuine of such bears the name of "ROWLANDS"," preceding that of the asbears the name of "ROW LANDS", preceding that of the ac-ticle on the wrapper or label. Scid by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London and by Chemists and Perfumers.

and by Chemists and Perfumers.

TOOTHACHE PREVENTED by using BRANDE'S ENAMEL for filling decaying Tesh, as rendering them sound and painless. Price 1s. Enough eseveral Teeth. The only substance approved by the medical faculty, as being unattended with pain or danger, and the god effects, of which are permanent.

Sold by all Chemists in the United Kingdom. Twenty religious authorized Testimonials accompany each box, with full direction for use. Sent free, by return of post, by J. Willids, Filler. STREET, London, in return for thirteen penny stamps. CAUTION.—The great success of this preparious hisduced numerous unskilful persons to produce sparious matches, and to copy Brande's Bnamel advertisements. It is madely the produce of the preparation of the produce of the preparation of the preparation of the produce of the preparation of the pr tions, and to copy Brande's Enamel advertisements. It is usiful, therefore, to guard against such impositions by seing the hame of "John Willis" accompanies each packet.

H OM Œ OP AT HY.—All the Homgopathis packet.

H Medicines, in Globules, Tinctures, and Triuntas, an prepared with the greatest care and accuracy by John MAWSON, Homopophile Chemist, 4, Hoodstread, from Newson, 1979; and 60, Fawcett-estreet, Sunderland; from whom hay prepared with the greatest care and accuracy by John may be obtained, in single tubes, neat pocket crow whom hay may be obtained, in single tubes, neat pocket from whom hay untiable for families and the profession. "Lauris" and alther works on Homomopathy, by Listik Buckingham, Eng., and post-free to all parts of the kingdom. Dispensaries and the profession supplied on liberal terms.

Just published, and may be had tree of charge, a small pamble to a Homomopathy, by J. Silk Buckingham, Eng., MAWSON'S HOMGEOPATHIC COUOA.—The Consult, of nib. contains a very large proportion of nutritive matter, assisting of a farinaceous substance, and of a rish and beaut oil. This oil is esteemed on account of its being less laiks had any other oil to rannelistly. Homogopathic physician as und in their recommendation of coooa as a beverage; and the summinals from other sources are numerous and of the high character. It was so highly esteemed by Linnmus, the did all Naturalists that he named it Theobroma.—Food for the fash and the summinal from other sources are numerous and of the high character. It was so highly esteemed by Linnmus, the did all the properties populate letturer on Physiology, again before the content of the conten street, Sunderland.

AGRYS. — North Shields—Mease and Son, Druggists, bederiand—Mr. John Hills, grocer. S tith Shields—Bell sat My. John Dodgson and Co. druggists. Penrith—Mr. George Ramsay, druggist. Son Monks, druggists. Darlington—Mr. S. Barlow, druggist. Darlington—Mr. S. Barlow, druggist. Collisie—Mr. Harrison, druggist. Agints wanted!

FRANKS'S SPECIFIC CAPSULE -A land FRANKS'S SPECIFIC CAPSULE—A far of Medicine at once safe, sure, speedy, and pleasant, updated by a policiable to urethral morbid secretions, and cher inements for which cepatba and cubebs are commonly administrated by the second of the second continuous teach Capsule containing the Specific is made of the post of the second continuous continuous teachers, which, encased in tinfoir, may be conveniently active the second continuous continuous teachers and the second continuous cont had, in bottles, at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and ils. each.

FRANKS'S SPECIFIC SOLUTION OF OOPAIBA.
FRANKS'S SPECIFIC SOLUTION OF OOPAIBA.
FROM JOSEPH Henry Green. Esq., F.R.S., President of the Espit College of Surgeons, London; Senior Surgeon to 8t. Themsel Hospital; and Professor of Surgery in King's College, Losis.
"I have made trind of Mr. Franks's Solution of Oopais, 4
St. Thomas's Hospital, in a variety of cases, and the resis warrant my stating, that it is an efficacious remedy, and which does not produce the usual unpleasant effects of Oopais.
"Lincoln's-inn Fields, April 15, 1835."
"Lincoln's-inn Fields, April 15, 1835."
From Bransby Cooper, Esq., F.R.S., one of the Counsil dis Royal College of Surgeons, London; Senior Surgeon to Gell Hospital; and Lecturer on Anatomy, &c.
"Mr. Bransby Cooper presents his compliments to Mr. Oerp Franks, and has great pleasure in bearing testimoty is efficacy of his Solution of Copaiba. Mr. Cooper has preside the Solution in ten or twelve cases with perfect auccess." New-sureet, April 13, 1835."

*2 These medicines are protected against counterfeit by the Government Stamp—on which is engraven "Gsoags Fasts, Blackfriars-road"—being attrched to each.

Manu bility that cand lean be in ne WOO MA? Cover Upb Mar War

To age fi comfo pietel elegan moons bility, patron the sa livered At 8 98, Bu

IND

H This more fresh n with the inv a most wide age the same out of the same of the

tween to the p whose of extent mand of prepara

M regal

The lat tearale freton, cache, cache, and cache, and cache, and cache, and cache and c

PRIVATE TUITION.

NR. J. SIBREE, M.A. (of the University of London), whate to take ONE or TWO PUPILS to educate with the Sons of a Gentleman residing in the neighbourbood of Stread. The course of instruction will comprise all the bratches of a complete Classical and Mathematical Education (including German and French), such as is required in preparing for a Frofessional Life, or for extering the Universities.

The house Mr. S. composes is in a healthy and pleasant situation, in one of the most agreeable districts in England.

Terms 2 (400 per Annum.

The Upper Grange, near Stroud, Gloucestershire. References well. Marling, Eag., Ebley, Gloucestershire.

EDUCATION (Private).—In one of the noblest DUCATION (Pilvate).—In one of the motiest manufactures similarly appropriated in any middland country, thours from London, a limited number of PUPILS is received by a Cierry man, M. A. Oxon, of much experience and some literary man. Terms comparatively moderate. Admission at any period a quarter. Address S. T. P., Churton's Library, Holles-street, of a quarter.

THE EXHIBITION OF 1851.

VISITORS' RE-UNION and BUSINESS ADDRESS OFFICE, 448, West Strand London, (over the Electric Telegraph-office, and opposite Hungerford-street), Bublished as general and universal focus for mutual commu-inhibited a a general and universal focus for mutual commu-nication and general inquiry.

Mesers. JOHN HAMPDEN and Company, Patentess and General Commissioners for the promotion of Zritiah and Foreign Art and Industry, e naulting Engineers and Draughtsmen, 448, West Strand. London. Maps. Plans, and Surveys model; Per-petive, Plain, or Working Drawings executed with the greatest necision, punctuality, and dispatch. Models, or working machinery of any description, copied on an colarged or reduced tale, and built to order for home use or exportation.

THE QUEEN'S PARASOL, REGISTERED by THOMAS EVANS and CO., Feb. 19, 1851.

"Upon the highest authority—that is, fair authority—we are sailed to state. that the existing ne plus ultra is to be found in "The Queen's Perasol," which has this week exhibited itself at satisfies by the property of the propert radi.

dan:

as in. mita-teol-that nthis o, we look to they bears, and all trainers, and the nti, or , con-mont a thus mited testi-ighest and of lods."

le tie

na uni nfurirr ne prohe node nile sul unui
unui rentit,
forus.

omer walk

Amend May, socking in and Car-fern L sope or sil-istered.

pured carried o to 4, out in-, or en-medi-

ach. a Labo be had, i, each, may be e Boyal nondos-aibs, si results and out opais-auxs.

A.

l of the to Guy's

George to the

ROYAL VICTORIA FELT CARPETING.

The public attention is particularly directed to this Manufactur. The carpeting combines beauty of design, durability, imperciousness to dust, and economy in price, costing haf that of Brusels. It has now been in general uses many years, and becease well established with the trade and the public, and can be purchased at all respectable Carpet Houses in London, and in nearly every Town in the United Kingdom. The PATENT WOOLEN CLOTH COMPANY, S. LOVE-LANE, ALDER-MANBUEY, also manufacture Printed and Embossed Table Covers in the newest designs, Window Cutafins, Cloths for Uphoistren, thick Felt for Polishing, &c. &c.

Numbartories at Leeds, and Borough-road, London. Wholesale Warehouses, Lave-lane, Wood-street, London.

Common Floor Cloth ..... 2s. Od. do.

INDIA MATTING; COCOA FIBRE MATS and MATTING.

Japanned Folding Screens from 32s.

JOWETT, Manufacturer, 53s, New Oxford-street.

TO PERSONS about to MARRY.—Those about to marry should obtain my guide, with designs, sent postage fire, where they will see that a four-roomed Cottage is susfertably furnished for 25 guineas; a six-roomed House completely and needly for £70; an eight-roomed House, with many signaces, and substantially, for £140; a Mannion, of fourteen rooms, furnished with that style of elegance, beauty, and durability, for which the house has obtained so large a share of public patronage, for 350 guineas. A single room or a single article at the same moderate charges. To country residents all goods delineed in any part of the Kingdom carriage free.

A19MITH'S Cabinet, Berding, and Upholstery Warerooms, 8, baplage-wells-road, next door to Clerkenweil Pollee Court.

C. DOBSON COLLET, late of the Royal Italian of Musical Lectures, Private Lessons, or Class Teaching, in Town or Country, apply to C. D. C., 15, Essex-street, Strand.

HOMEOPATHIC COCOA PREPARED BY

HOMEOPATHIC COCOA PREPARED BY
TALOR BROTHERS. (The most extensive manufacwers of Goos in Europe.)
This original and exquisite preparation, combining in an weat degree, the pureness, nutrimen, and fine aroms of the feels nut, is prepared under the most able homeopathic advice, with the matured skilland experience of TAYLOB BROTHERS, the inventors. A delicitous and wholesome beverage to all; it is a most essential article of diet, and especially adapted to those side homeopathic treatment. It is not cloying to the appetite, and spress with the most delicate and irritable digestive organs.
his purifying to the thood, soothing and agreeable to the nerear system, lubric sting to the alimentary canal, and proves, at he mane time, invigerating and refreshing.
TAYLOB BROTHERS confidently challenge comparison beterm this and any of the so-called homeopathic ecoco offered the public. A single trial will suffice. Observe, particularly, you cash packet, the name.

TAYLOB BROTHERS, LONDON,
TAYLOB BROTHERS, LONDON,
TAYLOB BROTHERS, LONDON,
TAYLOB BROTHERS, LONDON,
COCOA AND CHOCOLATE.

**Soundardardses over other makers arises from the paramount that of their manufacture; larger experience, greater comand of market, matured judgment in selection, and skill in preparation, enabling them to offer every kind of plain and fancy
COCOA AND CHOCOLATE.

**Soundardses of the selection of the
SOLUBLE AND DIFFETIC COCOAS.

The latter's strongly recommended by the faculty to invalids, avalencents, and dyspeptics, as most nutritious and easy of direason, and being tree from the exciting properties of tea and asso, makes it a most desirable refreshment after a late

Bolton and properties of the selection, such as a such control of the selection, and a still a most of the selection of the

**SOLUBLE AND DIFFETIC COCOAS.**

The latter's strongly recommended by the faculty to invalids, avalencents, and desirable refreshment after a late

Bolton and Persenvalities experience in the AULT NEW COCOAD FINESTIMENT.

Desire, and Olimen.

CAUTION. - To prevent disappointment see that the name "Taylo Brothers" is upon every packet, there being many vile South Le and DIETETIC COCOAS misulated to bring Cocoa into disrepute.

R OSSI'S MARINE TINCTURE, for STAINING the HAIR a beautiful Brown or Black, in a few minutes, without staining the skin The tincture applied by contract if required, or sold in bottles, 5s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 3ls.—Sole inventor, LOUIS ROSSI, Coiff-ur, 234, Regent-street. Saloons for Hair Cutting and Dressing. On parle Français.

Bells, and every other article in the Trade, at equally moderate charges.

Testimonials of the Press:—

"Mr Henry Colwell's Trusses, designed for Prolapsus Ani, are admirable in their construction. Those which are intended for Prolapsus Uteri are the most perfect instruments we have ever seen."—The Chemist.

"In science and skill in adapting his trusses to the peculiar circumstances of the ease, Mr. Colwell is inferior to no artist in London."—United Service.

"Mr. Colwell has, in the most philanthropic and praiseworthy manner possible broken through the extortionate system so long pervading the Truss-making trade."—Sun.

"Mr. Colwell has cossbined lightness of spring and delicacy of workmanship with the greatest security, ease, and comfort to the patient."—Heading Mercury.

"Mr. Colwell is an eminent Truss-maker."—Heraid.
Ladies attended by Mrs. Colwell, Mondaya, Wednerdays, and Pridaya, at 24, Boston-street, Gloucester-place, New-coad; and on Tuesdays. Thursdays, and Saturdays at the Manufactory, Bird-in-Hand-court, 76, Cheapside, from eleven till four.

DEAUTIFUL HAIR. WHISKERS. EVE.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR, WHISKERS, EYEBEOWS, &c., may be with certainty obtained by using a very small portion of BOSALIE COUPELLE'S PARISIAN POMADE, every morning, instead of any oil or other preparation.
A fortnight's use will, in most instances, show its surprising properties in producing and curling Whiskers, Hair, &c., at any age, from whatever cause deficient; as also checking greyners, &c.
Purchasers who have been deceived by imitations of this Pomade, under various ridiculous titles, will do well to make ONE TRIAL of Miss Coupelle's preparation, which they will find to answer all it professes.
Sent free by post, with instructions, &c., on receipt of twentyfour postage stamps, by Miss Coupelle, Ely-place, Holborn, Loudon; who may be consulted on these matters daily, from two till five o'clock.

TESTIMOMIALS.
Lieutenant Holroyd, R.N., writes: "Its effects are truly astonishing; it has thickened and darkened my hair very much."
Mrs. Buckley, Stapelford: "Your delightful Pomade has improved my hair wonderfully."
Mr. Yates, hair-dresser, Malton: "The young man has now a good pair of Whiskers; I want you to send me two pots for other customers of mine."
Mrs. Lello, Worthing: "I use your Pomade in my nursery, good pair of Whiskers; I want you to send me two pots for other customers of mine."

Mrs. Lello, Worthing: "I use your Pomade in my nursery, as I find it very useful for children's hair also."

DO NOT CUT YOUR CORNS—BUT CURR THEM. Also will be sent (free), or receipt of thirteen stamps, her only safe, speedy, and lasting cure for soft or hard corns, busions, &c. It cures in three days, and is never failing. Mrs. Hughes, Sunbury: "It cured four corns, and three butions, massingly quick, and is the best and safest thing I have ever most with."

Address: MISS COUPELLE, Ely-plane, Holborn, London.

bunions, amaringly quick, and is the best and safest thing I have ever met with."

Address: MISS COUPELLE, Ely-plane, Holborn, London.

CURES FOR THE UNCURED!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—An extraordinary of the control of each pot or box.

DR. CULVERWELL ON NERVOUSNESS, DEBILITY, AND INDIGESTION; also on Urinary Derangements, Constipation, and Hæmorrhoids.

Is. reach; by Post, Is. 6d.

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, AND AVOID.

A popular exposition of the principal causes (over and careless feeding, &c.) of the above harassing and distresting complaints, with an equality intelligible and popular exposition of how we should live to get rid of them; to which is added diet tables for every meal in the day, and full instructions for the regimen and observance of every hour out of the twenty-four; illustrated by numerous cases, &c.

Vois. 2 and 3, companions to the preceding, numerous cases, &c.

Vols. 2 and 3, companions to the preceding,
THE ENJOYMENT OF LIFE. | HOW TO BE HAPPY.

"Jucunde Vivere."

ON URINARY DISORDERS, CONSTIPATION, and HÆMORBHOIDS; their Obviation and Hemoval.
Sherwood, 32, Patern-ater-row; Mann. 39, Cornhill; and the Author, 10, Argyll-place, Regent-street; consultation hours, ten to tweite; svenings, seven till nine.

ASSOCIATION FOR PROMOTING THE REPEAL

TAXES ON KNOWLEDGE

A COURSE OF LECTURES,

IN AID OF THE FUNDS, WILL BE GIVEN AS FOLLOWS :-

MECHANICS' INSTITUTION,

By C. COWDEN CLARKE.

MONDAY, May 26th ..... SONGS OF SHAKSPERE.
MONDAY, June 2nd, ROBIN HOOD & MAID MARIAN.

By C D. COLLET.

WITH VOCAL ILLUSTRATIONS, ON BOTH

OCCASIONS, By Miss THORNTON

Miss A. HINCES,

Admission 6d. Reserved Seats, 1s. Reserved Seats for the Course, 2s. 6d.

Reserved Seats for the Course, 2s. 6d.

Doors open at half-past Seven. Commence at half-past Eight.

Tickets to be had of J. A. Novello, 69, Dean-street, and 24

Poultry; J. Watson, Queen's-head-passage; E. Truelove, John street; at the National-hall; at the Mechanics' Institution; and at the Office of the Association, 15, Essex-street, Strand.

By order of the Committee, C. DOBSON COLLETT, Secretary.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

THE GREAT EXHIBITION.

NOTICE TO VISITORS.

Of the vast assemblages of persons who will visit the "Metropolis of the world," a large majority will have heard of the tropolis of the world," a large majority will have heard of the reputation, or tested the merits of M185 DAWSON'S ELEGANT TOILET REQUISITES. Among the tens of thousands who will grace the Industrial Fair, every nation will contribute bright samples of its youth, heauty, and fashion. The frequenters of the Ball, the Public Assembly, and the Promeande, will find both personal comfort and attraction promoted by the use of Miss Dawson's Elegant Requisites.

The patronage of the aristocracy and the elite of fashion, and the confirmation, by experience, of the infallible efficacy of these Creative Renovating Specifics, have characterised them with perfection, and given them a celebrity unparalleled.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR, WHISKERS, &c.—Of all the preparations induced for restoring, improving, and beautifying the human hair, none have gained such a world-wide celebrit and immense sale as Miss DAWSON'S celebrated THERMETENE. It is eminently successful in nourishing, carling, and beautifying the hair, and checking greyness in all its stares, strengthening weak hair, preventing its failing off, &c. For the reproduction of hair in baldness, from whatever cause and at whatever age, it stands unrivalled, never having failed. One trial only is sedicited to prove the fact. Sent free with instructions, &c., on receipt of twenty-four postage stamps, by ELLEN DAWSON, Fost-office, Gray's-inn-road, London.

TESTINONIALS.

"I have only used two packages of your valuable preparation, and I am happy to inform you my hair, which was goue very grey, is quite restored to its natural colour."—Miss C. Tabb, &i.

"I have been tempted to try several compounds advertised, but your delightful pomade certainly is the best I have ever used: it has improved my hair anazingly."—Miss Mary Clark, Belfast.

"It is now three months since I first used your Thermetene, and my hair, which was very Betfast.

"It is now three months since I first used your Thermetene, and my hair, which was very thin, and in some places quite gone, is now much thicker and stronger than it ever was."—Miss Ellis, Treglisson.

Treg'isson.

"I hear daily from my customers most wonderful accounts of your celebrated Thermetson; its properties are certainly astonishing."—T. E., perfumer, Trure.

For children it is indispensable, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of heir.

tionishing."—T. E., perfumer, Trure.
Forchidren it is indispensable, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hvir.

MISS DAWSON'S CELEBRATED ENAMEL POWDER
FOR THE SKIN AND COMPLEXION.—This Powder imparts to the skin a natural whiteness, youth ul delicacy asd softness, attainable by no other means. Brownness of the Neck or Arms, undue Redness of the Face and Hands, are obviated by one application of this exquisite discovery. For personal appearance at Court, the Ball or Concert, it is indispensable especially as it represents the unpleasantness of sensible perspiration and its disagreeable accompaniments. It will be found superior to any other article for preventing that Moisture in the hands so detrimental to Fancy Needle-work. When applied to the Joints of the Arm, it prevents any Discoloration of the Dress. To Actresses and Singers it is of infinite service, subduing that Redness of the Features caused by xertion, and cooling the skin in a most delightful manner. Its capability of acothing irritations, and removing cutaneous defects, discolorations, and unsightly appearance, render it indispensable to every totlet. Gentlemess after shaving will find it allay all irritation and tenderness of the skin, and render it ends, smooth, and pleasant.—Price 2s. per box, or sent direct by Miss Dawson, on receipt of thirty postage stamps.

BEAUTIFUL TEETH.—Miss Dawson's Prastax Toorm Powbux possesses, in an extraordinary degree, the power of cleansing, polishing, and whitening the teeth, however discolored they may be by sickness or neglect. Being composed entirely of astringent and tonic vegetable substances, it preserves the cannel, strengthens the gums, and completely eradicates the scury. The first application gives the teeth a beautiful pearly whiteness, and by constantly using the same, persons will retain a splendid set of teeth to the last period of life. Its antisceptle properties render it particularly adapted for correcting any unpleasant efforts of useful could indicative of perfect soundness. Price is am

BRWARE OF VURIOUS IMITATIONS! The only genuine ele bears the na me of ELLEN DAWNON on the Wrapper or I Address, Miss BLIAN DAWNON, Post-office, Gray's-inn-London.

Just Published, 2 vals. pest 8vn., cloth, 21s.,

A N EXCURSION to CALIFORNIA over the PRAIRIE, ROCKY MOUNTAINS, and GREAT SIERRA NEVADA, with a STEOLL through the DIGGINGS and EANCHES of that COUNTRY.

By WILLIAM KELLY, J. P.

"These are the best sketches of California that we have yet seen."—dikeneum.

seen."—Atheneum.
"The most lively, picturesque, and agreeable book that we have yet seen on this subject."—Leader.
London: Chapman and Hall. 193, Piccadilly.

THE JOURNAL of DESIGN and MANU-FACTURES for MAY. With numerous Woodcuts and Specimens of Fabrics now exhibiting at the Great Exhibition.

London: Chapman and Hall, 193, Piccadilly.

SIR EDWARD BULWER LYTTON'S NEW GOMEDY.
On the 17th instant will be published, price ba.,
NOT SO BAD AS WE SEEM; or Many Sides to a Character. A Comedy in Five Acts, as performed before her Majesty and H.B.H. Prince Albert at Devonehira, house. Published for the GUILD of LITERATURE and ART, by Chapman and Hall, 193, Piccadilly.

This day is published, in super-royal 8vo., with SIX PORTRAITS ON STREE, price 15s.,

INTRODUCTION TO THE HISTORY OF
THE PEACE. Being the previous History of the HalfCentury, from 1800 to 1815. By Harrier Martineau.
London: Charles Koight, 90, Fleet-street.

SIR WALTER SC WORKS AND LIFE.	0	T	r ,	S
96 Engravings, 48 vols, fcap, 8vo	-	67	4	0
Vignette Titles, 25 vols, fcap. 8vo.	-	5	0	0
Abbotsford Edition. 2000 Engravings. 12 vols. sup	er-	o o	0	v
Portrait and Vignette Titles. 5 vols. royal 8vo.	- 5		10	0
PORTICAL WORKS.	-	-	10	v
24 Engravings and Fac-simile. 12 vols. fcap. 8vo.	12	. 1	16	0
14 Engravings and Fac-simile. 12 vois. icap. ovo.	-0		4	0
12 Engravings and Fac-simile. 6 vols. fcap. 8vo. 26 Engravings and Fac-simile. 1 vol. super-roy. 8		â	18	0
Vignette Title and Fac-simile. I vol. royal 8vo.	10,	0	10	0
PROSE WRITINGS.	•	U	10	U
56 Engravings and Maps. 28 vols. feap. 8vo.	-	4	4	0
20 Engravings. 1 vol. super-royal 8vo.	_	0	18	0
Engravings on Wood. 1 vol. royal 8vo	_		10	0
LIFE OF NAPOLEON.	-	U	10	U
10 Engraving and Maps. 5 vols feap. 8vo.		1	0	0
20 Engravings, 1 vol. super-royal 8vo.	_	ô	18	0
Vignette Title, I vol. royal 8vo	- 7		10	0
TALES OF A GRANDFATHER.	-	U	10
			12	0
6 Engravings. 3 vols. fcap. 8vo.	-		10	6
11 Engravings. 1 vol. super-royal 8vo	-
Vignette Title. 1 vol. royal 8vo	-	0	6	0
LIFE BY MR. LOCKHART.
20 Engravings and Fac-simile. 10 vols, feap. 8vo.			10	0
11 Engravings and Fac-simile, 1 vol. super-roy, 8	TO.	0	18	0
Portrait and Fac-simile. 1 vol. royal 8vo			10	0
Adam and Charles Black, Edinburgh; Houlston London; and all Booksellers.	and	Ston	em	m,

Second Edition, revised, price 1s., with elegant Frontispiece, DEFER LITTLE and the LUCKY SIXPENCE;
The FROG'S LECTURE; and other Stories.
"A Wordsworth for children-kindness, integrity, charity, candour, and truth are delightfully inculcated,"—Morning Advertiser, Jan. 10.
"Well deserves a standard place in children's libraries."—
Table Wess Inc. 11.

erriter, Jan. 10.

"Weil deserves a standard place in children's libraries."—

Daily News, Jan. 11.

"Fretty little stories—the public pronounce it amusing."—

Leader, Jan. 18.

"Suited to become 'familiar as household words' in the homes of England."—Leicester Chronicle.

"Cannot fail to be a great favourite. The 'Lucky Sixpence' bids fair to be learned by heart and long remembered."—British Bunner, Feb. 19.

"Happy are the Toms and Fannys in whose behalf a shilling is so well invested."—Sussex Express, March 22.

"Written in a style so attractive as to ensure it a welcome among children."—East Anglian Record and Louestoft Advertiser, April 2.

among children."—East Anguan Record and Lowestoft Adver-fiser, April 2. Ridgway, 169, Piccadilly; Cawthorn and Hutt, 24, Cockspur-street; T. Bosworth, 215, Regent-street.

DEDICATED TO W. C. MACREADY, ESQ.

HAZLITT'S SHAKSPEARE, with Notes,
Life, Powns, &c., to be completed in Eight One shilling Parts, boards, or Four 3s. 6d. volumes, cloth extra gilt.

NOW READY, cloth extra, the FIRST VOLUME, price 2s. 6d.; or Parts 1, 2, and 3, fancy boards, 1s. each, printed in a new type on excellent paper.

This edition is styled by more than one hundred journals as the cheapest extant, and universally praised for its clear type, good paper, and entire production.
London: George Routledge and Co., and all Booksellers, and Railway Stations in Town or Country.

Just published, handsomely bound in cloth, price 4s. 6d., CLARKE'S LONDON AS IT IS TO-DAY, where to go, and what to see during the Great Exhibition, with a correct Map, and upwards of 300 Engravings on wood.

Uniform with the above,

THE CRYSTAL PALACE: its Origin, History, and Construction; No. 2, price lid., profusely illustrated, to be minued weekly.

London: H. G. Clarke and Co., 4, Exeter-change.

on: H. G. Clarke and Co., 4, Exeter-change.

A VISITOR'S GUIDE TO THE GREAT EXHIBITION! Descriptive of all its principal Attractions, and Illustrated with Twenty Pictures of the most important Works of Art. Foolscap 4to.

Cundall and Addey, 21, Old Bond-street.

Just published, price 2s. 6a.

HOWARD on the LOSS of TEETH.—A new invention connected with Dental Surgery has been introduced by Mr. Howard, consisting of an entirely new description of Artificial Teeth, fixed by SELF-ADHESION, combining capillary attraction and atmospheric pressure, without springs, wires, or ligatures. They will never change colour or decay, and will be found very superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation. The invention is of importance to many persons, and those who are interested in it should read that treatise.

simpkin and Marchall, and all Booksellers; or of the homas Howard, Surgeon Dentist, 17, George-street,

THE JURY WILL SPEAK SHORTLY.

This day is published, price is.,

RETIRED FROM BUSINESS. A Come
In Three Acts. By DOUGLAS JERBOLD. As performe the Theatre Royal Haymarket. A Comedy. n Three Acts. By DOUGLAS JERROLD. As performentre Royal Haymarket.
Published at the "Punch" Office, 85, Fleet-atrect.

On the 15th of May will be published, price 7s 6d., Part 29 of

On the 15th of May will be published, price 7s 6d., Part 29 of THE ARCHEOLOGICAL JOURNAL. Forming the commencement of the Eighth Volume,. Published under the Direction of the Central Committee of the Contents:—I. On the Study of Archeology. A Discourse read at the Oxford Meeting. By Charles Newton, M.A.—II. Collections illustrative of Roman Britain. Roman Villa at Hadstock, Essex, excavated by the Hon. R. C. Neville.—III. Notices of Ornaments connected with the Worship of the Dew Matres, lately purchased for the British Museum. By Edward Hawking, P.R.S.—IV. Unpublished Notices relating to the Times of Edward I. ByT. Hudson Turner.—V. On certain Mediaval Enamels. By Augustus W. Franka, B.A.—VI. Remarks on Seals, with suggestions for their classification. By W. S. W.—VII. Note on various Examples of Mediaval Seals.

on various Examples of Medieval Seals.

ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS.—Extracts from the Bursar's Accounts, Winchester College, and inventory of the Armory of Winchester College. Proceedings at the Meetings of the Institute in January and February.—Notices of Archaeological Publications.—
Archaeological Intelligence. Miscellaneous Notices.
The First Five Volumes may be had of Parker, London and Oxford, and Volumes Six and Seven of the Publishers or of any ford, and Volumes Six and Seven of the Publishers or Bookseller. London: Bradbury and Evans, 11, Bouverie-street.

SIR FRANCIS PALGRAVE'S NEW WORK.
This day, the First Volume, octavo, 21s., of the HISTORY of NORMANDY and of ENGLAND.
By Sir Francis Palor.

By Sir Francis Palgrave, K.H.
CONTENTS:—The General Relations of Mediaval Europe; the Carlovingian Empire; and the Danish Expeditions in the Gauls, until the Establishment of Rollo.

London: John W. Parker and Son, West Strand

Condon: John W. Parker and Son, west Strand.

O M E T H I N G for N O T H I N G.

The LOOKER-ON, of SATURDAY, May 10 and 17, price 2d., weekly, will give a grand Pictorial Supplement, gratis, Illustrating the chief objects of interest in the Great Exhibition; also, an elaborate critical notice of the pi: tures in the Royal Academy and other galleries now open. The LOOKER-ON is the most interesting jpublication of the day: it contains each week a variety of entertaining articles, vin., The Gowsman of All Souls, a legend of Oxford, continued; an essay on a popular subject; Skotches of Men, Manners, and Things; an original Tale complete. Notes and Queries, the Chit Chat of the Parisian World, Review of New Books and Music, and the Gossip of the Literary, Artistic, Musical and Scientific World, with as much other matter as can be compressed into sixteen pages of readable letter-press.

liter-press.

London: A. Hall, Virtue, and Co., and all Booksellers and Newsvendors.

Newsvenday. Maj. virtue, and co., and an Boossellers and Newsvenday. May 17, 1851, will be published in Weekly Nos., Demy 8vo., Twelve Pages, 1d., and in Monthly Parts, 6d.,

TALES OF ALL NATIONS:
FORMING ALL NATIONS:
FORMING ALL NATIONS:
FORMING ALL NATIONS:
FORMING ALL NATIONS:
The love of Romance and the desire to be acquainted with the deeds of other nations and other times, the interest with which we hear of the habits and customs, the thoughts and opinions of those who can only be known to us through the medium of others, are among the chief reasons of the popularity of Tales and Personal Narratives. The glowing regions of pure fiction pall upon the taste. Unsupported by probability, the most poetic flights of fancy become insipid while Tales which are the results of travel and founded on realities will never cease to attract while there is a thought to be expressed, or any place or custom to be described. The period when
ALL THE NATIONS OF THE EARTH are about to find a temporary home amongst us, appears peculiarly the time to commence the "Tales of all Nations," in the pages of which will be described the rise and progress, the homes and habits, the thoughts and sentiments, the domestic life and social conditions of our interesting visitors.

Nor will the interest of these tales be confined to this period. Containing tales of ancient as well as modern times, of ages glowing with chivality and romance, as well as treating of the more sombre realities of the present, they will exhibit the manners and customs of people in every era of the world, and form a FERMANENT LIBRARY OF ILLUSTBATIVE ROMANCE.

PERMANENT LIBRARY OF ILLUSTRATIVE ROMANCE. ERMANEAT LIBRARY OF ILLUSTRATIVE ROMA
Each tale will be completed in from two, to three on numbers. The thrilling interest of the whole will be thu entrated, while the most striking and interesting points
ILLUSTRATED BY SPIRITED ENGRAVINGS.
London: E. Appleyard, 86, Farringdon-street; an ooksellers.
Orders should be given immediately.

Just published, in 8vo., cloth lettered, 3s.; post free, 3s. 6d.,

NERVOUS AFFECTIONS; being a extensive experience in the treatment of those diseases; with som remarks on the Use and Abuse of Hydropathy. By Richara, DAWSON, M.D., Extra Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians, Loadon; Member of the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

London : Aylott and Jones, 8, Paternoster-row.

MUSIC BY WILLIAM THOROLD WOOD. MUSIC BY WILLIAM THOROLD WOOD.

THE PEOPLE'S ANTHEM. Poetry by EBBNEER ELLOTT. Second Thousand. Price is.

"We are glad to see that these fine stanzas of the Corn-law Rhymer have at last found fitting musical utterance. The composer is not unworthy of the poet."—Tail's Mag., May, 1850.

"FREEDOM, ARISE!" A Prayer for the worfal of Russo-Austrian Tyranny. Quartet and Chorus, with noforte Accompaniment. Price 4s.

"ALL HAIL THE DAY WHEN NATIONS MEET!" A Song for the Great Exhibition. Poetry by CHARLOTTE YOUNG. Price 2s.
London: J. Shepherd, 98, Newgate-street; and to be had, by order, of all Music-sellers in the Kingdom.

Shortly will be published, price One Guinea; Subscribers 16s.,

ANIEL; an Oratorio, by GEORGE LAKE.

The sixth chapter of Daniel forms the subject of this Oratorio, which will be produced at Exeter-hall early in June. Subscribers' names received at Addison's, 210, Regent-street.

METROPOLITAN and PROVINCIAL JOINT-STOCK BREWERY COMPANY. (Registered Provisionally pursuant to 7 and 8 Vis., cap. 116.)
The Directors of this Company are proceeding with an ALLOTMENT of SHARES.

ALLOTMENT of SHARES.

Prospectuses and every information may be obtained at the Temporary Offices, Eldon-chambers, Devereux-court, Temple.

CHARLES HENRY EDMANDS, See.

METROPOLITAN COUNTIES and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 27, Begun. street, Waterloo-place, London. DIRECTORS.

VC

" No

tion Lesse self b

Hun

on a must lobbie

one re

On t

partie motion

suppo Grey, and I for no Charte the s The I object of no opinion keep s port of legisla anythin reason the " a former his opin The Eccles the p squab! Irish r dent, a higher shuffle ing to then a Lad lieve, in Mr. Bill";

Samuel Driver, Esq.
John Griffith Frith, Esq.
Henry Peter Fuller, Esq.
John Pals Griffin, Esq.
Eqt. Hon. G. F. Hotham, R.N.
Lifle Assurances, Annuities, and Endowments. Thre-fourth of profits divided amongst the assured.—Prospectuses, pox fre, on application.

F. FERGUSON CAMBOUX, Manager.

TRAFALGAR LIFE ASSURANCE

ASSOCIATION.
OFFICES: 40, PALL-MALL, LONDON.

This Association has been established for the purpose of mixing ANNUITIES TO THE SHARE AND POLICY. HOLDERS, in the event of pecuniary misfortune, incapacity, as old age; which are not liable to forfeiture in cases of Bankruptay, Inaclvency, or failure of any description—and also SECURING EDUCATION, APPRENTICESHIP FEES, OR ENDOWMENTS TO THEIR CHILDREN.

Detailed Prospectuses, containing the names and addresses the shareholders, rates of premium, an explanation of the years now originated, together with useful information and staining respecting Life Assurance, may be had on application at the company of the contract of offices.

Combination Policies, payable in the event of casualties of any kind totally disabling the Assured, or death, are issued a moderate rates. This important addition to the principle of Assurance deserves the serious attention of persons in all positions.

Of life.

Immediate and deferred Annuities are granted.

All policies indisputable, whereby the power on the parter is office in resisting a claim under any circumstance whater is office in reasons a commence of the securities in consection with Life Assurance.

Parties desirous of becoming Agents or Medical Reference requested to communicate with the Secretary.

By order of the Board,

Resident Manager and Secretary.

PROFESSION AL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

Admitting, on equal terms, persons of every class and deprets all its benefits and advantages.

Capital—Two Hundred and Pitty Thousand Poess.

Chairman—Major Henny Syones, Ll.B.
Deputy Chairman—James Andrew Durliam, Es,
With upwards of Fourteen Hundred Shareholders.

There are two important clauses in the Deed of Settlement, by which the Directors have power to appropriate ONE-TENTE of the entire profits of the Company—

1st.—For the relief of aged and distressed parties assured for life, who have paid five years' premiums, their wisons as orphans.

2nd.—For the relief of aged and distressed original propriets, assured or not, their widows and orphans, together wis 5 per cent. Per annum on the capital originally immed by thein.

All policies indisputable and free of stamp duty.

Rates of premium extremely moderate.

No estra charge for going to or residing at (in time of peak australasin—Bermuda—Madeira—Cape of Good Hope—mit & British North American Colonies.

Medical men in all cases remunerated for their report.

Assurances granted against paralysis, blindness, accident, is sanity, and every other affliction, bodily and mental, at notemartes.

A liberal commission allowed to agents.

A liberal commission allowed to agents. A liberal commission allowed to agents.

Annual premium for assuring £100, namely:—

Age=20 £1 10 9 Age=40 £2 13 5

30 £1 19 6 50 £3 18 5

Prospectuses, with tables and fullest information, may be a the offices of the Company, or any of their agents.

Applications for agencies requested.

EDWARD BAYLIS, Resident Manager and Actuary Offices, 76, Cheapside, London.

GREAT EXHIBITION CENTRAL AVENUE: an illustrated Priced-List of Charch Funiture contributed by GILBERT J. FIRNCH, Bolton, Lancashire. Transited free on application.

Parcels delivered in London daily.

ONDON CO-OPERATIVE STORE ONDON CO-OPERATIVE STOKE,
In connection with the Society for Promoting Working Men's Association, 76, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-aquare.
The London Central Coöperative Agency has now complete its arrangements for transacting the wholesale business of its various coöperative stores.
The books of the agency will be open at all times for the spection of its customers, and thus the best guarantes will be furnished for honest dealing.
Original packages will be sent whenever the order will simil of it, so that the first cost of the goods may be ascertained by inspecting the invoices.
All goods are purchased at the first markets for readymone/
Address, Lloyd Jones, Manager, 76, Charlotte-street, Fitmysquare.

REMOVAL OF THE LEADER OFFICES THE Publishing and Editorial Offices of the "LEADER" are now removed from 265, Strand, and 8, rt, Fleet-street, to 10, WELLINGTON-STREET, STRAND.

at that place the Leader will henceforward be published. It requested that all Advertisements and Communications to Editor or Publisher may be addressed, "10, Wellington-in Strand."

ondon: Printed by ROBERT PALMER (of No. 3, Chepstor-terrace, nice Parsh of Kensington, Middlesex), at the Office of Robert Palmer
Joseph Clayton, No. 10, Crane-court, Fleet-street, in the Tong Dunstan-in-the-West, in the City of London; and published by Joseph Clayton, Jun. of and at the Publishing-office, No. 230, Junea, the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the City of Westminster,—Sarenst May 10, 1881.